Roving Mobs Hit Belfast

BELFAST (CP)—Protestant mobs armed with fire bombs burned and looted Roman Catholic bars today in scattered areas of Belfast unprotected by British troops. But soldiers separated the warring factions in the riot-torn capital's major trouble spots.

Occasional sniper fire was heard this morning in the predominantly Roman Catholic Falls Road area, but by noon public transportation was reported operating normally and housewives were going to market.

Spurts of sniper and machine-gun fire had rattled through the capital after dawn and gangs roamed glass-strewn streets looting whatever remained in the gutted stores after the second night of vicious street fighting.

Additional British troops were being flown in to strengthen an estimated 1,600 already here as the violence continued. Police said three persons were killed and 42 wounded in the fourth straight night of sectarian battles in Northern Irish cities.

Since Tuesday, eight persons have been killed and more than 700 injured in the state's worst civil disorders since the Irish Civil War of 1920-1922.

RAID R.C. BARS

Police said Protestant gangs attacked Roman Catholic-owned bars in three sections of Belfast. They gave the owners 15 minutes to get out, then threw milk bottles filled with gasoline, detergent and sugar inside the buildings. The mixture burns like napalm.

Off to Ulster Is Cry of IRA

By DEREK MARLOWE
The Washington Post

DUBLIN — Eire's 2,000-strong outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA) openly called Friday night for volunteers, arms, transport and money in Dublin to cross the border into Northern Ireland and fight at the side of Catholics behind the barricades.

The call followed a two-hour meeting of the 12 commandants of the organization's executive committee in Dublin.

Later Friday night in the heart of Dublin, outside the historic post office in O'Connell Street where 50 years ago men of the 1916 uprising fought British troops, IRA men reaffirmed their appeal to a mass meeting called by Sinn Fein, the organization's political arm.

The IRA move followed an earlier decision by Prime Minister Jack Lynch, to mobolize 2,000 first line reserves of the Eire army.

There is some anxiety about the government's deployment of troops to the border and the setting up of field hospitals for Catholics injured in the rioting in Ulster who may now want to get hospital treatment there for fear of alleged retaliation by the Protestant-dominated police, the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

Some observers here believe the troops facing the border—especially at Londonderry—have done nothing except inflame Protestant feeling and encourage further violence from Catholics on the other side, who were still hurling gasoline bombs in Belfast Friday night.

Informed sources here say Prime Minister Lynch, although as anxious as most Irishmen in the republic to see their country reunited, has been pressured into making his demands by the hard line hawks in his cabinet.

These ministers, enough to cause a serious split, see the present situation as the beginning of Eire's real chance to end the "unfinished business" of 1916.

QUEBEC WINS CHAMPIONSHIP

Valleyfield's Little Leaguers took the Canadian championship for Quebec today with a 4-1 victory over British Columbia's Vancouver Collingwood team.

The team came on strong in the top of the fourth in Saanich's Hampton Park (see story Page 21) to earn a ticket to Williamsport, Pa., and the Little League World Series Aug. 23.

Firebombs Found In Montreal Store

MONTREAL (CP) — Police early today reported the discovery of four incendiary devices in Eaton's downtown department store and the explosion of a bomb at the headquarters of the Confederation of National Trade Unions.

The incendiary devices, made of cloth soaked in a chemical, were found hidden in merchandise on two floors of the store during a Friday-night search.

Police said a store security guard suffered minor facial burns and smoke inhalation when one of the objects ignited.

A police spokesman said the bombs were designed to burst into flame when the chemical treatment evaporated or when water was poured onto them.

The security guard was injured when he immersed one of the objects in water after finding it hidden between the cushions of a sofa.

The spokesman said other such devices were found hidden in the pocket of coats on display racks.

Meanwhile, an explosive device went off at St. Denis St. headquarters of the CNTU, the Quebec-based labor federation.

There were no injuries.

Wilson Hurries Home

LONDON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Wilson will cut short his vacation and fly to London Monday for crisis talks with Northern Ireland's Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark.

Edmonton Strike

EDMONTON (CP) — Buses were idle and drivers manned picket lines for the second day today of the Alberta capital's first transportation strike in 50 years. Union and city officials met briefly late Friday but there were no discussions on a contract dispute which has left about 100,000 daily bus passengers to find alternate means of transportation in the metropolitan centre of 440,000 persons, seventh largest in Canada.

Pesticide Use Cut By Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reacting to public pressure, the United States agriculture department announced Friday a substantial curtailment in government use of such long-lived pesticides as DDT, dieldrin and heptachlor.

The department announced that from now on it will use less-persistent chemicals such as chlordane wherever possible in federal-state insect-control programs.

A department spokesman said widespread public concern over pesticide use prompted the department to suspend control program operations so they could be studied more fully.

Hurricane Flags Fly in Florida

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane warning flags flew in north western Florida today as Camille, the worst storm to threaten that Gulf of Mexico coastal area in more than half a century roared in with winds of 115 miles an hour.

Pushing ahead tides of five to 10 feet, Camille was described by forecasters as the most dangerous storm to head for that white sandy coast since a devastating blow in 1915, in an era when hurricanes had no names.

Hurricane force winds howled over an 80-mile-wide area around the hurricane's eye, gales lashed a 300-mile-wide expanse, and conditions favored further increase in intensity, forecasters said.

Gale warnings were raised at noon EDT from Pensacola, Fla., to Cedar Key, well down on the Florida peninsula.

As Camille spun toward a landfall, tropical storm Debbie grew to hurricane force in the Atlantic 1,200 miles east-southeast of San Juan, Puerto Rico. Debbie's winds were up to 80 miles an hour and increasing.

The north-northwest track Camille had followed since she hit western Cuba with a fierce one-two punch of wind and rain earlier had aimed her toward a point where the coasts of Florida, Alabama and Mississippi converge on the Gulf of Mexico shore.

Slowly rebuilding fury lost in the overnight crossing of Cuba, Camille chased small craft into port the length of the Florida west coast and all the way around the Gulf to Grand Isle, La.

Camille's top winds were knocked down from 115 to 100 miles an hour as she lashed across the rich tobacco croplands of western Cuba, sending hundreds of persons fleeing to high ground in that flood-vulnerable area.

Havana radio was silent today on the damage wrought by the storm as rains up to 10 inches sent floodwaters pouring down the mountainsides.

Ruling Party Rift Splits India Vote

NEW DELHI (AP) — Attempts to heal the rift in India's governing Congress party failed early today, hours before presidential electors were to choose a new chief of state.

The president of the party accused Prime Minister Indira Gandhi of siding with the Communists to support independent candidate V. V. Giri against the official party nominee, Sanjiva Reddy.

In a letter to Mrs. Gandhi, Siddhavanahalli Nijalingappa, Congress party president, rejected her demand that party members be allowed to vote for whomever they please.

"Your demand for a free vote is in fact a demand for the right to vote for Mr. V. V. Giri, a candidate nominated by the Communists and Communalists," he said.

"History does not record of an instance where a prime minister after proposing a party's candidate, not only works against him but proclaims her support for the candidate of the opposition."

ENTERED RACE LATER

Mrs. Gandhi has made no official endorsement of a candidate but many of her supporters are working for the election of Giri, who resigned as vice-president last month and announced his candidacy after a party committee selected Reddy as its nominee for president.

Reddy, a former Speaker of the lower house of Parliament, is a long-time political foe of Mrs. Gandhi with strong support from right-wing elements in the party.

The outcome of the election will not be known until Wednesday when the 4,137 votes from members of 17 state legislatures and Parliament are delivered to New Delhi for counting.

A victory for Reddy would give right-wing Congress party leaders the leverage they need to oust Mrs. Gandhi, although they have denied that this is their intention.

A defeat for Reddy would give Mrs. Gandhi strong support to continue in office, perhaps in a coalition with left-wing parties that have supported Giri.

Whoever wins the five-year term will become India's fourth president. He will succeed Dr. Zakir Husain who died in May after serving less than two years of his term.

Bennett, Berger Cross In Crucial Kootenay

By JOHN MIKA
Times Reporter

CRANBROOK — The paths of Premier Bennett and NDP leader Tom Berger crisscrossed today here in the heart of the Kootenay riding, emphasizing its pivotal position in the election campaign.

This may be a riding which decides whether British Columbia has a minority government when voters go to the polls in another 10 days.

Premier Bennett led a Sam Steele Days parade climaxing annual week-long celebrations before noon and Berger whistled in on his heels for an afternoon visit to this valley city.

Both party leaders obviously consider their visits crucial to their campaigns.

It was Bennett's third appearance in two days in a riding most feel the Socreds must take away from the incumbent NDP in order to hang on as government after Aug. 27.

Bennett spoke at Fernie in the southern end of the riding Friday night after campaigning at Kimberley in the north for Socred candidate Harry Broadhurst.

NDP HOPES

Berger also is hitting the riding three times this weekend to help 17-year veteran MLA Leo Nimsick hold the seat.

NDP hopes of forming at least a minority government could be shattered if the premier's strategy of taking this and three other NDP seats succeeds.

The other three are Nanaimo, New Westminster and Revelstoke-Slocan.

Berger will make a major speech in Fernie tonight after a whirlwind tour of Cranbrook and will be the main feature of a mass NDP picnic Sunday.

Nimsick won the riding by only 535 votes in 1966 when Cranbrook and Fernie were amalgamated by redistribution.

Pollution is the chief issue throughout the riding but the Kaiser coal strip-mining operation is the key to political arguments in Fernie.

The Socreds hope to take the Fernie polls with the contention that Berger's own words indicate he would shut down the development.

EYE NEW VOTE

The Liberals, traditionally a poor third outside the Fernie area, claim their well-known candidate, successful logger Henry Nelson, will expand the party's trdtitional base in Fernie by cutting deep into Socred votes and taking the cream of the 4,600 names added by enumeration to the voters list which now stands at about 17,000.

Campbell Safe in Comox . . . But Barely

COOKIE CHOWN

By JIM HUME
Times Reporter

COURTENAY — Comox looks like a safe seat for Minister of Municipal Affairs Dan Campbell.

But only just.

It's true that he's held the Courtenay-Campbell River riding since 1956 — but never by a large enough margin to permit him to relax in election campaigns.

And it's also true that he would never have made it that first time, 13 years ago, had not Bill Moore, then a stalwart in the CCF and MLA for the area, resigned his seat to clear the way for change.

Courtenay and Campbell River were always socialist strongholds.

They still are. But the people are also realists and they say Dan Campbell has done a good job for his constituents.

Since 1956 they've voted for the man, and the probability is that they'll vote for the man again Aug. 27.

Perky "Instant Dan" has three things going for him this time around. His record, a weak NDP candidate providing his main opposition, and a delightfully refreshing, 33-year-old but relatively unknown brunette providing a shaky outlet for the Liberal vote.

If the opposition was all he had to face, Campbell would make it in a breeze. But it isn't.

Since 1966, when Campbell slid home 1,147 votes ahead of the NDP, close to 8,000 names have been added to the riding voter's list.

Who those people are and what their politics are none of the three parties seeking the seat know. They admit that. And they all know that 8,000 uncommitted votes is more than enough to swing a Comox election.

In 1966 there were 16,950 voters on the list. This year there are 24,578 with the bulk of the new voters living either in the Courtenay-Comox area or near Campbell River.

In 1966 with around 10,111 votes cast Campbell's majority was comfortable but not unassailable. The Liberals, running an unknown late starter in that one, pulled 1,200 votes.

This year with Shanghai-born Henrietta "Cookie" Chown flashing her sparkling smile and displaying her sharp mind they expect to do better.

But at whose expense?

Social Credit supporters say Cookie — she prefers her nickname to Henrietta— will reduce the NDP vote. The NDP say she'll trim the Campbell vote.

And Cookie's campaign manager, husband Bob, says he doesn't care where the votes come from "as long as we do better than ever before."

He won't admit that Campbell will make it back to Victoria later this month. Neither will he admit that for all her charm and intelligence his wife doesn't stand a chance against an established cabinet minister and the NDP juggernaut.

The socialist machine, as in several centres on the Island, is being masterminded by an out-of-town expert. The lone committee worker in standard bearer Harry 'Harris' headquarters

Party Leaders Differ On Use of Resources

Premier W. A. C. Bennett got a polite reception in Fernie Friday, New Democratic Party Leader Tom Berger rapped the government's giveaway of natural resources and Liberal Leader Pat McGeer said there would be no special favors from a Liberal government, as campaigning heated up 11 days before the election Aug. 27.

Mr. Bennett, during a 50-minute speech to 150 people in which he reviewed his government's record, repeatedly referred to the development of vast coal markets in Japan that will spur development of coal deposits in the East Kootenay area.

Other resource development policies showed that only Social Credit has the vision, courage and boldness to keep the economy expanding, he said.

The Kaiser Resources Ltd. $600,000,000 10-year contract to ship coal to Japan "is only the beginning," the premier said. "In the great development period that lies ahead, the East Kootenay needs a government member to interpret the East Kootenay to the government and to make the points clear about development."

225 AT RALLY

Mr. Berger told 225 persons at a rally in Revelstoke that Manitoba's newly-elected NDP government is an example of how a province can bring in foreign investment without signing away its natural resources.

He cited the example of the U.S. - owned Churchill Forest Products Co., which agreed to revisions in a contract with the Manitoba government providing that $4,000,000 worth of logs would be processed in Manitoba and not the U.S.

Mr. Berger lashed the B.C. government for exporting natural resources, and as a result, jobs, without caring for the employment, education and health needs of the province's citizens.

At New Westminster, Dr. McGeer rebuked Premier Bennett anew for his exaggerations of the issues in the campaign. "His exaggerations have reached a point where there's a huge credibility under pressure.

"This campaign is strange—it's all negative, all scare tactics. But it isn't going over. The major issue for B.C. remains: old politics versus a new decent system."

He promised, if elected, that he will never ask for votes because of fear of the NDP or any other group. He also promised that a Liberal government would grant no special favors to big business, but would be answerable only to the people.

GOOD RECEPTION

Earlier, at a luncheon in suburban Pitt Meadows, Dr. McGeer said his reception in the campaign so far has been beyond his wildest dreams and repeated his prediction Liberals would win 20 seats.

However, he criticized Vancouver-area Liberal associations for an attitude of defeat. "I'm not satisfied with the way our city organizations have responded. They have yet to give their all. In the interior and the north, they're working like hell, but they can't carry the whole load."

Dr. McGeer also talked with some of the 550 striking oil workers outside Gulf Oil's Burnaby marketing terminal. He promised them a Liberal government would deal with industrial disputes fairly. He asked for, and received, several suggestions for preventing strikes.

Oil workers told him to outlaw the use of scab, or non-union, labor during strikes and to repeal the Social Credit government's labor legislation.

At Kamloops, Lands and Forests Minister Ray Williston was heckled and picketed when he outlined pollution control measures to a crowd of 200. "No other pulp mills in Canada have to meet the pollution specifications they have to meet here in B.C.," Mr. Williston said.

HECKLER SHOUTS

"Is this government going to enforce this?" a heckler shouted.

"They are enforced right here in Kamloops," Mr. Williston replied.

"You have the most rigid control of effluent on the North American continent right here in Kamloops. It has won awards all over North America."

"But it isn't enforced," another heckler yelled.

Earlier in the day, pickets appeared outside a restaurant where Mr. Williston was addressing a luncheon. The signs urged the minister to keep waterways pure.

NDP Vancouver East candidate Alex Macdonald said huge profits are being made from the sale and re - sale of property near proposed highway routes in B.C. that should be going into the public treasury instead of the private developer's pocket.

"At the famous Del Cielo intersection above Kamloops, where the Merritt road and the Trans-Canada join, and where the Kamloops bypass is coming in, there will be no less than five gas stations.

"The developers got 289 acres around this area for $200,000 and they now have sold less than four acres of this land for $240,000, with 285 acres, much of it on the highway and commercially - zoned, still to be sold," he told a public meeting in Vancouver.

PLAN FOR CITY

His running-mate in the dual riding, Bob Williams, told a news conference in the restored Gastown area of Vancouver that an NDP government would establish a department of metropolitan affairs in Greater Vancouver with a cabinet minister responsible for planning co-ordinated municipal programs and other cost-sharing schemes.

Meanwhile, Vancouver Centre NDP candidates Bill Deverell and Emery Barnes said an NDP government would join city business groups in financing a Chinese cultural and community centre.

Mr. Barnes also suggested a farmers' market in the Gastown area for sale of fresh produce directly to the public. And NDP government would spend $500,000 to build the market but it could be self-supporting from licence fees collected for stalls.

John de Wolf, provincial leader of the Progressive Conservative party and the only Tory running in the Aug. 27 election, told Indians at Musqueam reserve in Vancouver they should insist on the right to be consulted and should state their legitimate demands to "the white man's government."

He said Indians should ask for "full citizenship, with all the rights and benefits of citizenship, no matter what the present status of the Indian or where he lives.

"These protections must include the right to ownership, without expropriation, alienation or encroachment. And for at least the next 25 years—if not forever — all Indian lands must stay in Indian hands."

Hurry-Up Trip Home For Clergy

Bishop John Anderson, four of his clergy and four Anglican laymen in Victoria will have to hurry to get to vote in the Aug. 27 provincial election.

They leave Saturday to attend the general synod of the Anglican Church of Canada at Sudbury, Ont.

"We shall have to scramble like mad to be back here before the polls close," Arnold Edmonds, one of the lay delegates, said there today.

"And we shall, of course, be in Sudbury on the advance polling days next week."

Edmonds phoned the B.C. government to ask if a special advance poll could be laid on for the Anglican delegates.

The government said it couldn't.

"As good churchmen, we are duty-bound to vote," Edmunds said, "so we'll have to book an early plane back on the 27th."

Blaiberg Slightly Improved

CAPE TOWN (Reuters) — Dr. Philip Blaiberg, the world's longest-surviving heart transplant patient, has improved slightly since his re-admission to Groote Schuur Hospital here two days ago, a hospital bulletin said today.

It said that the 60-year-old former dentist is "more comfortable" and slept better Friday night.

Dr. Blaiberg is being treated for the fourth relapse he has suffered since his heart transplant 19 months ago.

Hospital authorities have not disclosed details, but medical sources Friday described his ailment as serious.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

A Pacific weather system brought rain and southeasterly gales to the north coast today. Elsewhere it will continue sunny under the influence of a ridge of high pressure.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

When I was a youngster in southern Wisconsin I thought of "dog days" as those late weeks in August when scum appeared on the surface of our lake. I didn't like to swim through the scum, even though I was told that it wasn't filth and that it came from the plants growing on the bottom of the lake.

Dog days always come at the sultry end of the summer, a time of stagnation and inactivity in nature. You really don't have the energy during dog days that you had in May and that you will have in October.

Maybe dog days got its name because this is the time of the year when rabies is more prevalent among dogs; although widespread vaccination by veterinarians has cut down that danger to almost nothing.

. . . BELFAST

John Gallagher and said he was an emigrant to Canada who was killed while on vacation to his native Northern Ireland. Police said later he was an Irish citizen.

A total of 310 police and civilians have been injured—66 with gunshot wounds—in the religion-sparked strife, a government information spokesman said.

Troops of the 2nd Battalion Queen's Regiment and the 1st Battalion Royal Regiment of Wales, ordered into Belfast Friday evening, strung barbed wire in the streets and set up machine-gun posts to separate the predominantly-Roman Catholic Falls Road and David Street from the Protestant sections.

The army reported that the areas were calm by 3 a.m., but in other parts of the city police armored cars rumbled along streets firing at mobs of arsonists and looters. At 4 a.m., just as police headquarters announced that "the town now is peaceful," a 48-year-old man was killed by gunfire.

At least seven buildings were still smouldering at dawn, and occasional gunshots were heard in various parts of the city.

The road area was the scene Thursday night of some of the bloodiest fighting between Protestants and Roman Catholics.

During the night police exchanged fire with citizens shooting from behind barricades constructed of overturned cars and buses. Rival gangs threw gasoline bombs at one another and snipers duelled on rooftops, silhouetted by crackling flames from homes, stores and factories.

. . . CAMPBELL

Friday declined to give the expert's name.

Harris, a local school teacher, as is Mr. Chown, is also a member of Courtenay city council.

As an alderman he's made a name for himself in the central community — but it isn't a name the citizens rejoice in hearing. And outside Courtenay he's another unknown.

Said one local citizen: "The NDP could have whipped Campbell this time had they run a strong candidate. Harris thinks he's strong, but he isn't.

"It's sad really. Everybody tends to think that this riding is traditionally Social Credit. It isn't. Basically it's a maverick constituency leaning towards the NDP. But each election they take a run at Campbell with a weak candidate."

"I think Campbell will make it on his name. I think the NDP missed their chance when they nominated Harris. And I think, sharp though Cookie Chown is, this is a man's riding.

"I can't see the boys in the logging camps and fishing camps voting for a woman, however pretty she may be."

That isn't just one man's opinion. It was the general thought expressed during this reporter's main street survey. The people talked to gave the nod to Campbell — but with obvious reluctance.

And that in itself could spell trouble for the man who took the seat in 1956 with a 65-vote majority and has only been able to build it to a 1,000 majority after years in the cabinet.

Campbell's workers — and the workers for other parties — say there are two keys to success in the Comox riding.

The winner has to take Courtenay and he has to take Campbell River and the north.

On that basis, if he can repeat the success of 1966, Campbell is a cinch.

He swept Courtenay, won Campbell River for the first time in his political life, and took most of the small communities to the north.

Although his Campbell River victory was slight, it was probably his greatest triumph. A solid union town prior to '66 the River gave Campbell 999 votes compared with the 795 it tossed the NDP.

In fact in 1966 Campbell lost only half-a-dozen minor polls in the entire riding.

Can he pull a repeat later this month?

Local pundits say he can and forecast that only Cumberland — NDP forever — will stay with Harris.

Forestry Satellite Planned

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada hopes to send aloft a satellite by 1972 to provide a running picture of forests, Jack Davis, federal fisheries and forestry minister, said Friday night.

He told the annual Festival of Forestry that the satellite would provide an inventory of forest wealth, give instant information on fires and would take pictures fine enough to detect diseased trees and pest infestation.

"Man is capable now," he said, "of taking photographs from 100 miles in space that can show in detail individual trees."

He said the satellite would either be in a fixed position 100 miles up or be a 90-minute orbit around the earth.

City Honors Honeymooners From Oregon

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Worthylake, both 24, of Portland, have already been shown some of Victoria's tourist attractions and will be treated to a weekend on the town by Jaycee hosts.

No Salmon In Russ Nets Davis Says

Aerial photographs show the Soviet fishing fleet off the west coast of Vancouver Island are not taking salmon, Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said in Vancouver Friday.

He ordered an intensive aerial and sea watch flying over the fleet himself a week ago. He said the Russians then appeared to be taking a "considerable amount of salmon."

He said he saw a mass of brownish-grey fish, probably hake, and some silvery fish which could have been salmon or Black Alaska cod.

"We are continuing our watch," he said Friday.

Davis also said more than 100,000 Chinook fingerlings were released into the Tsolum River which flows north from Courtenay, last Saturday. It was part of an experiment to determine if a self - sustaing Chinook population could be established in rivers which have not been populated by the fish in the past.

Protest Sign Thrust At PM Misses by Inches

TORONTO (CP) — This time, Prime Minister Trudeau barely blinked.

Abruptly confronted early Friday evening at a Liberal party picnic on Toronto's Centre Island by three men in business suits who thrust their protest signs within inches of his face, he just kept smiling.

Police and plainclothesmen leaped on the apparent attackers and brought one of the men down in a screaming heap as the prime minister and his party were calmly diverted to another path through the crowd.

He seemed to show no interest in the incident and proceeded to distribute handshakes and kisses among his eager supporters while the man beneath a pile of five police men shouted:

"Imperialists get out. Long live the people of Canada. Long live Quebec nationalists."

As police held down the man's head, pinned his arms and carried him to a nearby jeep, he went on:

TAKEN TO CELLS

"The Canadian people are rioting. We're going to hang him by the neck. Down with Richard Nixon. Down with Trudeau. Down with right-wingers. Down with U.S. imperialism."

A woman's spit trickled from his chin as he and his companions were taken to the cells of the Island police station.

Charged with causing a disturbance were Jeffrey Conway, 19, Rod Wilczak, 24, and Jonathan Pierce, 20, all of Toronto.

The incident did not detract from the enthusiastic welcome given Mr. Trudeau by the picnickers, but it followed by a week to the day the episode in Vancouver in which the prime minister appeared to reach past his security guard to poke at a yelling, long-haired demonstrator.

As a result, Richard Jesmer, 17, of Niagara Falls, Ont., swore an information accusing Mr. Trudeau of common assault. A hearing Friday in Vancouver was adjourned until next Tuesday by Justice of the Peace Donald Stewart at the request of the youth's lawyer.

At the Liberal picnic which followed the official opening by Mr. Trudeau of the Canadian National Exhibition, some observers at first thought the prime minister had been struck. The only indication he gave, however, that he had even noticed the incident came when he told reporters: "He didn't touch me."

City Firemen Have Busy Evening

City fire fighters were kept busy Friday from 7:35 p.m. to 9:45 p.m. putting out two grass fires, one car fire and answering three false alarms.

The grass fires, one near Johnson Street bridge, the other at Fort and Wharf, were believed set by an 11-year-old boy.

He was picked up by police on Wharf Street and recognized as the boy seen at the earlier grass fire on Johnson Street.

Police said he was cautioned and sent home.

Battlefield Lull Frustrates Logical U.S. Strategy

By MURREY MARDER

WASHINGTON (WP) — A short course in Asian Marxist logic has just been provided by the Vietnamese Communists for slow learners in the West.

The flareup on Communist attacks that pierced the battlefield "lull" in South Vietnam earlier this week shows that Communist strategy cannot be easily forced into the "either-or" choices that U.S. strategy seeks to impose on the enemy.

Applying western logic, many officials in the Nixon administration believed they could require their communist adversaries to choose one of two paths:

- To help get U.S. troops out of the war by a mutual withdrawal of American and North Vietnamese forces, by reducing the level of battle, or a combination of both.
- To face, as the alternative, a prolonged war, fought mainly by the South Vietnamese themselves, with U.S. participation in the war reduced to a level that American public opinion would rate as bearable. This is the concept of "Vietnamizing" the war.

The Nixon administration's hope was, and continues to be, that Communist strategists, faced with these choices, would choose the first course.

That is, North Vietnam and the Viet Cong would put a priority on getting American troops out of Vietnam, and therefore would do nothing to jeopardize the continuing exodus of American forces through staged withdrawals.

But the Nixon administration strategy has built into it, in Communist Vietnamese logic, what amounts to a lull-interrupter. This is the threat that if there is no mutual withdrawal of troops, a residue of U.S. forces will remain in South Vietnam indefinitely to help fight a prolonged war.

The Communist objective is not to get portions of the U.S. troops out of Vietnam. It is to get all of them out. But even more importantly, it is to get them all out in such haste that their departure leaves behind either the Communist-projected political structure for South Vietnam or chaotic instability that would permit the structure to be erected.

A batlefield "lull" therefore has advantages for the Communists if it creates the political demand for withdrawing all U.S. troops from South Vietnam. A "lull" for a short period of time has psychological advantages if it creates expectations and pressures for an early end of the war. But a lengthy, uninterrupted lull suggests an inert, passive, eroding poition in which allied strategy can work its will. That is the reason why it was interrupted early this week.

Impossible War Breeds Intrigue

By GEORGE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON (WP) — Saigon — on the most ordinary of days is full of extraordinary stories of intrigue — none of which can be dismissed completely.

Too many impossible things have happened in that impossible city during this impossible war.

Now there is a murder case involving eight Green Berets and dozens of informed sources in Saigon are explaining what really happened — in the deepest secrecy, of course.

In the absence of any official army explanation of the killing, these tales have received wide attention. They may be true, partly true or fabrications. Here are the major theories coming out of Saigon:

- Torture theory — Communists have obtained film of the Green Berets torturing prisoners. They showed these pictures when the exchange of prisoners issue came up at the Paris peace talks. How can you accuse us of mistreating American prisoners, the Communists asked, when you do this to our men?

In response, the United States decided to arrest the men shown in the pictures torturing prisoners — as well as the commander of all the Green Berets in South Vietnam.

- The wrong man theory — Vu Ngoc Nha was a North Vietnamese Catholic who worked as a South Vietnamese Special Forces Officer. He sent agents into North Vietnam on secret missions.

One of those agents, turned himself in as a Chieu Hoi — a communist who rallies to the government of South Vietnam. Under Green Beret questioning, the agent said his boss, Nha, had really sent him to North Vietnam to give information to Hanoi — not get it for Saigon.

The Green Berets brought Nha in and accused him of being a double agent. Nha died on their hands — perhaps under torture. The Central Intelligence Agency found out about the death; told the Green Berets they had fingered the wrong man. The rallier was the real traitor — not Nha.

The CIA complained to high army authorities and insisted that the responsible Green Berets be arrested on murder charges.

Also, Nha was supposedly a military aide to Father Joang Quynh when the latter led the Catholic anti-communist militia in North Vietnam from 1950 to 1953. Father Quynh denies this. He says he has known Nha for many years, however.

The U.S. Army has not released the name of the Vietnamese murdered near Nhatrang June 20. Some Saigon sources insist he is Vu Ngoc Nha.

- The CIA hex theory — Green Berets, in examing photos of North Vietnamese agents gathered together in Cambodia, recognized one of them as their own agent. The agent was brought in and questioned hard. He admitted he was a double agent — spying for both Hanoi and Saigon. What to do?

The CIA, according to Green Beret sources, passed the equivalent of an execution order by ordering the Special Forces men to "terminate with extreme prejudice" the relationship with the agent. The Green Berets did this — and fast. The CIA revoked its order a few days later. But it was too late. The alleged double agent was on the bottom of the ocean — weighted down Mafia style.

CIA leaders in Vietnam exploded, taking their complaints against the Green Beret execution right to Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, commander of all American troops in Vietnam.

A BLINDFOLDED VIETNAMESE PRISONER is taken for interrogation by U.S. troops. North Vietnam has claimed their soldiers are tortured during questioning, and showed film to substantiate the claim when the topic of prisoner exchange came up in Paris peace talks. — (AP Wirephoto)

Canada to Help

KUALA LUMPUR (Reuters) — Canada is to provide Malaysia with $5,250,000 Malaysian about $1,950,000 Canadian in grants and $4,500,000 Malaysian about $1,560,000 in loans in the fiscal year beginning next April for development projects. The first secretary of the Canadian high commission, Michael Durham, said Saturday the aid would enable severad projects to be developed, including a dam in Temengor, Perak state.

Unnamed 'Big Man' Ordered Kenya Minister to Be Killed

NAIROBI, Kenya (WP) — The man who killed Tom Mboya was following the orders of an unknown big man. The assassin, who boasted he would kill Mboya an hour before the murder, was so clumsy — or so sure of being protected — that he hid the murder weapon in his house, where police found it.

This is the portrait that emerged this week from the prosecution's painstaking efforts to show that Isaac Njenga Njoroge killed Mboya, one of Africa's most important young leaders who was Economics Minister of Kenya.

Njoroge's side has not yet been heard. The suspect has offered no defence or plea during the preliminary hearing, held to determine if there is cause for a full trial.

50 WITNESSES

The prosecution has called nearly 50 witnesses, and is expected to produce a dozen more by the hearing's end Monday. The sworn testimony, much of it corroborated by two more witnesses, makes this case for the prosecution:

A dozen witnesses testifed they saw a man of Njoroge's description running from the scene with a black briefcase. None, however, could identify the suspect in police lineups.

But Friday the prosecution called a hospital nurse who said she knew Njoroge well and had twice heard him say he was going to kill Mboya.

The last time was an hour before the murder, when Njoroge said he would kill the minister with three bullets. Mboya was shot twice. Witnesses report hearing three shots.

Njoroge was said to have been joined in both threats against Mboya by an acquaintance known as Lumumba. Police have not mentioned this man in the trial, but have previously acknowledged they questioned three men in the salying.

The week's testimony has disclosed other facts about Njoroge. He is prosperous enough to own a Simca automobile, and to be a director of an automobile company here. He has worked for the city council of Nairobi, as has his wife.

Njoroge, a slender short man, in his late 20's, was arrested July 9, four days after Mboya was shot down in a Nairobi street. Njoroge took police to his house for a search.

As one officer searched under a bed, the suspect said: ". . . Man, do not go against me very much. What do you want? If it is five or ten thousand, I'll give it to you."

FOUND GUN

The policeman found a .38-calibre pistol, the kind that killed Mboya at the suspect's house ballistics tests were made and the findings are expected to be revealed Monday).

Njoroge claimed he purchased the gun, wrapped in a handkerchief, from a stranger on July 6. Njoroge said he had never handled the gun.

The weapon was entirely clean of fingerprints — except for one on the inside of a shell chamber. This print, and one found inside Njoroge's otherwise print-free black briefcase, match the suspect's.

During the ride from the house to jail, Njoroge turned to one of the policemen, and asked, "Why pick me? Why don't you go and get some big man? We did what we are told." Njoroge refused to answer when asked who the big man was.

Hearing Aids On Trial
VICTORIA: In the past a great deal of criticism has been leveled against the hearing aid industry. This has been due primarily to high prices, poor service and the fact that a free trial period was practically non-existent. In many cases a person dissatisfied with the hearing aid was unable to obtain either satisfaction or refund.
This situation has now been corrected by a company manufacturing hearing aids in Victoria.
By dealing directly with the manufacturer a saving of fifty per cent is realized on a high quality hearing aid with two weeks free trial, thus eliminating cause for dissatisfaction.
Also available is after sales service by government certified technicians at Audiotronics Enterprises Ltd., 1326 Government St., 385-0911.

Fair Warning

PRIME MINISTER TRUDEAU has announced that the government will do what people from one end of Canada to the other have been demanding for years: he is going to cut down drastically on federal costs and spending. Since his statement last Wednesday night, of course, protests also have been heard from one end of Canada to the other. Labor protests against any reduction in the enormous public payroll, communities protest against a cut-back in federal building aid, other groups see doom in plans to reduce a few military bases, and there is general alarm over proposals to cut the costs of various public services.

Whether in employment, welfare programs, financial aid schemes or other items on the governmental shopping list, maintaining the status quo becomes a holy crusade immediately any savings are proposed. Retrenchment should be only in services and programs which do not affect us personally. This obviously is an untenable position. Individually and as a nation we now face an urgent problem that will demand the co-operation of everyone if we are to avoid a very serious increase in the effects of inflation.

Mr. Trudeau's figures gave the picture: in the last decade federal spending in dollar value has nearly doubled — from $6 billions a year to $11 billions. Spending on foreign affairs doubled, economic development tripled, health and welfare almost doubled, post-secondary education multiplied 16 times. Estimates indicate that without drastic efforts to control expenditures the next five years will see similar escalations: general government services will increase by one-half, foreign affairs will double, economic development will double again, health and welfare nearly double and Ottawa's share of post-graduate education aid would quadruple. The real crunch of these figures lies only partly in their rapid growth — the big impact is that while total expenditures would rise to $17.5 billions by 1975, national revenues would go up to only $15.75 billions. Within the next five years we could run up a cumulative deficit of nearly $8 billions. It would loom still larger in the depreciated dollar of the future.

The implications are obvious. Expenses must be cut. And it would be national folly to hamper the federal government in its efforts to do something concrete about the problem after all these years. Provincial and municipal governments, much as they may wish to get on with their particular projects, will have to accept a slow-down or elimination of at least some federal participation in spending. Construction which will promote further production, and that which caters to the problem of families in desperate need of housing, will receive priority.

Labor has been asked by the Prime Minister to keep the nation's inflationary danger in mind when negotiating wage contracts. One union official has replied that his policy will be full steam ahead regardless; his members should tell him that by such a tactic he is only destroying the gains that they may win — the July price index was 5 percentage points above the level of last year.

Mr. Trudeau says that "we are getting away from the old idea that there has to be a 'normal' annual increase in costs and numbers of people (in government jobs) in order to meet 'normal' annual increases in population and government service which means a 'normal' increase in taxes." He says improved management and more productivity will replace that concept. What he will try to do is curb the expenditure of "vast sums on welfare, education and other programs" where this leads only to escalating inflation which puts "hundreds of thousands of Canadians on a treadmill from which they could not escape."

Mr. Trudeau has put the problem bluntly—as few political leaders dare to do. As one of the most fortunate peoples in the world we now face a test of our national character: are we going to show a little intelligent restraint or are we going to go for broke? Either way, the results will not be long in showing.

Off the Deep End

MR. BENNETT HAS NOT IMproved his campaign position by his wild accusations against NDP Leader Berger. His ridiculous charge in Salmon Arm that Mr. Berger was responsible for organizing the shabby mob demonstration against Prime Minister Trudeau in Vancouver a week ago was unworthy of a man of Mr. Bennett's accomplishments. It served only to indicate that the Premier is becoming shrill and uncertain in his efforts to be re-elected.

A Social Credit candidate in Vancouver voiced a similarly foolish allegation. A government that was sure of its position with the voters, confident of the value of its past performance, would not resort to such nonsense in public.

On a similar plane was Mr. Bennett's claim that Mr. Berger instigated the recent bus stoppage imposed by striking oil workers. Surely the last thing Mr. Berger wants during the election campaign — regardless of what may come afterwards — is to rouse public resentment against organized labor with which he is so closely associated. The very thought of thousands of would-be bus passengers waiting angrily on street corners for buses that didn't come because of labor union action must destroy Mr. Berger's appetite. To charge him with responsibility, as Mr. Bennett did, is hardly likely to win a single new Social Credit vote. It is much more likely to cast doubts on Mr. Bennett's reasoning.

There are many reasons why Mr. Berger should not be entrusted with the administration of this province. But organizing obscenity shouters and banana-peel throwers for the Prime Minister's reception is not one of them. It becomes more evident that the Legislature needs a sizable core of Liberal members to give stability to the House. The desperation of an aging regime on one hand, and on the other the ambitions of a new leader whose main fighting has been done within his own party's ranks, clearly call for a centre balance which only the Liberals can provide.

Over the Bridge to Skye

BY 1974, ACCORDING TO PRESent indications, a suspension bridge may link the romantic island of Skye with the Scottish mainland. This would, it is believed, increase the volume of tourists going to Skye. They, in turn, would change the character of the island, pacing it to the visitor industry and altering the atmosphere. The remoteness of the Hebrides — one of the island's charms — would be less noticeable. What brought the tourists in the first instance could lose its appeal.

This is a familiar story particularly as it relates to places distant and difficult of access. On this continent we cherish the wilderness, wish more people could enjoy it, create means of access to that end — and lose the wilderness as the throngs move in.

Could Skye face the same future?

Against International Unions

As a citizen and taxpayer I am really disgusted with the present system of bargaining as employed by the big international unions. It is nothing but blackmail.

These people don't even care about their own pensioned former members. The meat cutters and the bakery men — where do they think the money is coming from? Possibly they think that management and the shareholder will dig down for them. They know, and so does everyone else, that for every penny gained the public will pay two pennies.

And — the international top brass will want more money from the Canadian public, so they will increase the dues.

And this stupid idea of picket lines. The bus drivers would not cross the picket lines, so they lose money — for what? Will the top brass of the oil workers do anything for our bus drivers?

Wake up Canadian workers. You have a Congress of Labor which can guide you in any situation, and out out the international. — The Observer.

'Our National Parks System . . . Is Not Adequate'

Jean Chretien, minister of Indian affairs and northern development, with responsibility for Canada's national parks, in excerpts printed below from a speech delivered at a recent park opening, sets out his thoughts on developments to come.

AS our country becomes more and more urbanized; as our transportation system becomes more advanced, more and more Canadians are searching for space for leisure, for places of unspoiled quiet.

And more and more, this quest is leading both Canadians and visitors from other countries to our national parks.

Today our national parks system measures approximately 29,400 square miles, and although this sum might sound impressive, it is not adequate. In 1930, 500,000 visitors came to the 14 national parks then in existence. By 1969, this figure had increased 22 times, 11 million visitors now coming to Canada's 19 national parks in a period of one year.

Supply and Demand

The problem, quite simply, is one of supply and demand. The plain fact is that the demand for the use of our national parks exceeds the total supply of parks in our system. While visitation has increased 22 times since 1930, total park acreage has increased by only 1,000 additional square miles. Only five new national parks have been added to the system, and only one since 1957.

Just as we must expand the present system of national parks, so we must diversify it. We must provide a system capable of serving different ends and meeting different needs. Parks containing shorelines, ocean beaches, scenic waterways, rivers and lakes should be established.

Smaller parks than those contained in our present system should be added. They should be located near large urban centres, and should preserve areas of historical significance, as well as areas of natural beauty.

It is clear that there is urgency to expand and diversify the present system of national parks before the costs of doing so become excessive, and before the encroachments of civilization destroy the possibilities for protecting our virgin wilderness.

We, as a government, are conscious of these needs, and I, as minister, intend to pursue these objectives with a sense of urgency.

Since 1963, significant progress has been made. The aggressiveness of my predecessor, Arthur Laing, in promoting the value of conservation has been a great stimulus to developing public awareness of the problem. The active interest in parks and conservation of colleagues such as Allan MacEachen has also been a great help.

But there is urgency and there is crisis. To meet the growing demands for conservation and recreation, 40 to 60 new national parks must be established by 1985. To reach this goal, two to three new parks should be acquired each year.

Prospective Development

I am hopeful that we can reach this target. We have recently acquired a section of outstanding beauty on the Forillon Peninsula of Quebec's Gaspe region, and it will be developed into that province's first national park. Negotiations are presently under way for the acquisition of additional land for new parks in Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, British Columbia, the Yukon, and the Northwest Territories, and we hope they will soon reach a successful conclusion.

We will continue to investigate new possibilities for additional parks, so that all parts of the country can share in the pride and the benefits of our national parks system.

In terms of strengthening the fabric of national unity, national parks play a great role. Our national parks are part of the original face of Canada, inviolable spots which provide sanctuaries for man as well as nature. But it is man who must extend and preserve them. This is the task that lies ahead.

Symptom of Crisis

New York Times

The defection in London of the leading Soviet writer, Anatoli V. Kuznetsov, is a symptom of the crisis now convulsing the Soviet cultural world. That crisis springs from the efforts of Moscow reactionaries, who enjoy powerful Kremlin support, to re-Stalinize Soviet intellectualism and to annul the last vestiges of freedom and heterodoxy still surviving from the Khrushchev era.

As a result of Mr. Kuznetsov's defection, the Kremlin has two alternatives. It can use his action as an excuse for further repression of Soviet liberals by denying them trips abroad, refusing to print their works, and perhaps even imprisoning some as "traitors" who contemplated doing what Mr. Kuznetsov did. The only result of this course would be to alienate still further the most creative elements in Soviet society and to increase internal pressure for change.

Alternatively a farsighted Kremlin leadership would see the Kuznetsov defection as a serious warning that a high price is being paid for the re-Stalinization of Soviet cultural life and that that price is too high.

No Soviet intellectual of comparable stature in Mr. Kuznetsov's generation has ever defected before. This is a generation that never knew the Czarist regime, but was born and raised entirely under Soviet rule, after Lenin's death in fact. This is the generation of the "new Soviet man". If present Kremlin policy is alienating some of the best minds and spirits of this generation, as the Kuznetsov defection implies, then present Kremlin policy raises great risks for the future political stability of the Soviet system itself.

On-Again-Off-Again Warfare in Southeast Asia

Frye

THE on-and-off character of the war in Vietnam is less puzzling when viewed in its broader context: as part of a long-term political-military struggle for south and southeast Asia. There are at least six guerilla conflicts smouldering or ablaze along a 2,000-mile stretch of China's southern frontier. Vietnam is only one. All of these pocket wars are on-again, off-again struggles, often improvised on a financial and ideological shoestring, and varying in intensity according to the capacities and inclinations of the people.

The one in Vietnam is by far the most highly publicized. It is also the oldest, Monday being the 24th anniversary of the outbreak of revolution against the French.

Family Resemblance

Others, however, are very long-standing, and many bear striking family resemblances.

India: Dissident Naga and other tribesmen, organized in an underground army of perhaps 6,000 men, began harassing the Indian army in the area of the China-India-Burma border between 1956 and 1964. A cease-fire did not stick; and since June, 1968, there has been intermittent further fighting.

At least 800 to 1,000 of the Nagas have been to China for training, indoctrination, and weapons. The struggle ties down six to eight Indian divisions, diverts manpower from other sectors of the China-India border, drains away desperately needed resources, and softens India for any future Chinese knife.

Burma: For 20 years (as of March, 1969) Burma has been in revolutionary turmoil, with tribesmen, "White Flag" (Chinese-oriented) Communists and "Red Flag" Communists struggling not merely with the government but with each other, and within their own organizations.

At least one band is using the Chinese province of Yunan as a sanctuary and base of operations. The terrorists have been weakened by purges and by governmental counter-insurgency, but they remain a threat.

Cambodia: North Vietnamese forces, in alliance with dissident Cambodians, have established control over a sanctuary in Cambodia on the border opposite Saigon and Tayninh. They have also seized and held an area embracing a supply route (the "Sihanouk Trail") across the north-eastern tip of Cambodia.

After long denying their presence, Prince Sihanouk has, since 1968, acknowledged the threat, denounced it, and even helped pinpoint useful targets for American bombers. He has resumed diplomatic relations with the United States and said he hopes the United States will not withdraw completely from Southeast Asia.

Laos: They have done much the same thing in Laos, where Prince Souvanna Phouma came to power in 1962 as a neutralist, but has been driven by Communist rebels into a virtual military alliance with the United States.

Here, too, as in Cambodia, indigenous Communists (the Pathet Lao) joined forces with North Vietnamese whose primary motive was to seize and secure supply routes for their troops in South Vietnam.

But operations in recent months have suggested that both the Pathet Lao and Hanoi may now seriously seek to overthrow the Laotian government. Souvanna Phouma says there are 60,000 North Vietnamese in his country.

Thailand: The Vietnamese and Laotian wars have also slopped over into northeast Thailand, initially as a result of local disaffection and then additionally in reprisal, it is assumed, for the establishment in Thailand of American air bases from which North Vietnam was bombed. There has been sporadic fighting on a small scale since 1965.

All these operations are at least second cousins of one another. They have a common, if sometimes distant, relative in Uncle Mao, who is closely involved in some (India, Burma) and indirectly influential in others (Cambodia, Thailand).

Over-all Purpose

The over-all purpose is to evict American, and all other non-Communist, influence from the area.

In Vietnam, the eviction process is being spurred by a mix of military and diplomatic pressures strong enough, the Reds obviously hope, to get the United States out before Saigon can take over, but not so strong as to provoke a reversal of President Nixon's fundamental decision to disengage.

The war calms down if this serves to encourage the start of an American pull-out. It picks up again if the pull-out does not proceed fast enough to suit the Communists.

In Paris, diplomatic pressures are similarly turned on and off, eliciting concessions and demanding more.

This is perfidious and inconsistent only if one assumes that the Asian Communists have abandoned their basic objective and are seeking a negotiated compromise. They are not; they are pursuing the goal of hegemony all across south and southeast Asia.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

August is the month when nature puts forth its fruits, so that the species may survive.

This year, the fruits are in abundance with one or two exceptions. The Oregon grape berries are plentiful, and the salal with its blueberry-like fruit has put on a good showing.

If you look closely at the crabapple thickets, you will find many little green apples hanging in small clusters. Black hawthorns are laden with their dark, red fruit. The rose "hips" are now ripening, and some will show red, while others are orange in color. Do you know that these hips are a very good source of vitamin "C"?

Earlier, the red huckleberry had plenty of fruit on its bushes, but now, the red berries are almost gone, either as food for birds, or, where available, food for boys.

This year there are many hazel nuts which the squirrels are gathering and storing for their winter food supply. The cascara trees are now loaded with fruit and many birds are harvesting it. The blackberries and the blackcaps have produced lots of fruit this year. The various currant bushes and the gooseberries have had an abundant crop.

Amongst the non-edible plants, such as osier dogwood, ninebark, mountain ash, and the arbutus, seed production has been good this year. The white berries of the waxberry are now showing.

There is a plentiful supply of maple seeds, and, also many acorns from the Garry oaks. Also, a good crop of pinkish berries can be found this year on the yew trees.

The flowering dogwoods are now showing their fruit, which is turning red. At the same time, they are showing many new flower buds for next year.

It is a different story with the conifers this year. The Douglas firs produced no crops at all. There was an over abundance last year. However, there are signs that there will be a crop for 1970. Did you know that the seed production of conifers is determined the year before they are to be produced?

The hemlocks and the cedars have a fair amount of cones. This is perhaps because the seedlings of these trees can survive in deeper shade than the firs.

There are no grand fir cones, and very few on the red alders. Lodge pole pine cones have grown a small amount, although they will take several years to mature.

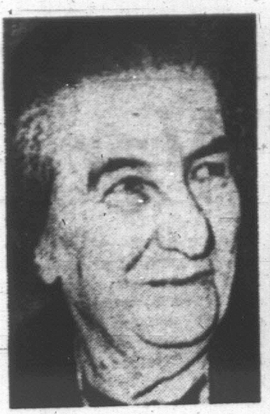
Our flowering plants have all produced a good supply of seeds for the year to come.

All the seed or fruit production of our plant life is in "rotation." In this manner, nauture makes sure of an adequate supply of plants, trees, and shrubs growing in balance in such a manner, that they will not destroy themselves.

ISRAEL REVISITED—3

Jerusalem Holds A Special Place

By GERALD CLARK



MEIR

KOLLEK

The special light of a Jerusalem sunset, the sandy tone of its stone buildings, the surroundings of the weathered Judaean Hills, add to the symbolism of the past.

But Jerusalem also represents what might be a portent for the future, of continued strife. It has deep meanings for Muslims as well as for Christians and Jews.

One of East Jerusalem's most distinguished residents, Hazem el-Khaldi, makes a point of reminding visitors that the Koran tells Muslims that Jerusalem is "The House of Islam or the House of War." (Its counterpart for Jews is the Biblical injunction, "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning"). Thus for both sides the city takes on a meaning beyond politics or immediate strategy.

Khaldi, who is 47 years old, traces his ancestry in Jerusalem back to the 7th century, the time of the prophet Mohammed. Until 1967 director of tourism for Jordan, he rejected offers of work with the Israelis when they took over Jerusalem; he preferred to operate a small hotel in the Arab section of the city, not very far from the great mosque, the Dome of the Rock, which Muslims believe marks the site where Mohammed ascended to heaven.

Khaldi argues that Jerusalem is even more sacred than Mecca or Medina. He says that Muslim bitterness over its annexation by Isreal will lead eventually to a holy war that will entangle not only Jews and Muslims in the Middle East but around the world.

As a former military man—Khaldi was an officer in the British army in Palestine during the Second World War and later, in the 1948 war in Palestine, led a brigade of Arabs against Jews—he is realistic about the present Arab incapacity to fight a war.

But he fears that in another generation there could be massive blood-letting, with hatred building from Muslims everywhere, including Pakestanis, Indonesians, Turks, and others who are not Arabs.

Mrs. Golda Meir, the prime minister, rejects Khaldi's description of Jerusalem as holier than Mecca as "absolute nonsense." It is a harsh rebuttal, but probably accurate in the sense that Muslims have never made pilgrimages to Jerusalem as they have to Mecca.

The significant point, however, is that Arabs of education and influence have already begun to talk of a sacred mission to return Jerusalem one day to the Arab domain—if not wholly at least in part.

Model for Harmony

Almost in a spiritual sense, Khaldi sees Jerusalem as a possible model for Israeli-Arab harmony, and in turn for world harmony. "A solution here," he says, "could symbolize an end to race conflicts, religious differences, and ideological rivalries."

But his solution includes the principle that the Arab portion of Jerusalem not only should be administered by Jordanians but should fall within Jordanian sovereignty.

The Israelis might accept the first part of the concept, but never the second. It is evident even to the most casual visitor that Israelis would sacrifice not only the present generation, but the next, and the one after, to retain control.

Teddy Kollek, the vigorous mayor of Jerusalem, has a ready answer for Arabs who demand greater political authority: "They have a chance to elect city councillors. It will be a pity if they don't take it."

That is, through Kollek's instigation—and over the objections of some Jews in Jerusalem—Jordanians are being urged to run in city elections, an offer they reject as a concession without real meaning.

Kollek, ironically, is heavily criticized by some Jerusalemites as being "soft" on the Arabs—for instance allowing them to erect memorials to their war dead. Especially those Jews who migrated from Arab countries, or those who grew up among them, take an unyielding line.

Kollek has to move warily, but he keeps to a courageous and imaginative course. He told me it is "quite possible" a borough system could be developed, with the Arabs looking after all the administrative functions in their portions of the city. From this beginning the future might open up in ways—even political ways—not spoken of in the present mood of Israelis.

This, at least, is what I read into Kollek's remarks when he said, "The Arabs have a chance to make inroads, as the Jews did for fifty years." (When they had no rights). But instead of seizing chances, he said with a trace of sadness, the Arabs take negative positions.

What has been the impact of the United Nations resolution calling on Israel to rescind all its measures changing the status of Jerusalem? Kollek's view is that the difficulties he had in running the city were not increased or decreased.

The 5,000 Arabs from East Jerusalem working in West Jerusalem did not stop coming because of the resolution. The 400 Arab civil servants—firemen, policemen and others—did not stay home because of the resolution. "It may have created a reservation in their minds but not in their actions," said Kollek, dismissing the UN action as something unworthy and therefore of little consequence.

But in fact Israelis were upset by the resolution, if only because it confirmed their belief that they can have little hope in the United Nations—particularly the Security Council because of its stacked membership—either standing by Israel or judging it fairly.

"For nearly twenty years," said a commentator, "Jerusalem was a divided city, part of it annexed militarily by King Hussein of Jordan. Did the Security Council get excited or raise any objection?"

Now it is a united city once more, efficiently administered, and open to people of all religious faiths. There is marked resentment that this is not accepted as a positive and just step forward.

Loses World Sympathy

There is also, unquestionably, bitterness over the way much of the world's public opinion, as reflected in the press, has swung away from the outspoken sympathy it showed for Israel during the tense period leading to the Six-Day war.

The Israelis have a variety of explanations for the turnabout. Some, in moments of deep gloom, attribute it to anti-Semitism which, they say, can accept the Jew as a physician and a businessman and even a farmer—but not a warrior as well.

Others, with equanimity, say that the Israelis were the underdogs when they were outnumbered by Arab foes 40 to 1; the odds remained constant, but the Arabs became the underdogs in defeat.

Toward the end of my interview with Mrs. Meir, running almost an hour, she spoke of this reversal in a voice that was at once sad, disenchanted, and weary:

"We are told over and over again that we cannot press Nasser to make peace with Israel because he is frustrated, and modern psychology teaches one that when a person is frustrated you must deal carefully with him. What is he frustrated about? That he wanted to destroy us—every man, woman and child of us—and he just didn't succeed, so he is frustrated? I can't have sympathy with frustration of that kind.

"What are we asking of him? That we want to occupy Egypt? We are asking him, 'All right, you tried and couldn't make it. Now we want peace with you.' I don't know that there has ever been a situation where people were attacked, but luckily won the war, and then turned around to the attacker and loser and said, 'Would you please come and sit down with us so that we can have peace?' "

Ode to August

By PAUL JOHNSON
New Statesman

August is a horrid month. Everyone you try to get hold of is on holiday. There is nothing to watch on the telly, and the papers are full of non-events.

The sky presses down like a moist, heavy blanket. The sun is hidden, or misted, or brazen. There is a smell of rubber and sweat and hot diesel oil.

Pavements are veneered with hard grime and splattered with smashed and trampled icecream. Bewildered, bronzed foreigners bang into you on the tube.

The telephone is warm and sticky, butter runs, cheese perspires, dogs snap, taxi-drivers leer contemptuously.

The jets circle lower and longer and there are more of them. Restaurants are slutish, the chef is away, the waiters look like, probably are, disgruntled students.

There are far too many kids, mostly cross or tearful, all making noises. Postcards arrive to punctuate the breakfast gloom with stabs of envy.

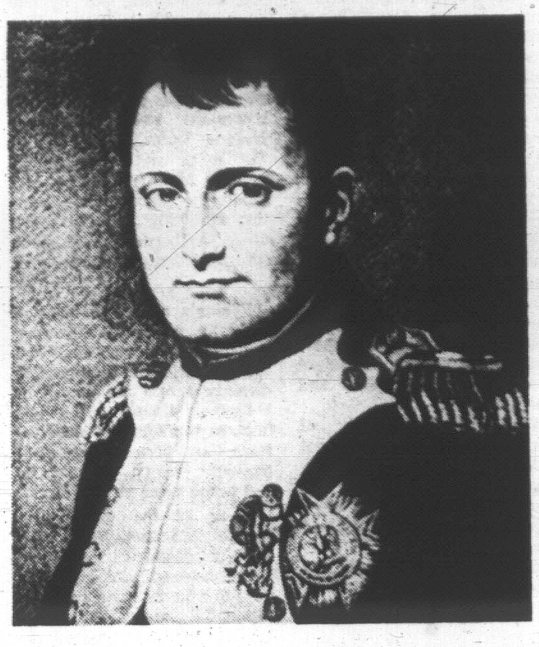
The pubs have no cold beer and no ice, and the occasional rays of sunlight point harsh fingers at their run-down filth. Window-sills are ossuaries for bluebottles and wasps.

The garden is over-ripe and already beginning to decay. Damp and browning rose-petals pile up on the exhausted soil, aborted apples and pears, none worth eating, thud onto the grass and rot there.

Each rare breath of wind brings down an ominous clutch of leaves. No jokes, no parties, no new plays or books, no political rows, no scandal. August is a horrid month.

Galloping Through History With the Mighty Na-po-le-on

By MICHAEL KERNAN



Friday was the 200th birthday of Napoleon Bonaparte, a man who for most of us has two distinct selves. the one we learned about as children and the one presented to us in history courses.

In France, nobody was allowed to forget the great day. In Washington, which hasn't even a public statue of Napoleon, there was no official ceremony planned. The French ambassador, in fact, is back in Paris where the action is.

All that is left for us to do, since Rod Steiger is still busy filming Napoleon's life in "Waterloo," is to read a book about him.

And the first book that comes to mind is a tattered old coverless volume, scribbled upon by one's father in his Victorian childhood, titled, "The Life and Battles of Napoleon Bonaparte, in Words of One Syllable," by Helen W. Pierson.

If you should set sail in a ship, on the sea that bathes the south shore of France, you could reach the isle of Cor-si-ca, where Na-po-le-on first saw the light . . . He liked to hear tales of war, and his toys were of the kind that stirred his heart. He would leave bat, or ball, or kite, to set his toy troops in rank and sweep them away with his toy gun.

This volume fails to note what Robert Holtman's "The Napoleonic Revolution" (1967) points out, that Napoleon's actual birthdate was unknown and that — just as he later was to set the imperial crown on his own head — he himself declared it to be Aug. 15, the date of the assumption of the blessed virgin.

Mrs. Pierson retells the famous story of the snow fort at young Bonaparte's school, Brienne, and describes how years afterward a poor petitioner showed the Emperor a scar on his head left by one of Napoleon's hard-thrown iceballs and "was granted all he asked." When Napoleon moved on to military school in Paris, she adds, "he soon stood first in rank."

Not so, grumbles Holtman. He graduated 42nd in a class of 59.

When Na-po-le-on had sent (troops) to take the arms from the men of Par-is, so that the mob could not break out once more, the sword of a man by the name of Beau-har-nais was brought, with the rest. Beau-har-nais was dead, but his son Eu-gene, a fine boy of 12, came to Na-po-le-on and begged with tears that he would give this sword back to him. Na-po-le-on had not the heart to keep it from the boy . . . When Jo-se-phine Beau-har-nais heard the tale from her son, she felt so touched that she called the next day to thank Na-po-le-on. She had a sweet voice, a fair face and all the charms of youth . . . And in time they were wed.

Actually, Josephine had been the mistress of Paul Barras, the revolutionary official who gave Napoleon his first important command.

The roster of celebrated battles begins in earnest with the Bridge at Lodi, described by Mrs. Pierson with verve and adjectives ("they said no one could cross that bridge in the face of such a storm of balls as they would meet. They must fail. 'What,' cried Na-po-le-on, 'fail, that word is not French' ").

But Holtman cites it as a strictly minor fight puffed up by Napoleon the propagandist into an epic. There was also Marengo, a near disaster whose official account was rewritten by Napoleon.

In fact, Holtman asserts, Napoleon was a superb field commander and an inventive strategist, but as the quality of his army fell off, his basic concept of mobility gradually gave way to a use of massed troops and artillery that culminated in the Russian debacle.

Increasingly, he broke his own rules, proving their validity in the breech, and it is a great tragedy of the First World War that commanders on both sides used for their text his later battles and not the brilliant, relatively unbloody early victories.

Mrs. Pierson does mention that Napoleon "had bridges made and built miles of road and great schools of law. He filled Par-is with works of art and drew those who could paint well to his court, as well as those "who had first rank in all the arts." And she tells of Josephine's forced divorce so vividly that one might suspect she was there herself.

"Na-po-le-on . . . had grown pale and his voice shook as he spoke. He went to the em-press, took her hand and placed it on his heart. 'Jo-se-phine,' he said, 'my good Jo-se-phine, you know how I have loved you' . . . "

But before long Mrs. Pierson is back on the battlefield, galloping through the gory list: Borodino, Dresden, Leipzig, Paris and finally Waterloo.

Describing Napoleon's death on St. Helena, she says that "at 6 in the day his eyes were fixed, but a smile of peace was on his face as he breathed his last. 'France—Jo-se-phine!' were his last words."

There is more to Napoleon than Mrs. Pierson. One of the giants of human history, he changed not only the face but the mind of 19th century Europe.

His civil code, called by many his true claim to immortality, was imitated all over the world and today, modified, it is recognized as "the first truly modern code of laws."

During his 15 years in power he established the Bank of France, the university system, the French Lycee, the baccalaureate examination and the Legion of Honor ("It is by baubles that men are led").

His continental system, which foreshadowed the Common Market, resulted somewhat against his expectations in the emergence of Britain as a great international power independent of Europe.

His policies helped bring about the rise of the middle class in the western world, the flowering of nationalism and the birth of the modern state.

He invented labor negotiations, after a fashion. He popularized canned foods and beet sugar, now an important French product. He pioneered in modern war techniques (MacArthur at Inchon consciously followed his precepts) and paved the way for the industrialized state. He also paved the way for the 20th century dictators with his sophisticated use of a controlled press.

He brought on the balance of power arrangement that triggered two world wars, and his conquests aided not only the development of the United States as as a world leader but the birth of independent Latin American nations.

He also inserted into the catechism the declaration that "to honor and serve our Emperor is therefore to honor and serve God himself" and other whoppers.

Well, we have come a long way from that snowball fight at Brienne, and the dashing figure of Mrs. Pierson's Napoleon is dim in the memory.

But somehow, that relic of the days when we read with our index finger seems more real to us than the man the historians write about.

Are Educators on Target? What Proof Can They Give?

By ART STOTT

Stott

Mary Aice White, PhD, of Teachers College, Columbia University, has posed some penetrating questions for educators on this continent and perhaps elsewhere.

They are questions, she says, which increasingly sophisticated taxpayers, frequently better educated than the teachers in charge of their children, are bound to ask.

She forecasts a hard-nosed approach to the educators which will not be diverted by replies clouded with pedaguese and vague attributions to authorities who may, or may not, know what they're talking about.

* * *

She deals with practical issues and she advises the educators to prepare themselves to give factual answers. It's a tall demand, she admits, because classrooms do not deal specifically with hard and fast units of production—they can't break down output in terms of specified numbers of products. But they can and they should be a great deal more specific than many are today.

She wants goals defined and methods devised to determine how close a particular practice or program comes to reaching them. The assessments will have to be made by people trained for the job in an academic technology lacking today.

* * *

The questions she foresees from constituents in the next few years have interest beyond the United States. Here are a few samples:

"The budget calls for reducing class size from 30 to 25 at a cost of X dollars. Tell us what basis is there for believing that a class size of 25 achieves demonstrably better educational results than one of 30, or even 35?

"Why does the budget call for more remedial reading teachers? Have you any evidence that they have been effective so far? Suppose the same money were spent in another form, would reading improve?

"You say you have plans for a nongraded school. Do you have any hard evidence that nongraded schools perform better, educationally, than graded ones?

"You say we have a good school system. What is a good school system? How would you—or we—know if it were doing a good job?"

These are samples. Anything but explicit answers will be inadequate. The old educational folklore response won't do.

Mary Alice White discusses innovations. She suggests the purpose of the innovation should be clearly defined, the goals set. At that point intensive investigation should be made of the desirability and usefulness of the program proposed. And that investigation should consider alternatives if the goals are deemed good.

She says that the point of view she expresses may sound cut and dried and she knows that education cannot be treated as just some other business, like manufacturing nuts and bolts which can be counted on a production basis.

* * *

But, she adds, "the day has almost passed when our constituents are going to accept another innovation just because it is the current fad or gimmick." The revolution under way now, she says, is toward rational educational management. She wants planning now for someone who will have the skills to be a research and development director on school staffs — hopefully broad people, wise people, who can balance dollars against the quality of educational life. And her nightmare is that "we could create colonels who will build educational bridges over the River Kwai."

* * *

It seems to me that in Greater Victoria and in other parts of the province we have reached a point where the suggestions of Mary Alice should enjoy a serious and receptive hearing. Happily, I believe, we're beyond the stage at which smart alecks and publicity seekers can win an audience merely by wild assertions of inadequacies in the system or systems used here. Sure there are faults. But there seems to be less inclination than a few years ago to throw the baby out with the old bath water when we want change.

We're due for a little more critical assessment by the informed public on what our schools should be trying to do and we seem to be less impressed by the uncritical support of enthusiasts for innovation for the sake of innovation.

Pragmatism has limitations, particularly in education, but we are entitled to ask "Will it work? Is it working? Would an alternative work better?" when someone brings to the scene what he considers a bright new idea or a refurbished old one. And we want explicit answers, not verbal fumble-bloom or professional derision.

MOSCOW TAKES ADVANTAGE . . . . . . OF TRIBAL UNREST

Peking on Defensive in Border 'War'

TOKYO (WP) — In the ethnic patchwork of Communist China's Sinkiang Province, long a centre of anti-Chinese tribal unrest, Moscow has chosen an area of maximum political vulnerability for a second-front gambit designed to place Peking clearly on the defensive in what is now expected to be a protracted border confrontation.

This is the consensus emerging from conversations with informed diplomatic and academic observers here, including Japanese specialists on China, bolstered by earlier contacts over a period of years with Sinkiang-watchers along the southern fringes of central Asia in India and Pakistan.

While the possibility of accidental escalation is not ruled out, the most widespread assessment of the clashes near Yumin this week suggests the Soviet Union had the limited objective of forestalling new pressures in Siberia and keeping China off balance.

●

There is a general tendency here to assume that Moscow is primarily responsible for stimulating the Yumin incident despite a lack of supporting evidence at this stage. In this view, the Chinese have little to gain from an encounter with the Soviets in an area where their control of the local population is so tenuous — and where the Russians are not only within 500 miles of Peking's nuclear testing site at Lop Nor but less than 150 miles from the rich oil fields at Karamai and Tushantzu.

An explanation of the ethnolinguistic map of Sinkiang reveals a mosaic of non-Chinese peoples who have traditionally rebelled against Chinese rule and have closer ties with kinsmen across the Soviet border in Kazakhstan than with the racial majority in China.

Yumin, where the Chinese claim Soviet forces staged their foray, is only 50 miles north of a major Soviet railhead. But even more important than the ligistic factors making this a favorable Soviet target area is the fact that the local tribal population in Singiang outnumbers the Chinese there and is reported to be Soviet-oriented.

The border belt immediately opposite Yumin is solidly Kazakh. Beyond are enclaves of Mongols, Uzbeks and Uighurs running side by side in north-south patterns offering a distinctly inhospitable rear for Chinese troops operating along the rugged mountainous frontier. To the northeast stretches Soviet-leaning Outer Mongolia. To the south and east lie the barren Zungaria Desert and finally the Uighu nomad country, sprawling for 200 miles up to the borders of Chinese-speaking Kansu province.

Peking's efforts to colonize Sinkiang with Chinese are apparent in an east-west zigzag settlement line cutting directly across the centre of Uighur-Kazakh territory. Chinese immigrant concentrations have been spotted strategically betwen the oilfields and reach close to Lop Nor.

Many of the Chinese brought to Sinkiang have been socially isolated on state farms, however, and efforts to promote intermarriage in relatively integrated areas, have reportedly failed to erase the self-conscious local nationalism of the predominantly Islamic tribes.

Historically, Sinkiang and other Central Asian "barbarian" areas were never more than loose satrapies of the Chinese Empire, ruled by quarrelling Emirs and Khans who were easily pushed aside by Czarist military expeditions.

Russian domination was established over most of Central Asia with little difficulty in the mid-19th century. The only real bone of contention from the beginning was the Ili Valley, scene of the current conflict, which at a time when the new Soviet regime was starting bold new economic programs in central Asia and China, was wracked by civil war.

Sinkiang turned westward for its transport links to the outside world following the opening of the nearby Turksib railway, rather than to the nearest Chinese railroad 2,500 miles away. On the eve of the communist takeover in Peking, central Asian expert Owen Lattimore has written, Sinkiang was "economically, a province of the Soviet Union."

●

Moscow made a show of magnanimity and goodwill in the early days of Mao's regime, helping Peking to consolidate its power over recalcitrant local factions. In return, the Soviet Union retained a "joint development" interest in oil and mining ventures. But the partnership facade did not last long. Peking habored bitter memories of Soviet help given to Chiang Kai-Shek's partisans when Mao's brother, Mao Tse-Ming, sought to establish a Chinese communist beachhead in Sinkiang during the late '30s. By 1954, the Chinese scrapped the joint ventures and began their long attempt to liquidate all Soviet influence in Sinkiang.

Many observers believe Peking achieved considerable initial success in establishing its rule in Sinkiang during a decade marked by a soft policy toward many of its 40 million-strong national minorities. On paper, at least, the separate identity of the minorities was emphasized. Since 1960, however, Peking has followed a repressive policy linked explicitly in recent years with the Cultural Revolution and a Red Guard doctrinal approach equating local nationalism with revisionism.

The dominant view among observers here is that Sinkiang has been under naked military rule for the past year without even the semblance of a political structure and that the resultant atmosphere of instability and unrest might have invited Soviet pressure. This is supported by recent Soviet propaganda broadcasts bemoaning the fate of the Kazakhs in Sinkiang and reporting the sympathy of Kazakhs on the Soviet side. But another widely held minority view stresses that the Yumin clash could well have been a mere accident resulting from nomad movements across a largely unmarked boundary.

Whether or not the present clash proves to be an isolated occurrence, it is seen here as potentially more significant than the Ussuri conflict if only because the struggle for Sinkiang is so old and so deeply rooted in an explosive local nationalism. The Soviet aim is not believed to be the outright separation of the province. Sinkiang may simply have provided the opportunity to make a point and to capture the psychological initiative. Bu applying pressure in one key minority region, Moscow is no doubt seeking to remind Peking it has other soft spots along a wide front of 50-odd thinly populated but strategic border minority areas covering more than half of the territory of China.

16 Arrested

VANCOUVER (CP)—Police arrested 16 persons, including a 17-year-old juvenile girl, following a demonstration early Friday in which three policemen were reported assaulted. The melee began on downtown Granville Street outside a dance hall and moved 10 blocks to police headquarters when two constables tried to arrest a 16-year-old girl seen drinking liquor.

Four Remanded to Monday

TORONTO (CP) — Four Toronto persons today were remanded to Monday to face charges of causing a disturbance during Prime Minister Trudeau's visit to the Canadian National Exhibition and a Liberal party picnic at Toronto's Centre Island Friday.

Released on $200 bail each were Jeffrey Conway, Rod Wilczak, 24, and Jonathan Pierce, 20, charged after a skirmish on the island.

Joseph Young, 22, was released on $50 bail on a charge laid following an incident at the CNE bandshell where the prime minister officially opened the exhibition.

Oak Bay
Election
Corner

Dr. G. Scott Wallace

In this election it is my intention to meet personally as many of the electors as possible, to learn their views and discuss the issues. While serving as an alderman on Oak Bay Council, I have become aware of the serious impact on many homeowners of increased assessments with consequent substantial increases in property taxes. As I trudge from door to door each day, I become more clearly informed than ever about the very real impact of these increases which are most drastic on those property owners such as pensioners and the elderly on fixed incomes. Recently the Provincial Government altered the legislation which prevented municipal governments from increasing individual assessments by more than 5%. It would seem that with land and property values rising rapidly a more realistic ceiling of, say 10% should be set. I would certainly advocate that a definite ceiling be set so that homeowners are given more protection against sudden large increases in their assessment in one year. The present arrangement whereby each assessor is employed by a municipality but functions under the direction of the Provincial Government is in my opinion, unsatisfactory. I do not have the answer, but I am convinced that if all the assessors for this whole school district were to work through one agency, each using the same guidelines to interpret the legislation, more uniform and equitable assessment would result throughout the whole Greater Victoria area. This being so, I believe one appropriate agency under which assessors could function more efficiently and economically would be the Capital Region Board.

The next time some landlord says he doesn't take "foreigners",

Fight back.

You can, you know.

Pity is,
Too many folks accept discrimination.
Too many expect their age or sex to lose them job opportunities and fair pay.
Too many expect their ancestry or skin colour to deny them common privileges and decent consideration.

It's time to fight back.

In British Columbia, you have rights.
And your government protects those rights.

In June, 1969, the Province of British Columbia proclaimed The Human Rights Act for the promotion and protection of the fundamental rights of every individual in this province.

The Act makes it unlawful to:

Discriminate in hiring, continuing employment, membership in a trade union, because of race, religion, sex, colour, nationality, ancestry, place of origin, or because of age if between 45 and 65.

Discriminate in seeking or advertising for employees.

Discriminate in renting or selling houses or commercial property.

Discriminate in providing accomodation, services, or facilities where the public is customarily admitted.

Leslie Peterson introduced this much-needed legislation because, as Minister of Labour, he saw it his duty to make sure every British Columbian gets a fair shake.

The Act has teeth. Now that it is passed, the provincial government has appointed a Human Rights Director to handle complaints, and a Human Rights Commission to enforce the Act and deal with offenders.

If you'd like to know more about Human Rights in British Columbia or if you have a complaint, Les Peterson wants to hear from you. Write him through The Director, Human Rights Branch, Parliament Buildings, Victoria, B.C., and help us keep British Columbia free of discrimination.

Higher Parcel Rates Set

OTTAWA (CP) — Parcel post rates within and beyond Canada will increase this fall and winter to balance costs and revenues, the post office announced Friday.

Parcel rates within Canada will rise Jan. 1.

The minimum rate within a zone for a one-to-two pound parcel will increase to 45 cents from 35 cents. The maximum for a parcel of 20 to 25 pounds going between the Atlantic provinces and Alberta, British Columbia and the Yukon will go up to $3.55 from $3.50.

The domestic air parcel post category will be abolished since all parcels now travel by air.

On Oct. 1, 1969, rates to countries other than the United States will also be increased to meet rising costs. The changes will reduce the number of rate zones to two from three. The present system of four weight groups will be replaced by a simple pound-by-pound progression.

Also starting Oct. 1 rates to the U.S. will rise. The minimum for up to one-half pound will remain at 15 cents. Items from eight ounces to one pound will cost 75 cents compared to the present 45 cents. Each additional pound will cost 25 cents, compared to the present 20 cents.

The rate increases are intended to remove the $8,700,000 parcel post deficit expected in the current fiscal year.

The post office said parcels weighing up to six pounds make up approximately 80 per cent of Canadian parcel post traffic. Increases in these weight ranges will vary from 10 to 20 cents a parcel.

Trudeau Rides in Sub

HALIFAX (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau went diving today—in a submarine.

The trip from Halifax harbor and the dive at Chebucto Head in the Canadian submarine Okanagan was the prime minister's first submarine ride.

Mr. Trudeau was in Halifax to open the Canada Games.

The prime minister was piped aboard the submarine and spent a few moments in its conning tower chatting with Lt.-Cmdr. Nigel Frawley, who has commanded the sub since she was commissioned in June, 1968.

Mr. Trudeau was in high spirits and wearing a dark blue suit, lighter blue shirt and a brightly printed ascot as he climbed into the 100-foot-long submarine.

With him were Manpower Minister Allan MacEachen and Admiral J. C. O'Brien, commander Maritime Command.

The submarine left the harbor with the prime minister still in the tower taking in the view through binoculars.

The vessel sailed swiftly towards the diving area, making about 13 knots and leaving a small boat carrying reporters and photographers far behind.

Patches of fog hung over the area.

Earlier about 50 people gathered outside the Nova Scotian Hotel as the prime minister left to board the vessel. They applauded and there were no protesters.

The public was barred from the jetty where the submarine was moored.

Be Careful, Police Told

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario minister of transport warned Friday that power of arrest without warrant on certain Highway Traffic Act offences will be withdrawn if police abuse it by excessive or arrogant use.

Irwin Haskett told 200 delegates to the Police Association of Ontario convention the power must be used with great care to serve the public interest.

After a debate in the legislature earlier this year, Ontario police were given the power to arrest without a warrant a driver who leaves the scene of an accident or who refuses to produce his driver's licence.

The sections of the act will come into force Sept. 1 along with other amendments approved by the legislature at its last session.

Greek Plane Highjacked To Albania

From AP-Reuters

ATHENS (CP)—An Olympic Airways DC-3 airliner with 31 persons aboard apparently was hijacked to Albania today. The Greek-owned plane landed in Vlone, Albania after having been reported missing on a flight between two Greek points.

"We assume the plane was hijacked," said Ionannis Georgakis, general director of the airline, after the pilot reported making a safe landing in Vlone, Albania.

Vlone is on the southwestern coast of Albania, which does not maintain diplomatic relations with Greece. The two countries technically are still in a state of war.

Georgakis said Olympic Airways was taking steps to have the plane returned. There was speculation that an opponent of the army-backed Greek government had hijacked the aircraft.

The Volkswagen

Why it's automatic.

First of all, it doesn't have a clutch pedal.

Second of all, even though it still has a shift lever, you don't get to shift it very much.

When you want to go somewhere you just move the stick shift forward. Then leave it there. You can drive all over town (even in stop and go traffic) with the shift in that one position and never have to touch it again.

Out on the highway you shift into cruising gear, which is like an overdrive, to save on gas.

And that's about it.

Except there's a low for steep hills, snow or mud. And of course, a reverse for going backwards.

But all in all, you don't get to touch the shift very much when you drive the VW automatic stick shift.

It drives you.

Why it's a stick shift.

It's a stick shift because it still has a stick you can shift.

So that means if you're the kind of person who likes to shift for himself, you can.

The Volkswagen automatic stick shift gives you a choice: you can drive it the lazy way (see left) or, whenever the old sports car bug hits you, you can start out in low and take it through the gears 1, 2, 3, just like a regular stick shift. (And get some pretty lively acceleration doing it.)

The Volkswagen automatic stick shift is available as optional equipment on the Bug and Karmann Ghia.

Why not take it for a test drive?
You've got nothing to lose, except a clutch.

The VW automatic stick shift. Test drive it either way at the Volkswagen dealer nearest you. (He's in the Yellow Pages.)

A Middle Class Allegory

By ANTHONY JENKINS

Bullet Park is a commuter's paradise: green lawns, a golf club, houses from $30,000 up, and all within easy rail service from New York. It is a typical piece of middle-class Americana, and its name suggests the duality of the American establishment and of Mr. Cheever's own attitude to it.

BULLET PARK by John Cheever. Random House. $6.95.

Life in Cheever-country, Massachusetts or Connecticut, can kill one — spiritually if not physically — hence the "bullet"; but the mindless violence of that word is offset by the pleasant connotations of man-made rural ease in the name "park."

The book's two central figures can also be seen as part of this duality. With unabashedly allegorical intentions, Cheever lets us into the lives of Mr. Hammer and Mr. Nailles, two opposite characters who are bound together by the compelling apposition of their names.

Hammer is illegitimate; he has wandered across the States and throughout Europe; he is rootless. Yet, as his name suggests and as the plot reveals, he is violent and destructive. Nailles (the other half of American society?) is a model of fidelity to his wife, his son, and the social values of Bullet Park.

As helpless and as solid as a nail, he goes to church on Sundays, but its calendar conjures up for him the changes in the weather rather than the symbolism of the Bible: "St. Paul meant blizzards. St. Mathias meant a thaw."

His son cannot attend confirmation classes because he is playing varsity basketball, and when the bishop comes back again in the spring, the boy will be playing baseball.

●

Everything that Mr. Nailles stands for would be easy to knock down as mere social attitudinizing, and his world very nearly does fall apart. His son, Tony, a victim of the generation gap, simply takes to his bed, turns his face to the wall, and gives up. And then there is Mr. Hammer ready to destroy the family.

But Hammer's crazy plot does not quite succeed. Cheever is firmly on the side of respectable America even as he shows us its terrible weaknesses.

This, I think, makes it an unusual and significant book. Like all good comedy it is tinged with melancholy and the threat of disaster, and like all good comedy it presents a wide-eyed criticism of contemporary society. But this particular critique is from a writer who admires and loves the essence of what he satirizes.

The book's lyrical first chapter sets its entire tone. The railway station, jaded and oddly old fashioned in its rural artifice, is still the wellspring of Cheever's feelings for the true America.

"Beyond this is a water tower and beyond this a well-lighted and empty street. Then you think happily that this is your country — unique, mysterious and vast. One has no such feelings in airplanes, airports and the trains of other nations."

We then follow Hammer in his search for a house in Bullet Park. Along with Mr. Hazzard, the realtor (the name strikes home), we're given a property owner's view of this jewel of WASP America as we pass the Wickwires' ("Estimated resale price: $65,000") and the Welchers' ("three bedrooms, 1½ baths, $31,000").

Cheever knows what's wrong with the values of this sort of country-club society, but he still maintains that the society itself is valuable: "Seen at an improbable distance by some zealous and vengeful adolescent, ranging over the golf links, the piece of plush would seem to be the imprimatur; the guerdon, the accolade and banner of Powder Hill behind which marched, in tight English shoes, the legions of wife-swapping, Jew-baiting, booze-fighting spiritual bankrupts. Oh damn them all, thought the adolescent . . . But the adolescent, as adolescents always are, would be mistaken."

●

In the rest of the novel, Cheever attempts to show why his people are like this. Although he diverts Nailles from final tragedy, he has no solution for him. In fact, the book's last sentence is made deliberately terrible in its smug acceptance of the status quo. After near disaster, which has taken Tony close to death and himself to the hands of a drug peddler, Nailles goes back to work as Monday comes around "and everything was as wonderful, wonderful, wonderful as it had been."

●

Here then is an allegory of the unresolved tensions in American middle-class life, but let it be added that the book is by no means the intellectual jig-saw puzzle that analysis might make it. It is from first to last exceptionally readable and entertaining.

The allegory is fleshed out with a lively narrative that reveals a complex vision of the day-by-day rhythms of life in New England's dormitory towns. Cheever's compassion for this muddle-headed respectability is persuasive and his prose-style is as precise as a scalpel in cutting at the rottenness that disfigures the thing he loves.

Books

WRITING &cetera

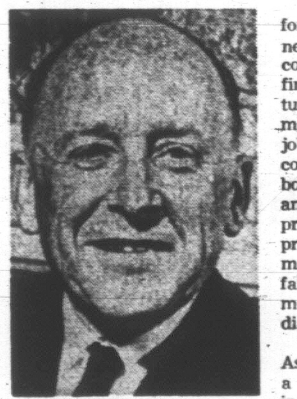
By JAN GOULD

Gray Campbell, Sidney publisher, had a surprise order for "Potlach" recently. It came from a U.S. firm that wanted to give George Clutesi's second book to its employees as Christmas gifts. Maybe other companies could copy the idea; just ask any book-lovers if they'll accept reading material instead of the usual turkey voucher.

Saanich playwright Peter Caley is at work researching for another West Coast drama. Caley does his research in depth, spending weeks, sometimes months making sure facts jigsaw. Results? Production fees rarely meet research costs. Currently, Caley's looking around for an interesting job to provide financial security.

Wondering if Canadians like historical plays? Caley's "Poacher's Honeymoon," set in sea otter trading days and dealing with the "Imperial Eagle," her captain, Charles Barkley and his wife who was the first white woman on our coast, drew warm response from a radio audience. A thousand letters came in.

Vancouver's Mitchell Press has a number of titles under contract. Derek Pethick, whose "Victoria; The Fort" was one of their recent titles, has completed another book for them. His "James Douglas: Servant of Two Empires" will be published soon. On the presses is "Salt Spring Island", by Bea Hamilton, a Victoria Women's Press Club member who lives in Fulford.



MITCHELL

Howard Mitchell, a former Vancouver Sun business editor, started his company by producing a financial weekly. Later, he turned to printing, featuring magazines and commercial jobs, then began publishing, concentrating on case-bound books. Now the firm designs and manufactures its own products, has extensive printing procedures and a mechanized binding line. So far they've done 40 books, mostly "Western Canadians."

The Canadian Authors' Association has been called a "resolutely square and increasingly moribund organization." The recent convention, held in Edmonton, did little to change matters. Lead billing was given to Maritimer Dan Ross, known for the millions of words he churns out. Ross didn't show up. Instead, he sent along a taped message. A group expecting "make-up" to be a discussion on magazine layout found it was just a gift of cosmetics, the sort of prize to be awarded to "someone sitting in an orange chair."

So what's lacking? Spirited people who know their craft, who have accomplished something; not people who discuss as one panel-member apparently did, the book they intend to write . . . some day.

Cry into your gin, fellow short story writers. The market scene isn't good. Here's a comment from Klanak Press, Vancouver, which works with Victoria master printer Charles Morriss to produce its books:

"Would that we could bring out more volumes, particularly short stories. Yet the volume (of short stories) we did publish, while receiving lavish reviews and typographical awards here and in Europe, still is the only one of our books which did not sell particularly well."

LAURENCE

One Canadian short story writer who has achieved international acclaim is Manitoba's Margaret Laurence. Out West recently before going East to the University of Toronto where she'll be writer in residence for a year, she says her book of short stories, "The Tomorrow Tamer and Other Stories," now in hardcover, is to appear in paperback. (Set agains the backdrop of West African reaction to freedom, two of the stories, "A Gourdful of Glory" and "The Tomorrow Tamer" won President's medals, annual awards from the University of Western Ontario for the best story of the year.)

Perhaps most readers know Margaret Laurence for her novels. One, "Jest of God," was recently made into a movie, "Rachel, Rachel."

"It was very satisfying," she says, describing her reaction to seeing her characters appear on screen.

Setting Straight Pioneer Record

By TORCHY ANDERSON

It has been said that the Saskatchewan is the "river of history" of the West. Until almost the turn of the century that was true.

First French explorers, the Norwesters, the Hudson's Bay people all paddled, pulled, poled its length to reach buffalo-studded prairies, on their way to the Athabasca country and The Pacific.

The Saskatchewan has seen much tragedy and not a little comedy as man began to turn the first prairie sods, but perhaps no organized migration provided more of each than the arrival in 1903 of about 2,000 British immigrants under the leadership of Isaac Barr.

ALL SILENT/ALL DAMNED by Helen Evans Reid. Ryerson. $6.95.

Barr's relation with the tract near the Saskatchewan-Alberta boundary ended a few weeks after his large, inexperienced flock began to settle down on the colony reserve. They said he had not carried out his promises, fulfilled his contracts; they said he was a crook and some of the wilder hands wanted to lynch him.

Make Amends

In this little book Dr. Helen Evans Reid sets out to right an injustice of history and to make amends for an article she once wrote accepting the bad reputation that had been fastened on Isaac Barr.

When Barr died in Australia, whence he went after the colony row, his name was still under a cloud. Recently his son was invited back to Lloydminster to open the local exhibition. His dead father had been vindicated.

Barr was a Canadian-born Anglican minister whose dreams and rebellious spirit took him to United States, to Saskatchewan and, finally to England. In London he was inspired to organize a colony to "keep British" the prairies of Canada, then being invaded by land-hungry people from United States and Europe.

His company, complete with babies, dogs, pianos and a vast assortment of luggage, some of which was lost, sailed to Canada on a crowded ship, came west from St. John on crowded CPR colonist cars (slat seats and no padding) and were dumped down in the tiny settlement called Saskatoon. They still had 150 westward miles to cover by horse and wagon.

Mental Shock

It is not hard to visualize the scramble and confusion of moving this army 150 miles to bare prairie quarter-sections by means of horse transport. The Canadian Northern rails that Barr had been promised were still far to the east. But probably the greatest handicap was the mental shock to the immigrants. Despite Barr's frank warnings that they had to meet many hardships, written warnings, the Britishers were for the most part disillusioned and despondent.

It was at this stage that another parson, George Exton Lloyd, later to become a bishop, began to have a great deal of influence with the colonists. He called Barr a crook and Barr called him a "snivelling parson." In his declining years Lloyd wrote a book which left Barr branded as a crook.

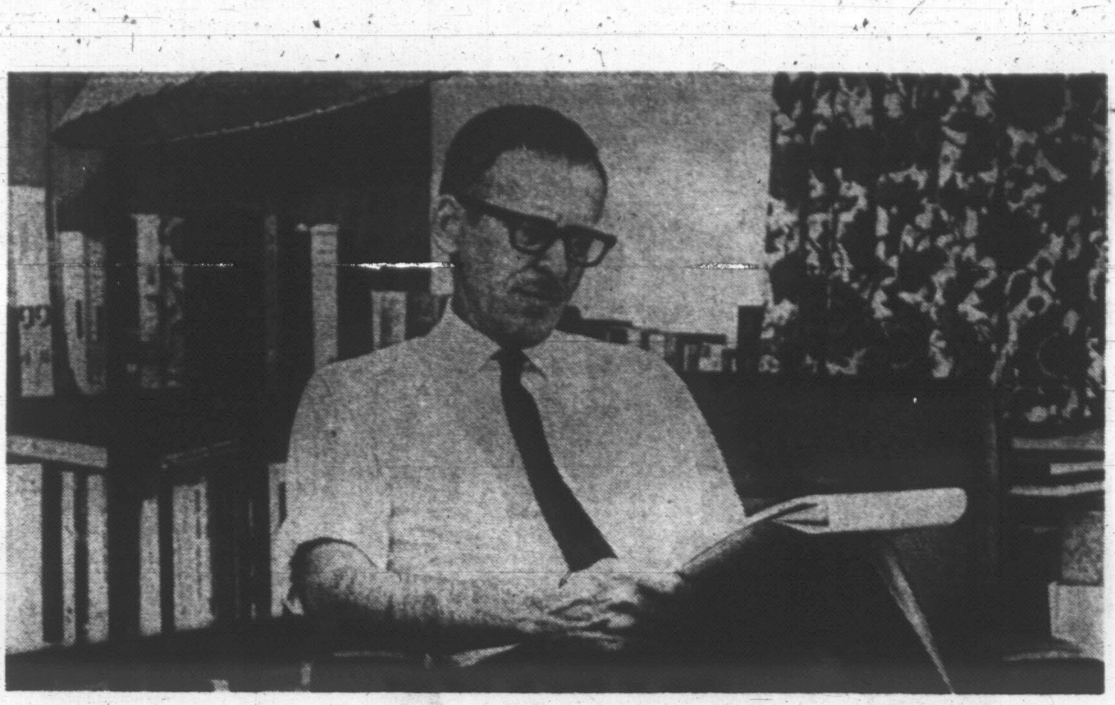
The author began her research as a penance for what she had written previously. The research was long and trying but in the end she found what she believes to be the truth, and finally found and visited Barr's children in Australia.

Dr. Reid leaves a picture of Barr as a man who did not take kindly to authority, a man who dreamed great dreams, a man who was too ready to accept bland assurances of government and railway officials, a man who devised great schemes (including a medicare plan for his colony) and, tragically, a man who refused to fight back.

Under Shadow

Had he fought back at his detractors, including his fellow parson, and stuck it out for another month the tide would have turned. He might have died in Saskatchewan, honored; instead he was buried in an Australian grave while still under the shadow of what this author says was abominably unfair treatment.

The name Barr and the name Lloyd still live south of the Saskatchewan. For those who have accepted the earlier history Dr. Reid has documented a very convincing rebuttal to the detractors of Isaac Barr.



Reg Roy at work in study

Former Army 'Boy Signaller' Writing History of General

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Imagine what confusion might arise if someone noted as a science fiction writer suddenly decided to become an historian.

But for the historian who ventures into the field of biography the change is hardly more discernible than crossing the 49th parellel.

Take Dr. Reginald H. Roy, a military historian, for example. What could be a more natural progression than his becoming the biographer of Gen. George R. Pearkes, VC, one of Canada's notable military figures?

Dr. Roy, whose most recent work, The Seaforth Highlanders of Canada, is not long off the press, is now deeply immersed in the personal history of British Columbia's former and highly popular Lieutenant-Governor.

It was no easy task to get Gen. Pearkes to agree to having the biography written.

"I was fascinated by his many-faceted life but especially by his distinguished military career," Dr. Roy says.

"But when I approached him on the possibility he said he didn't think his life was interesting enough. Finally, after several years of attempts I wrote a long letter explaining in detail why I thought it should be written. I was then invited to Government House to discuss it and he agreed to let me tackle the job."

For source material, aside from the some 75 interviews, Dr. Roy must work his way through masses of letters, newspaper clippings, documents and books by other people which carry references to Gen. Pearkes.

And awaiting his perusal in Ottawa are the Harkness papers; more than 80 boxes of folders covering the Ministry of Defence back to 1957 when Gen. Pearkes took over the portfolio.

Many interviews To fill out story

Dr. Roy has sought, and must continue to seek, interviews with people who knew his subject in the army, as a private, a captain, a colonel, a general; as an MP, as Minister of Defence and as Lieutenant-Governor.

Through these sources he hopes to unearth any stories, anecdotes, and further bits of information that will flesh out the material he already has.

"The material Gen. Pearkes has kept on himself — letters, diaries, clippings, documents — is very little. You could hold it in one hand easily with your arm outstretched," says Dr. Roy.

"So this means I have to rely on his memory and thank goodness it is really keen. His life spans 82 years. Born in the Victorian era he is still hale and hearty in this period when man is printing his footsteps on the moon.

"At 82 his recall is so good that in a conversation a couple of weeks ago he remembered the name of the housekeeper on a farm where he stayed in 1908."

The Pearkes biography will take possibly three or more years before it is in the hands of Copp, Clark, who are going to publish it. Much research remains to be done, some of it in Ottawa, perhaps even as far afield as the Great War areas of France.

PEARKES

In the meantime, unless he is away on research or attending seminars and such things, Reg Roy spends hours of every day in the slant-roofed eirie of his steeply gabled house on Tudor Road, surrounded by innumerable books, military prints and miniature cannon, working on the typescripts of 75 recorded interviews with his subject.

This, though, is only part of his day. The major part in winter and several hours in summer are spent at the University of Victoria where he is associate professor in the Department of History.

Within the department he occupies a special niche with an impressive nameplate — Professor of Military History and Strategic Studies.

There are only five or six similar professorships in Canada and the University of Victoria has the only one west of the Great Lakes. They are sponsored by the federal government.

Dr. Roy did not, in the first instance, set his sights on becoming an expert on military history and strategy.

After completing a history honors course, with BA and MA degrees from the University of British Columbia, he was teaching at Royal Roads in 1958 when Victoria College began its expansion.

On the invitation of its history head, Sidney Pettit, he became the third member of a department which now has a faculty of 19. The other was Tony Emery.

Shortly after he began the studies that led to a PhD from the University of Washington.

The history of Victoria's own 16th Canadian Scottish Regiment, Ready for the Fray, was his first book and his taking that task on came about, as he puts it; "Partly through background and partly by accident."

Born in New Glasgow, N.S., Reg Roy, at 16, joined the militia in the summer of 1939 — "of all times to join up."

Regiments allowed a few youngsters

"Nevertheless," he says, "when war broke out a few weeks later, I and two of my friends found ourselves signallers in the Cape Breton Highlanders. You see at the outset of the war, regiments were allowed a small number of boys — buglers, drummers and signallers.

"We were a kilted regiment and we three signallers and the pipe band retained the kilt longer than anyone else. As boys we were excused sentry duty and Cape Breton being cold, every one else got battledress ahead of us."

Altogether he was Boy Roy for a year-and-a-half and finished the war a little more than six years later, as he puts it "at the ripe old age of 22," as a lieutenant.

His unit went overseas in 1941, and while he came back for a short time to get his commission, he served through the Italy campaign in 1944 and in France and Belgium in 1945.

He becomes thoughtful when asked about his reaction to the experience of war.

"It hardened you — very much. It toughened you, it matured you. It very frequently scared hell out of you."

Late in 1945, after demobilization, Dr. Roy and his parents followed his sister and fiancee and their families out to Britsh Columbia.

Marriage came first and then university.

The student veteran enrolled at Victoria College because the veterans' pre-university training school in Vancouver was filled up.

This began an association that, with time out for work and study afield, forged a link that has remained firm for more than 20 years.

"I would say that my basic interest in history was reinforced at Victoria College by my professors to the point where I decided on the history honors course at UBC.

"As for the military history specialization, I had seen a lot of war by the time a person might normally start in college, so that while I did not have any desire to remain in the permanent force, nevertheless I retained a keen interest in military affairs."

Broke after five university years as a student vet living on $90 a month, Dr. Roy applied for a job in the army historical section in Ottawa, working under Col. C. P. Stacey.

"I was there for two years and this was exceptionally good training — working at the heart of the military history program in Canada."

Next came a year in the Public Archives of Canada, in charge of military material ranging from the war of 1812 up to the Boer War.

All this was the background that lead to the writing of his first book.

The "accident" was a meeting, after his return to Victoria and the Provincial Archivist's job in 1954, with an old Victoria College friend who was then a lieutenant in the 16th Canadian Scottish.

"He asked me up to the mess for a drink and introduced me to the new colonel, Jack Fawcett. The first thing Col. Fawcett said was —Let's see — Roy. Didn't you write an article recently in the Canadian Army Journal?"

Ready for Fray, Sinews of Steel

"From there on it appeared they'd had several unsuccessful attempts at having the regiment's history written and the upshot was they asked me to take on the task — and away we went."

That book was Ready for the Fray.

The second, Sinews of Steel, was the history of the B.C. Dragoons which was written as the result of a recommendation by a former professor at UBC.

"Incidentally," says the author, "as a matter of interest, one of the troopers in the Great War regiment of the B.C. Dragoons — the 2nd Canadian Mounted Rifles — was George Pearkes. Another was Walter Bapty, who later was to be colonel of the 2nd battaltion Canadian Scottish."

Aside from the research on Pearkes, which appears sufficiently formidable, and his teaching responsibilities, Dr. Roy has his finger in a few other pies.

There is, for example, a chapter he will be writing on another book called Military Traditions of Canada; and in collaboration with a professor at the University of Ottawa, the editing of a book of documents on the Riel Rebellion.

He is also overseeing the production of the bibliography of British Columbia and will be co-hosting a seminar on national defence in January. And even in the summer holidays there are numerous duties in connection with his department at Uvic.

He is active with the Alumni Association, a director of the Maritime Museum and is a member of the B.C. Historical Society, The Canadian Historical Association and a Fellow of the Royal Historical Society.

Relaxed humor Belies the image

Despite the fact that he regularly burns the midnight voltage, he manages to find time for picnics with his wife, their teen-aged daughter Franklyn, and friends, and to indulge in a bit of chess, swimming and gardening.

He is able to remain a completely relaxed person with a lively sense of humor that does a lot to belie the usual concept of a "dry" historian.

This Land-Lubber All at Sea

By PAT DUFOUR

Ross R. Olney's biggest mistake when he wrote his book Let's Go Sailing was he didn't do it.

He describes his book as a handbook for young sailors from 10 years up. He proves that he, himself, is a babe-in-arms when it comes to sailing.

LET'S GO SAILING by Ross R. Olney. Prentice-Hall. $4.95.

Anyone who can talk about "parking" a boat has no place as a sailing authority.

The Californian freelance writer obviously researched his subject — but in books that were out of date many years ago. He uses terms that would rile a Bus Mosbacher, skipper of the America's Cup winner Intrepid, or any other less-seasoned yachtsman because of their antiquity.

In an effort to wax nautical he uses terms that went out with the days of the square-riggers, obviously unaware of the streamlining phrases used by modern sailors. An example: He refers to the curve of the luff of the sail. This is more commonly known as the draft.

Anyone who has more than a nodding acquaintance with "rag haulers" knows them to be opinionated cusses. Yet Olney blandly states "sailboats are pushed by the wind" when old hands are still debating that their crafts are pulled, not pushed.

With his concern to appear knowledgeable, Olney fails to use the terms "port" and "starboard" (the sailor's backbone) until he defines them in his dictionary.

Many words, such as "privileged" and "burdened" are rarely used in Canada or even in his own country.

Olney also has failed to bone up on his rules of the road. His statement that a sailboat always has the right of way is as outdated as it is dangerous.

Although geared for the beginner, some parts of the book are sophisticated. Take, as an example, the wind-barometer table which even seasoned sailors would find informative. I find it hard to believe that any 10-year-old could begin to understand it.

Handbooks on sailing are hard to come by because the job of compiling all the necessary information demands time and experience. Olney appears to have short-changed on both.

If he hadn't he would have discovered fellow American Pat Royce's Sailing Illustrated which has become the sailor's Bible for many yacht clubs, boating schools and public classes.

Royce spent five years researching his subject, including many hours under sail and power, proving the point that experience is the best teacher.

CAROL NEBLETT

SEASON TICKET SALES ZOOM

This could turn out to be the Year of the Symphony if present trends continue when Victoria Symphony Society box office opens Monday morning.

Nearly 1,500 season ticket sales have been chalked up already as a result of the spring pre-sale campaign.

And while it is again possible to purchase any six concerts as an alternative series to the full season, most people to date have chosen the full season.

Under conductor and music director Laszlo Gati, the orchestra has grown steadily in popularity, new successful ideas have been incorporated — such as the international recital series — and some of the world's foremost artists have been brought to the city.

●

Of the latter, beautiful golden voiced Carol Neblett, New York City Opera soprano, Mari-Elizabeth Morgan, Canadian pianist winner of the Bach International competition, and Vladimir and Alicia Mitshenko Lancman, Soviet husband and wife violin-piano team, are notable.

Among the legendary personalities are Andres Segovia, Jean-Pierre Rampal, world's greatest flutist, ~~cellist~~ Rostropovich, violinist Christian Ferras and pianist Malcuzynski.

Full season subscribers have the advantage of seating priority for the Segovia recital, special price on tickets for Royal Winnipeg and Flamenco ballet performances and for the series of six international artist recitals.

There will be two overtures to the regular season of 10 concert pairs which opens Sept. 28-29.

The first will be a free concert Sept. 7 at 2:30 p.m. in Beacon Hill Park. Conductor will be Thomas Mancini from Victoria's twin city of Palm Springs.

●

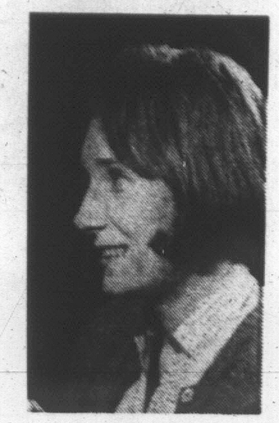
Included in the program will be Handel's Royal Fireworks Music, clarinet and flute concertos featuring Barry Moncur and Jan Menting of the orchestra, Strauss' Tales From the Vienna Woods and Mendelssohn's Midsummer Night's Dream Wedding March.

Two weeks later, on Sept. 21 and 22, the Royal Winnipeg Ballet will perform at the Royal Theatre.

Dance will also lower the curtain on the Symphony Society's banner 29th season, with Ciro and his Ballet Flamenco coming from Madrid in April for two performances.

There has been a change in box office hours for 1969-70, with the service available at Eaton's ticket centre daily from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Any Wednesday, Bastion's Opener



KAREN AUSTIN

The Broadway comedy hit, Any Wednesday, by Muriel Resnik, will be Bastion Theatre's 1969-70 season opener at McPherson Playhouse.

It replaces the originally scheduled Marge Adelberg musical based on Gogol's Inspector General, That Man From Moscow, which will now be seen in the spring of 1970.

Returning to Victoria to rejoin the Bastion company and play a lead in Any Wednesday, is Karen Austin. Before leaving the city several months ago she appeared in productions of Barefoot in the Park, The Taming of the Shrew and The Hostage.

Two others in the cast of four will be well known Victoria players Margaret Martin and Ian McIntyre.

Also on next season's schedule are Adelberg's The Pied Piper as a family Christmas musical, Shakespeare's comedy, As You Like It, and Samuel Taylor's comedy set in French Canada, The Happy Time.

The season's last three shows will be given special student presentations as the second season of Bastion's youth theatre program.

First children's show of the fall and winter season will be Sinbad by Chris Wiggins, which will play five Saturday matinees beginning Sept. 20.

Six Weeks of Studying Culminated in Concert

Piano solos and ensemble playing of a high calibre, together with outstanding string artistry, marked the program given recently at Newcombe Auditorium by students of the Victoria Summer School of Music.

The concert culminated six weeks of special study sessions in strings and piano conducted by internationally known Canadian teachers, Clayton Hare and his wife, Dorothy Swetnam.

Before starting the Victoria Summer School seven years ago, the couple had been at the Banff School of Fine Arts for 12 years. At present Clayton Hare is on the faculty of the University of Maine.

Students appearing on the program came from nine cities across Canada and the United States, as well as Victoria.

Young pianists from this city were Gwendolyn Carnell, performing the Chopin B minor Prelude and Linda Marshall who played Andante and Rondo Capriccioso by Mendelssohn.

Twelve year old Heline Barker was another Victoria pianist who was a soloist on the program and also accompanied a seven year old cellist from North Vancouver, Desmond Hoebig.

FINE VIOLINIST

One of the notable performances was given by Victoria violinist Ronald Comber. Another fine young violinist was Anne Mayoh, of Brandon, Man., whose father is head of Brandon University's music department.

Other string players, some of whom also participated in the orchestra numbers, were violinists Patricia Finegan, Portland, Ore., Rebecca Gould, Sackville, N.B., David Quinn, Saint John, N.B., Heline Barker, Victoria, and Sylvia Gibbs, Moose Jaw, Sask.; cellists Myra Delay and Michael Shaw, Portland, and violists Marguerite Dolsen, Vancouver and Carol Fisher, Hingham, Mass.

Stratford Edition Will Take U.S. Tour

By JACK GAVER
UPI Drama Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — The United States will get its first extensive look at a production of Canada's highly esteemed Stratford Shakespearean Festival Foundation during the 1969-70 season.

The play is English Peter Luke's London-New York hit,

"Hadrian VII," still current New York. But it is the Stratford production, and not the New York one, that will make the long national tour, beginning Sept. 4 at the Shubert Theatre in Chicago.

The Canadian version is playing all this month at the Avon Theatre in Stratford, Ont., which is the small downtown house of the Foundation whose major Shakespearean effors are presented in the large arena-type auditorium on Stratford's outskirts.

This first commercial venture into the United States will return a percentage of the gross to the Stratford Festival people. The tour will be sponsored by Lester Osterman, who produced "Hadrian VII" on Broadway. The schedule calls for a 38-week trek.

ONLY VENTURE

Previously, Stratford's only venture below the border has been last March and April when its productions of "The Alchemist" and "Hamlet" were seen for brief engagements in Chicago and Ann Arbor, Mich. These visits were sponsored and not in the commercial vein.

While the Stratford cast will consist mostly of Canadian and British actors little known in this country, the star of "Hadrian VII" is the familiar and popular Hume Cronyn.

Although Cronyn was born and reared in Canada, his acting career of some 35 years on the stage and in films has been confined almost wholly to the United States. This is his first job at Stratford.

"Hadrian VII" is an engrossing, extremely literate drama about an eccentric British author of the early 20th century, Frederick William Rolfe.

He is best known for his novel, bearing the title of the play in which the protagonist (Rolfe, obviously) imagines that he becomes a most unorthodox Pope.

If it comes your way, see it by all means.

As for Stratford penetrating the United States, it seems that it is about time someone arranged for one of its Shakespearean productions, which generally have drawn favorable notices over the years, to make an extended United States tour, including a big stopover in New York.

National Orchestra Selected

OTTAWA (CP) — Members of Canada's first national orchestra were announced Friday by Jean-Marie Beaudet, director of music at the National Arts Centre.

Conductor of the 44-piece orchestra is Mario Bernardi, previously musical director at Sadler's Wells Opera in London, England.

Concertmaster is Toronto-born violinist Walter Prystawski, who returns to Canada from Switzerland, where he has been concertmaster with the Lucerne Festival Strings and the Basel Symphony Orchestra, and head of the violin department at the Lucern Conservatory.

His assistant is Sydney Mann, formerly assistant concertmaster of the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra and concertmaster of the CBC Vancouver Orchestra.

The musicians were chosen during a year of auditions in Canada, the United States and Europe. Youngest is a 19-year-old, Elaine Klimasko of Hamilton, who has played three seasons with the National Youth Orchestra and is currently studying at the Royal Conservatory of Music at Toronto.

The new orchestra assembles Sept. 21 and makes its debut Oct. 7 in the opera house at the National Arts Centre.

BLACK ANGEL of mercy is represented in this fiberglas sculpture "Angeline Celeste" in front of Ottawa's National Arts Centre. The figure, which appears to be walking down from the sky, is by Art Price and is done on the theme that "black is good, white is evil." Hands were broken off by vandals on the opening day. Asian Art—Elegant, Often Mysterious

By GORDON RICE

A very impressive showing of the arts of Asia, elegant and often mysterious, is the special feature of the summer show at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

I think those who have seen the Brundage Oriental collection in San Francisco will not be disappointed with the Art Gallery of Victoria's small but choice collection which fills the main hall at 1040 Moss Street.

The tight, severe brushwork of the early Japanese court portraits might be interestingly compared with some 16th century English court portraiture, or the works of Holbein.

In fact, Feudal Japan, with its knights, armor, castles, fiefs, its monks, priests, and devotional shrines, offers many interesting points of comparison with medieval and renaissance Europe.

DEVOTIONAL

The religious art of Japan, China, Tibet, and India, represented here, is perhaps more religious than it is art, that is, has been created primarily for devotional or meditational purposes.

And yet the art quality alone is so much more intense and concentrated than what one finds in both Eastern and Western art today that one feels something precious (in both art and religion) has been lost by us.

Perhaps it also indicates that the deeper forms of art and religion are much closer than we suspect.

Take a look at the two 14th century scrolls of Jizo, the Japanese Buddhist deity who was the protector of little children.

One picture is a harmony in olive, black, and tans, the other in blue and jade and rose. There is a very sparing use of gold and black line, in the drawing of the contours of the figure in both.

Even in the more disintegrated scroll of the two there is a marvelous life that becomes more and more apparent as it is contemplated.

That something from a remote country six centuries ago can speak to us so forcefully is miracle enough. But then one turns to the Chinese pottery of the Tang era (618-906 AD) and finds really astonishing life and vitality.

This important era of Chinese Civilization (and one of the late ones!) is represented here with bowls, tomb figures, and a monumental multicolored camel of great power.

In a later Chinese work, Ma Ch'uan's "Flowers," one still finds much of that fine workmanship, the steady unwavering concentration on every detail that gives interest and intensity to every section of rock, grass, leaf, or petal.

Now the Tibetan work is something else. One hardly knows what to say of it.

There is a Tangka, a mandala or meditational picture, with a kind of drawing which is at once "loose" and precise. No one can doubt the depths of this mystical work of Buddhist art.

How numb our brains must be in comparison with the visionary insights of these Tibetan artists!

INTENSE

The colors, intense but never gaudy, re-enforce this feeling. The ornate flamelike quality of the Tibetan metalware here, too, seems as if it were full of inward invisible fire.

See too the sketchbooks by Kano Tanyu, the Japanese whose few deft, wet strokes of the ink brush suggest all the monumentality of the great mountain and fog scrolls.

Or the landscape by the monk Zosan, where all virtuosity is absent, replaced by a deep humility in the presence of nature.

RICH, HEAVY PAINT

In the Canadian collection, one should see pictures such as Lismer's "Hillside, Nova Scotia," where the freshness of a spring landscape is conveyed entire in rich, heavy paint.

Varley's "Portrait Sketch" conveys in each stroke of slightly shifting hue another plane of the face, in a restrained search for the essentials of the portrait statement.

Also admirable are the durable, rough-hewn qualities of Max Bates' homage to the "Workmen," and his harmonies of blacks and grays.

Fine European works, Flemish, Dutch, and English, and a room full of contemporary art, Canadian and International, including many new purchases, will be passed over here for lack of space.

Bra-less Friday A Bust

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A woman engineer who says brassieres are "non-functional and uncomfortable" was fired after urging female employees at an aerospace firm to come to work Friday without their bras.

"Bras are horrible things, and I thought calling for a 'bra-less Friday' would be fun," said Joan Andre, 39, who lost her $18,000-a-year job at General Dynamics in suburban Pomona as a manufacturing and engineering supervisor.

Mrs. Andre, a 39-29-43 divorcee, says she "never, never, never wears bras."

She said she was fired Thursday for "conduct unbecoming a member of management" after urging for a week via bulletin boards that the company's 2,200 women employees come to work "unstrapped" Friday.

A General Dynamics spokesman said apparently not many women had the courage.

"We don't know of anyone working without their bras," he said.

It's More for Adult Ears

Aesop's Fables read by Boris Karloff; WL1205.

Oscar Wilde Fairy Tales read by Basil Rathbone; WL1207.

These records, reissued under the inexpensive Wing label, ostensibly for children, offer much more pleasure to the adult who can use a young acquaintance as an excuse for buying them.

Nonsense Verse is best appreciated by those mature enough to realize how brilliantly nonsensical it is. A completely uninhibited rendering of "Beautiful Soup" by a wailing Lillie sets the mood of fun-loving involvement found in every recitation by the talented trio Beatrice Lillie, Stanley Holloway and Cyril Ritchard.

Ritchard makes the most of the Mad Gardener's Song, balancing each verse of this Grade XI poem with two distinct voices, the latter representing the poet's conclusion as distinct from the apparitions. A similar dialogue ability couples with an excited pace brings life to "You are old Father William" a favourite learn-by-heart work since the day it was published.

A gurgling Jack Lemon giggle adds to Ritchard's triumph with "Will you walk a little faster?" and a catch in the voice brings out the pathos of his "Walrus and Carpenter's Song."

SNOUTY SNUFFLES

Stanley Holloway makes a charming pig, limiting himself to occasional snouty snuffles but every now and again his voice takes on the tone of Old Sam of Ramsbottom fame.

Beatrice Lillie adds her own distinctive rhythmic variations to the well-known lines and her final "but . . ." in Humpty Dumpty's Poem is a masterpiece of interpretation.

The side devoted to Lear's verses has several well-known poems and some of his most famous, but scarcely ingenious limericks. Rhymes like "stuffin — enoughin — muffin" and word-coinages like "Purpledicular crags" show this author's interest in runcible words.

Diamond In the Groove

To a child the Red Knight's Song would fail to suggest a close proximity to Wordsworth's Leach-Gatherer and so half its humour would be lost. This is why the record is of more appeal to adults.

The second record contains forty-two of Aesop's best-known mini-morals. The language is simple, the parallels obvious, the allegory straightforward and the phrases nicely balanced but their value as cliche-foundries makes them most delightful.

HOW BARE

"Blow hot and cold, pride goeth before a fall, to cry wolf, one man's meat is another man's poison, familiarity breeds contempt, honesty is the best policy" how bare the language would seem without these and many more.

A reference to bad breath as a test of tact makes the fables as modern as the latest commercial but lines like "what is bred in the bones will never out of the flesh" show them socially outdated and contrary to modern ideas of educational advancement.

The sentimentality, detailed description of grief and pain, unbelievable self-sacrifice and heavenly intervention cannot rob the "Happy Prince" of its basic sweetness.

The Selfish Giant depends upon similar sentimentality but there is charming fancifulness in the elements' determination to winterbind the childless garden all year. In the macabre tale of the Nightingale and the Rose, Wilde allowed his notorious cynicism to triumph.

All three stories are read sympathetically by Basil Rathbone, whose lovely voice brings out the beauty of the language in which they were written.

Between the Cusses and Stew There Stands a Helluva Man

By JIM HUME
Times Reporter

BOAT HARBOR — If John Wayne ever drops in for dinner, serve him beef stew.

It's his favorite dish when preceded by a good salad and when the stew itself is well laced with potatoes and macaroni and there's home-baked corn bread to mop the plate.

Don't worry about what kind of wine to serve. Wayne will probably bring his own Windsor Vineyards Burgundy, "bottled expressly for the Wild Goose."

'Bottled Expressly For the Wild Goose'

hawk talk on Vietnam to parental love being the essential ingredient in child raising.

Earplugs may be needed from time to time, especially if "sunuvabitch" and "goddamm" are too rich for sensitive ears.

The big man — and he is big. — rasps out his opinion in a voice that invites challenge. He loves a mental and verbal battle as much as he appears to enjoy the inevitable saloon fight in his many western movies.

"They talk about de-escalation. Well, we de-escalated in Korea and look what happened. We didn't settle a damned thing and we're still looking at each other down gun-barrels.

"If we had the guts we could settle things. We have a hot line to Moscow. Just lift the phone and tell 'em, one more gun to North Vietnam, buddy, and we're gonna bomb Moscow.

He Loves a Mental And Verbal Battle

"It's wishful thinking to think we can sign an arms treaty with Russia while they're still sending guns to kill our boys."

You don't have to wonder about old gun-smoke's opinions.

"We've gotta realize we're fighting a war over there. A war. And we're trying to fight on friendly terms on friendly territory."

Youngest son John Ethan, 7, is heading over the side of the Wild Goose for the dinghy and a quick trip around Boat Harbor, five miles south of

'Can't Eat Beef, Can't Eat Candy'

"I wasn't hungry, dad."

"Then whatta ya eating that candy for? You can't eat beef, you can't eat candy. Eat your food, mister. You pull a chair up to the table, you eat. If you can't eat, you tell me so I can get you checked out to see if your sick or sumthin.

"Okay, on your way — and watch yourself in that boat."

The voice still rasps, the volume is the same. But it's softer and you don't have to ask if he loves his children.

Across the wide after-deck of the Wild Goose (136 feet long, 26 foot beam and powered by two 500 horse-power diesels) Claire Trevor (Mrs. Milton Bren) looks up from her needle-point.

"He's just a boy, John. He's fine."

It's the gracious voice of the young woman who catapulted to fame with the slow-speaking cowpoke after the remake of "Stagecoach."

kan waters. Milt is the catalyst among the 15 passengers and crew.

He's the needle, the taunter, the man who gets conversations going again should they falter or appear heading for the mundane.

"Did you ever see 'The Ship of Fools'?" he asks. "They based the book on this trip. That's what this is, a ship of damned fools. You're the first intelligent person I've talked to since we left California what seems years ago."

It's almost dusk at Boat Harbor. Oysters are being barbecued on the upper deck, a prelude to the stew. Pre-dinner drinks, Wayne-poured, are wide-screen and technicolor.

"Milt," snarls Wayne. "You're being damned sarcastic again. Why don't you be kind and gentle for a change and say nice things about people?"

'A Belt Or Cuppa Coffee'

"I've tried that," answers the man who produced 'Topper' among other movies. "I've tried it and, you know, I finish up being as boring as the rest of you."

The trip won't be dull with Wayne and Milt Bren on board. Their cut-and-thrust talk is based on many years of friendship.

"We keep each other honest," is the way Bren puts it.

"Charge your glasses, gentlemen, the salad's on the table and chow's down as they say in the infantry," comes the command from cavalry captain Wayne.

'I'd Rather Win Good Hand of Poker'

They're trying to change the system. Hell we're all trying to change the system. Trouble is we're not quite sure what the hell the system is.

"Used to grow my hair long when I was a kid. Got paid for it though. Hey, this stew is goddam good."

It is, but between spoons you ask if he enjoys acting.

"He can't act," snipes Bren. "He may be a card player and a lover, but actor he ain't."

"He's right," says Wayne. "Hate to admit it, but he's right. Acting's not my racket. I'm a card player. In my mind I'm the greatest sunuvabitch of a gambler in the world.

Wayne's next movie will be a western called "Undefeated" and due for release this fall. So will the four movies to follow be westerns.

"Kinda type-cast," says John. "The best movie I ever made was 'True Grit.' Showed me as I am. A little older, sloppy, overweight, very accurate."

Then it's back to the heavier stuff and the Wayne theory on what's wrong with America.

"The trouble is that for too long we've been listening to the articulate minority. I used to call myself a liberal. Now I have to call myself a radical liberal.

"It's time we stopped listening to these bastards. Since they started yelping they've managed to turn everything decent this nation has ever done into a complete shambles.

"They talk about pulling out of Vietnam, but they never stop to think of the million's who'll die if we do pull out. They don't give a goddam."

Claire Trevor smiles.

"Be kind," she says. "He talks very tough, but he couldn't hurt anyone. Sometimes, maybe, he's just too outspoken."

He doesn't come back.

An hour later the survivors also fade. Some to staterooms on board, some ashore.

departure for northern points unknown.

"A belt or a cuppa coffee?" asks Wayne as you step on board.

He understands why you take the coffee, gratefully.

"Good of ya to drop by, Jim. Really enjoyed it. Best stop so far. I'll be back. This is great country. One of the few left that likes us."

The Wild Goose slides stern first out of Boat Harbor, turns for Dodd's Narrows and the north.

And you realize that while you may have disagreed with almost everything he said on world affairs, you have also been in the presence of an honest man, as raw, as uncompromising and as open as the old west he so often portrays.

By JUDITH MARTIN

WASHINGTON (WP) — I spent the 50's being in love with Ernest Hemingway (I think I'm over the worst of it now), and Ernest Hemingway's idea of a woman was Marlene Dietrich. This week I went to see her in the hope of learning something.

There were a lot of people ahead of me, learning things. Mostly, they were learning about what it is to have an unrequited love affair with a mystique, and about the dangers of peeking backstage.

I'm glad I never met Ernest Hemingway.

For the people who did go, the worst part probably will be when they play her records again and feel the old magic creeping back.

People like the old couple who were dining in the restaurant where Miss Dietrich was being given a press party, and who timidly approached to say that they had always admired her.

PRIVATE PARTY

'J——, are you just a fan?" she asked. "This a private party. You can't just wander into a private party."

Or the man who stood beside her with a photograph to be autographed until she demanded, "What paper are you with? You've been chasing me with that thing all night," and he had to admit he wasn't a newspaperman but a policeman.

Miss Dietrich turned her eyes heavenward and exclaimed for everyone to hear, "A policeman! Good God."

There was the amateur photographer who tried to snap her picture "because you're beautiful," she tersely explained that was no excuse for violating her privacy.

And the man who simply said, "Miss Dietrich" to get her attention—she whirled around at that and said, "will you shut up?"

Perhaps with what has been, by all accounts, 66 good years Miss Dietrich was entitled to a bad day. The day she arrived in Columbia, Md., to publicize an appearance in the Merriweather Post Pavilion of Music was bad from the beginning.

First, she had wanted to have the one press conference she permits at each stop to be held at the airport on her arrival.

It was explained to her that the Washington press, used to standing in the rain waiting for presidential arrivals, was not likely to turn out for an entertainer.

Another problem about her arrival grew from the clause in her contract stating that she must be met with a limousine.

The pavilion people were rather pleased when they found a car which seemed to reflect her elegance—a Phantom I Rolls Royce—but Miss Deitrich was horrified when she heard about it.

A 1929 car would date her, her hosts were informed; they must provide a new limousine.

They tried to fill her other requirements. A station wagon—"not a truck"—was provided for her 14 pieces of luggage.

The brand of champagne she drinks was ordered, and so was her brand of scotch.

PINK ROSES

When her desire for pink roses was made known, it was arranged that pink roses will be sold at performances to fans who wish to pelt her with them in tribute.

Before she arrived at the press party, an informal plea was made on her behalf.

'She is so wonderful, and I hope you'll be good to her. You know, we are having trouble filling the place, and it's such a shame."

At her request, picture-taking was limited to a period before questioning and dinner, but the session wasn't over soon enough, and Miss Dietrich began to slap her gloves against her palm and call for the public relations woman.

"Get them out of here," she said. And then the woman famous for seeing what the boys in the back room will have added, "I hope they've all had enough drinks by now."

BONY FACE

The annoyance seemed to be purely behavioral. Beneath her theatre make-up—the bright blonde hair, the heavy eyelashes, the mouth enlarged by lipstick in curves above the lipline—the marvelous bony face was still there.

Another irritating thing was in the way reporters kept referring to her performing in night or supper clubs.

"I never perform in supper clubs," she said. "J——. I perform in theatres. There's a big difference."

There were many things she refused to discuss, and others that no one dared ask her.

She did agree to talk a bit about fashion, however, and spelled the name of the designer of her silk suit: "C-H-A-N-E-L."

Of her fabulous costumes, she said, "It's much easier to sing in a little black dress, but people wouldn't like it."

"They have a boring life, most of the people who come to the theatre, and they wouldn't like it."

Asher Double Plays it Cool

By PETER BUCKLEY

LONDON (CP) — Every stage-struck London dolly dreams of being plucked off the street for a glamorous career in the movies. For Bonnie Neilson of Hamilton, the dream has come true.

The 19-year-old Canadian was spotted on the street here as a "double" for British film star Jane Asher and has been signed for a part in a movie with Miss Asher called The Buttercup Chain.

Bonnie is playing it cool.

"I'm not going to sit and structure myself a great career from this," she said later. "It's a little bit sudden, but there have been hints of more work when this is finished."

Miss Neilson, with long orange hair and what she describes as "dark, fudgy-blue eyes," is to play a 16-year-old version of Miss Asher—in a section of the film involving a series of flashbacks to the earlier lives of the leading characters.

"I can't really tell how long a part it will be when the movie is finished—a few minutes, maybe less," she said.

GOES TO McMASTER

As every Beatles fan knows, Miss Asher was a steady companion of Paul McCartney before he decided to marry a young American divorcee. Jane Asher has been continuing her own career since the break-up.

Miss Neilson came to London after completing her first year at McMaster University, where she had kept up a long-standing passion for the stage by taking roles with both regular and avant-garde drama groups.

"I think I was a kind of scruffy angel at the age of two in a Christmas play," she said. "I've always loved acting."

'NOT ENOUGH MONEY TO PLAY CNE'—BENNY

NIAGARA FALLS (CP) — Comedian Jack Benny said Tuesday he would not perform at the Canadian National Exhibition unless he was "broke."

"A few years ago they tried to get me to do the CNE," he told a news conference. "They offered me a lot of money. But there isn't enough money in all Canada to make me talk across a racetrack and be miserable for 10 days."

He said Bob Hope, one of this year's stars at the CNE grandstand show, can "shout those jokes across the racetrack and up to the crowd . . ."

"He can, but I can't," said Mr. Benny. "If they could make it more intimate or if I was broke, I'd do it."

Producer Dies

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — William Goetz, 66, who during a 35-year-film career produced such movies as Sayonara and Song of Bernadette, died Friday at home. Four months ago he underwent surgery at the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., for an undisclosed ailment.

Major Indexes In Erratic Trend

By STEPHEN ZARNETT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The Canadian stock markets held firm ground despite a barrage of world financail news this week. But the major indexes moved erratically.

The markets began the week with a fractional loss, then inched their way up while awaiting world reaction to the devaluation of the franc by the French and news that the British pound was under pressure.

In late-week trading, they posted sizeable gains following an announcement by Prime Minister Trudeau that the federal government was curbing its spending to fight inflation.

Some analysts say his announcement had only a mild effect on the markets since the planned reductions were no more than had been anticipated.

But the rally following his speech, combined with the remarkably-stable reaction to the franc devaluation, may have shown investors the internal strength of the market and lured some back into a buy-and-selling mood.

Many investors are reported staying on the sidelines observing—unsure of their course of action. The are hoping the markets have found their lower-ceiling point and are beginning a general uptrend.

Observers say that despite the light volume throughout the week, there are indications the market may move sideways or up on a short-term basis. But the long-range forecast is for a general downtrend.

After the French announcement last Friday, the gold index soared more than 29 points in active trading, but sagged more than nine Monday as investors liquidated most of their gold issues following favorable reaction to devaluation by world markets.

However, by mid-week the British pound came under heavy pressure and the gold rush resumed, with the gold index rising more than nine points following an announcement from Britain that the balance-of-payments trade figures for July showed a deficit, and talk of a pound devaluation was at its height.

Meanwhile, western oils gained strength by mid-week and caught fire in late-week trading.

NEW $2 MILLION PLANT PLANNED BY RAYONIER

VANCOUVER (CP)—Rayonier Canada B.C. Ltd. today announced it will build a new $2,000,000 woodroom at its Woodfibre Pulp Division plant, 30 miles north of here.

G. S. J. Bowell, company president, said the new plant will incorporate new concepts of design and equipment to use smallwood, or small salvage logs, which were formerly left in the woods.

The company said the new plant will add 21 employees, and is designed to produce 50,000,000 board feet of lumber and 100,000 units of chips per year.

Declines Ahead On Wall Street

NEW YORK (AP) — A late-blooming rally helped the stock market reverse an early decline and cut its losses this week, but it did not provide enough of a boost to prevent declines from finishing ahead of advances and the popular averages closing mixed.

Of 1,705 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange, 851 declined and 719 advanced, compared with 698 declines and 866 advances the previous week. There were 25 new highs for the year and 234 new lows, compared whith 20 new highs an 190 new lows the week before.

The Dow Jones industrial average lost 3.58 on the week to close at 820.88. The week before it was off 2.13. The Associated Press 60-stock average, which dipped 1.8 the week before, closed this week off 2.8 at 289.4.

However, Standard and Poor's 500-stock index gained .06 to 94.00, and the New York Stock Exchange index of some 1,200 common stocks was up .08 at 51.98. They had risen .47 and .28 respectively the previous week.

The market's weakness in its early sessions was partially attributed by analysts to some concern over what effect, if any, the devaluation of the French franc might have on other currencies, such as the British pound. But they said they felt the market took the news with "relative calm."

Argus Research Corp. notes that the devaluation — which was announced after the market closed Aug. 8 — "appears to have been brilliantly timed and carefully-gauged to minimize disruption of the world monetary system."

Turnover for the week on the Big Board came to 44,384,690 shares, compared with 48,971,330 shares the previous week and was the lowest since 41,036,990 shares changed hands in the week ended July 25.

The five most-active stocks on the Big Board during the week were Roan Selection Trust, off 2⅝ at 4; Natomas, up 15 at 96; Benguet, up ⅛ at 22¼; Texaco new, up ⅝ at 33⅝; and Reading and Bates, up 3⅛.

Signs of Cool-Off in U.S. Economy

By HOBART ROWEN

WASHINGTON (WP)—Two of the government's chief inflation fighters reported signs this week that the overheated U.S. economy is beginning to cool off, and a series of new federal statistims tended to confirm their reports.

Treasury secretary David M. Kennedy, in a dedication speech at the Philadelphia mint, said "there are indications that these policies (of fiscal and monetary restraint) are beginning to pay dividends."

But Kennedy warned that the anti-inflation program could be vitiated by the tax-reducing features of the House tax reform bill which "as it now stands may go too far in reducing needed revenues."

Coincidentally, Federal Reserve chairman William McC. Martin was telling a group of securities analysts in Atlanta, Ga., that there is not "less inflation momentum in the economy than there was three months ago."

Martin was reported to have said "there has recently been steady progress" in the fight against inflation. Martin had no prepared text, while Kennedy's speech was released here.

SLOWDOWN IN LOANS

Federal reserve officials here could not add to Martin's summary assessment. But in a quarterly report this week to the Joint Economic Committee, Martin cited a reduction in the growth rate of business loans in the second quarter, especially in the real estate area.

Secretary Kennedy took pains not to suggest that the battle against inflation was yet won. He cited, in fact, the 6½ per cent annual rate in the consumer price index in the first half of the year, and warned that this "intolerable inflation" could not be allowed to go on.

He promised that the government would continue to hold "a tight rein on federal spending in the immediate future, and a suitable degree of monetary restraint."

The tax bill, Kennedy said, does not go far enough in limiting tax preference for some millionaires. But on balance, he said, he was worried about the proposal's tax-reducing features.

Treasury officials are at work at calculating exactly the net revenue loss of the bill as it goes to the Senate. A staff analysis is expected to show that after the first full year, individual taxes would be reduced by $7.3 billion, while corporate taxes would be increased by $5 billion, unless the House bill is changed.

Kennedy's speech was the strongest indication so far that the administration would make an effort to get modifications in the Senate which would both extend the tax "take" of reform measures, to assure that no one would escape taxation, as well as to reduce tax concession, presumably in the middle-income levels.

- Corporate profits after taxes slipped in the second quarter to an annual rate of $51.6 billion from $52.2 billion in the first quarter. It wasn't a big drop — but the first quarterly slippage in a year.
- Revised gross national product figures showed that there was almost no real growth in the economy. A $16.1 billion increase to an annual rate of $924.8 billion (an all-time record) represented a boost of 1¾ per cent over the first quarter, of which inflation accounted for 1¼ per cent, leaving the physical, or real growth in output at only ½ of 1 per cent.
- Personal incomer rose by another $6 billion in July to an annual rate of $752.3 billion, matching the revised June advance. But $2.5 billion was due to the third and final stage of the federal pay raise enacted in December, 1967. In the private sector, wages and salaries rose by a rate of $2 billion, only about half of the June advance.

Bank Assets Disclosed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Royal Bank of Canada had total assets of $9,699,823,000 June 30, compared with the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce's $9,239,005,000, the official Canada Gazette has reported.

Total assets of the other seven chartered banks were: Bank of Montreal $7,776,455,000; Bank of Nova Scotia $5,761,471,000; Toronto Dominion Bank $4,906,927,000; Banque Canadienne Nationale $1,604,293,000; Banque Provinciale du Canada $800,284,000; Mercantile Bank of Canada $197,296,000; and Bank of British Columbia $54,729,000.

Merger Details

VANCOUVER (CP) — A $1,680,000 merger transaction between Alcove Holdings Ltd. and Great Pacific Industries has been completed, the companies announced Friday.

Marcel Prefontaine, president of Alcove Holdings, and James D. Kadlec, chief executive officer of Great Pacific, said in a joint statement the transaction involved sale of all Alcove shares for 140,000 common shares of Great Pacific.

New Savings Bond Issue in October

OTTAWA (CP) — The current series of Canada Savings Bonds, first offered for sale last October, will be withdrawn from sale Aug. 31 and a new series offered this October, the finance department announced Friday.

Details of the new savings bond offering will be announced next month.

The current series, the 24th, offered investors an average return of 6.75 per cent a year if held to maturity on Nov. 1, 1982. They carried special coupons to pay compound interest so that a buyer would bet $250 for every $100 bond if no coupons were cashed before 1982.

It is usual for the government to withdraw the current series of bonds from sale at the end of August in preparation for a new issue. Sales of the current issue topped $3,125,000,000, but this included the reinvestment of large amounts originally put into lower-paying issues.

Japanese Satisfied With Roberts Bank

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Japanese inspection team said Friday that although deepsea port facilities at Roberts Bank are satisfactory now, they will be inadequate in a couple of years.

"I must make it clear that we are most satisfied with the facilities at Roberts Bank now," Hisamoto Cho, of Nippon Kokan Kabashiki Kaisha, the group's spokesman said through an interpreter.

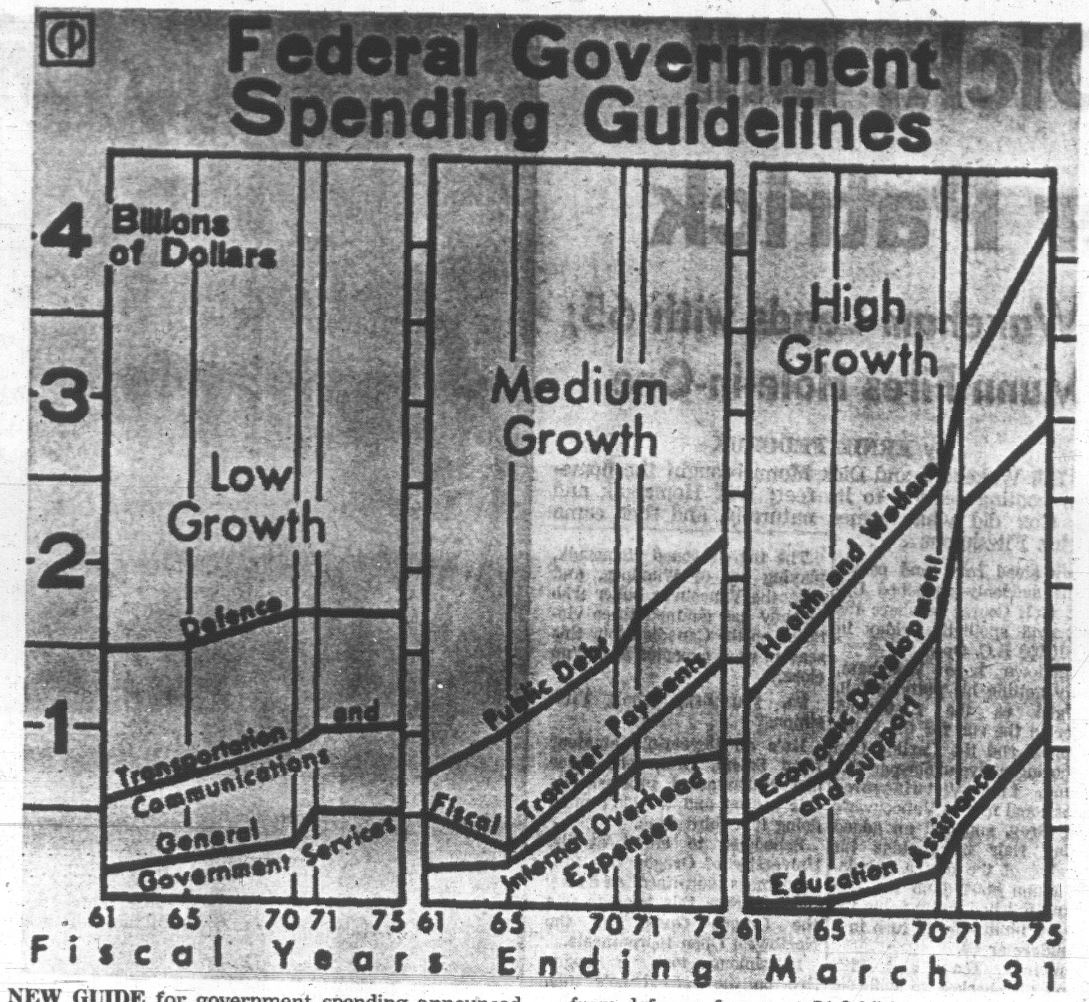
"However, in view of the progress of the shipping industry, the time may come that Roberts Bank's facilities may not be big enough to accommodate the bigger vessels.

"We are hoping that the shipper (Kaiser Resources) will always keep in mind the possibility of bigger vessels, and will improve the facilities as needed."

The comments on the loading facilities, scheduled for completion in November, were made by nine Japanese steel executives at a breakfast.

The group arrived here Wednesday for a three-week visit to inspect coal delivery systems in Canada. The visit follows signing of a 15-year contract by Japan's major steelmakers for 150 million tons of coking coal from Canada.

He said 100,000-ton ships would be used at Roberts Bank next year.



NEW GUIDE for government spending announced by Prime Minister Trudeau Wednesday sets priorities for growth in several sectors through the fiscal year ending March 31, 1975. The priorities range from defence, frozen at $1.8 billion for three years, to continued high growth in health and welfare, economic development and support, and education assistance. (CP Newsmap)

Macdonald

Macdonald Tobacco Inc. has bought Ontario Tobacco Co. Ltd., a Toronto pipe tobacco processor and cigar manufacturer. Price was not disclosed.

New Imperial

New Imperial Mines Ltd. had net income of $2.19 million for the six months ended June 30, increased nearly five times from the $440,000 recorded in the corresponding period of 1968.

Operating profit from mines in the Yukon Territories was $2.8 million, up from $993,033 and per share earnings were 34.3 cents.

President Arnold Pitt said new monthly production figures were reached in May and June and improved copper prices resulted in record earnings.

BACM

BACM Industries Ltd. reports net income of $1.77 million for the first six months of 1969.

The company said common shares earned 85 cents in the six-month period and reported operating revenue at $43.5 million, an 18 per cent increase from the comparative period last year.

BACM said reports from last year were not precisely comparative because of changes in the company's fiscal year and new acquisitions.

Great Basins

Great Basins Petroleum Co. of Los Angeles has made an agreement in principle to acquire two other oil exploration and production companies — Columbian Northland Exploration Ltd. and Guyer Oil Co.

Both are based in Calgary.

The agreement calls for issuance of about 1.6 million shares of Great Basins stock to shareholders of Columbian Northland and 1.15 million shares of Great Basins to Guyer shareholders.

Bond Issue

Investor interest is being shown in a new issue of 30-year debenture bonds about to be detailed by the province of Ontario.

The $100 million issue is expected to yield 8.4 per cent, payable in U.S. funds, but the exact price and coupon will be announced next week. Maturity date is Sept. 1, 1999.

The last Ontario government bond issue to come out, maturing in 1994, yielded 7¾ per cent.

Cassiar

Cassiar Asbestos Corp. Ltd. reports first half earnings of 47 cents per share, net. In the same six-month period last year Cassiar earned 37 cents, restated to be comparable with 1969.

Molson's

Net earnings of Molson Industries Ltd. for the fiscal quarter ended June 30 were $4 million or 35 cents a share, off from $4.33 million or 38 cents a share, for the corresponding figure last year, the company reported Friday. Sales amounted to $79 million, up from $77 million.

Dominion Glass

Dominion Glass Co. Ltd. reports a profit of $1.4 million for the six months ending June 30 compared with a profit of $913,975 in the same period last year.

Sales were up 5.2 per cent to $33.2 million from the first half of 1968.

Bill WALKER

Certainly I know what they're saying — that Uplands, born in 1923, will never be the same. But I know WHY, they only think they do.

Oh sure, the pros in the British Columbia Open are tearing the course apart, two 63s on Thursday, half a dozen 65s, more par-busting Friday, and likely tomorrow, too.

Then there's the big move set for next spring. The old is out. The new is in. New holes at 14, 15, 16, 17, a longer course, unused acreage being put to work, and all current records headed for the gravel pit.

But it wasn't always so good.

Matter of fact it was touch and go in the dirty thirties, few members, less money and no hope. One purchase agreement made with the Hudson's Bay Co., had to be rescinded and the club generously forgiven a $1,200 debt.

"This allowed us to carry on," said Bob Williams, 36 years a member, 34 years a director and 14 years a president.

Green fees were 50 cents, memberships went a-begging, and when war came a deal was made with the army that free golf would be provided the soldiers if the course was spared the likelihood of army manouevres.

Then in 1946, the sun rose again. Uplands bought its present site, for the second time, from the HBC for $60,000, which was $20,000 under another bid. A previous bargain had been made good "for which we should be eternally grateful" says Williams now.

●

The old clubhouse had its memories, its poker games, and sore losers.

Probably the most famous of these was the foursome that one morning, early, after a long night of losing, ripped out all of the plumbing fixtures.

And who doesn't recall the old Cadboro Bay Road skirting the fence on the 18th, and the telephone poles on the side. That car you used to see weaving its way between poles and fence was a 1928 McLaughlin Buick. "There was lots of room," says the driver today.

Or the time that Vic Lea arrived at the course in a spanking new soft-top Model "A" (or was it "B") Ford. There were few saints around in those days and John Wren, now club pro, qualified easily. He rigged up a smoke bomb while Lea was on the course, and all the sinners sat around waiting for the fun.

Vic returned, wiped a speck or two of dust off the bonnet, stepped in, hit the starter (it was a new car!) and "boom."

To hear Wren tell it now:

"Vic went straight up, came down running and was 50 yards away before we could stop him."

●

Wren, himself, was a cyclist in those days and he used to hitch a hang-on ride on Williams' Buick if he could. One day he grabbed the door handle, and they were off. At Lansdowne, Williams turned right and Wren, bicycle, door handle and door went straight on down the hill.

When they planted the trees on the first, second, sixth and seventh fairways in 1940, Alex would water only the ones he decided had a right to be there. And when Joe Sayward once put a heel mark on the 18th green, Alex not too politely ushered his departure. And the fight was almost on. Just as it used to flare up from time to time between Alex and another greenskeeper, both of whom were deaf.

"How often we had to pry them apart," Williams recalled.

There was infamy, too, Bob Morrison recalled.

It was a normal interclub match with Port Angeles and the match-ups had been designed with evil purpose in mind.

●

Williams, who had never been noted for his reticence at expressing his displeasure with a golf shot, had earlier been described to his opponent as "The Reverend" Williams.

"So please watch your language," Port Angeles officials confided to their members, who also played the game with deep sincerity and words to match.

Meanwhile Williams similarly had been cautioned: "Bob, your opponent is really a Reverend, but he doesn't want you to know . . . well, you understand."

And so the match began between the pair whose every shrug had an air of profanity. And it went along nicely until the fifth when Williams, short with his second, and, stubbing his chip shot, muttered out loud.

Recognizing the remark, his opponent couldn't believe it. "What did you say?" he asked in disbelief.

Bob repeated it, with more emphasis, and they completely enjoyed themselves the rest of the afternoon.

So how can Uplands ever be the same?

Wakeham Leads with 65; Munn Fires Hole-in-One

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Bill Wakeham and Dick Munn brought the hometown rooting section to its feet; Wilf Homenuik and Bob Cox did what comes naturally, and then came Patrick Fitzsimons . . .

They stood front and centre on the suddenly-toughened Uplands Golf Course to share the first-round spotlight Friday in the $10,000 B.C. Open.

Hometown hope Wakeham, finally getting his putts to fall, emerged as the first-round leader in the run for the $2,000 top prize and the Carling Cup by scoring a five-under-par 65.

Munn, the Victoria-reared professional now at Vancouver's Point Grey, supplied an added opening flair by making his last shot of the day a hole-in-one. Munn started on the 10th tee and finished up by acing the 206-yard ninth hole to turn in a one-under-par 69.

Homenuik, Cox and Fitzsimons all checked in with 66s to stand a stroke behind Wakeham as the field teed off this morning for the second round. The low 100 scorers, and ties, advance into Sunday's third and final round.

The tour-seasoned Homenuik, playing out of Winnipeg, and Cox, the Vancouver belter who already has claimed three victories on the Canadian tour this season, were expected to be "up close."

So, you ask, who's Fitzsimons?

He's an 18-year-old amateur from Salem, Ore., who twice has embarrassed professionals this season and wouldn't mind doing it a third time.

Scheduled to enroll at the University of Oregon this fall, Fitzsimons surprised classy fields earlier this year to win the Oregon Open and the Northwest Open tournaments.

Fitzsimons took a bogey five on the second hole then birdied the 7th, 8th, 15th, 17th and 18th for his four-under-par score. It gave him a six-stroke lead over Gorge Vale junior Dave Mick in the scramble for low amateur honors.

Breeze Put a Chill on Par-Breakers

Apart from the performance of the leaders, Friday's story was a stiff breeze that put an abrupt halt to the wholesale assault on Uplands' par-35-35—70 figures. Tougher pin placements also counted but, mostly, it was the wind.

Only 11 players were able to break par Friday. In comparison, 28 pros and a flock of amateurs slammed par in Wednesday's pro-am event.

Wednesday's par-busters included the record-breaking 63s posted by Ontario professionals Moe Norman and Brian Bond. Norman had a one-over 71 while the 22-year-old Bond scrambled for a 75 on Friday.

Vancouver Island shooters fared reasonably well. In addition to Wakeham, Cowichan's Norm Boden and unattached assistant pro John Morgan of Victoria broke par by posting 68s along with Ken Fulton, the Montreal pro whose parents live in Trail.

In the 69 bracket were ex-Victorians Munn and Skip Williams, Dave Clayton of Toronto and Mike Dudik of Bainbridge Island, Wash. Williams played at Uplands as a junior and now is professional at Port Colborne, Ont.

Victoria Club's Vaughan Trapp and Dave Ewart of Port Alberni were among the 10 to match par. The others in that bracket were Doug Reid, Len Collett, Phil Giroux, Billy Wright Jr., Al (Tiger) Feldman, Tom Everham, Bob Kidd and Gary Pitchford.

He hit 17 out of 18 greens and "putted better than I have at any time during the past six weeks."

Winner of approximately $4,500 so far this season, Wakeham took only 29 putts to score one stroke better than he did in Wednesday's pro-am. He rammed in five birdies and 13 pars and hasn't taken a bogey in his last three rounds over the 6,215-yard course.

The defending champion, Wakeham concedes he should have "a big psychological edge for the final 36 holes."

"Knowing this course has to give me a big edge," Wakeham said, standing near the 13th tee. "Take this hole," he said, pointing down the 13th fairway, "I never have any doubt as to which club I'll use off the tee."

The 308-yard 13th has a cement-lined hazard about 220 yards away. There's a one-stroke penalty against anyone putting his tee shot into the pond.

Most of the top players in the field have cleared the pond magnificently in the previous two days as ideal weather conditions prevailed. Friday's breeze was directly against the drivers, and many resorted to using irons in order to avoid a penalty stroke.

"I know what I can do here," added Wakeham, "but the wind had a lot of the guyes guessing."

LESSON FOR FATHER, TOO

While Vancouver professional Wayne Vollmer was helping 10-year-old Dwayne Wakeham with putting stroke, Wayne's poppa, who has been plagued with mediocre putting most of summer, was all ears. Victoria's Bill Wakeham apparently heard good advice because he later had putter behaving at Uplands Golf Club Friday as he started defence of B.C. Open championship by firing five-under-par 65 for one stroke lead in first round. (Times Photo by Bill Halkett)

Roughies Ride to Win On Interception Route

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan's defensive team put on the pressure and the Roughriders rode interceptions to a 24-8 victory over Calgary Stampeders in a Western Football Conference game Friday.

The Roughriders got touchdowns from rookie halfback Bobby Thompson and quarterback Ron Lancaster and added three field goals, two converts and a single by Jack Abendschan.

The rugged defensive line of the Roughriders had Stampeder quarterback Jerry Keeling scrambling most of the night and the secondary intercepted four Keeling passes.

Calgary's lone touchdown came in the fourth quarter on a six-yard Keeling pass to Ted Woods. Their other two points came on singles by Dave Cranmer and Larry Robinson.

"Our defensive line came up big for us, and I mean everybody along the line," Keys said.

"Their defence made it real tough for us," Duncan said,

LEAD SASKATOON . . . . . . IN PONY PLAYOFF

Carnarvons Win Opener

WHALLEY — Victoria's Carnarvon All-Stars will be only one victory away from a trip to the Pony League baseball world series in Washington, Pa., when they continue their Western Canada final tonight.

Carnarvons grabbed the lead in a best-of-three playoff with Saskatoon Red Sox Friday night as they scored two runs on a bases-loaded error in the final inning to snatch a 5-4 victory.

If the Red Sox square the series in tonight's game, the deciding battle will be played on Sunday.

Neither club managed to put together much of a batting attack and each team finished with only three hits. Errors and bases on balls played a big part in most of the scoring and the Victorians collected four unearned runs.

Leading 3-1 going into the final inning, Carnarvons saw their advantage evaporate as the Red Sox took advantage of two errors and four bases-on-balls to score three runs and take a 4-3 lead before Carnarvon relief pitcher Peter Michelin finally quelled the uprising.

Red Sox gave it all away in the bottom half of the frame. John Burrows started things for Victoria with a walk. Robbie Parris was hit by a pitch and Steve Forsland walked to load the buses.

Wayne Simpson then hit a ball to the Saskatoon shortstop, who threw high to the plate, allowing Doug Buchanan, who had entered the game as a runner for Burrows, to score the winning tally.

Vancouver Stars Set Swim Marks

Miss Dockerill swam the 200-metre backstroke in 2:54.4. Her mark slashed 1.2 seconds off the old Canadian native record held by Marjon Wilmink.

Meanwhile, Mahony—swimming under the banner of the Canadian Dolphin club of Vancouver—set a Canadian open and Canadian native record for the men's version of the 200-metre backstroke.

Mahony was clocked in 2:30.5, 2-10 of a second faster than the Canadian open mark held by Jose Fiolo and 7-10 of a second better than his own Canadian native mark.

For Mahony, it was his second record in the five-day meet. On Wednesday, he established a record of 1:08.7 in the 100-metre breaststroke.

BREAKS OWN RECORD

Other record breakers in the men's section were: George Smith of Edmonton and Bob Kasting of Lethbridge, Alta. Smith broke his own Canadian native record in the 200-metre individual medley in 2:13.4. He also set a new Canadian open and Canadian native mark in the men's 400-metre individual medley with a time of 4:48.0.

Kasting established his record of 54.5 in the 100-metre freestyle, breaking the mark of 54.8 held by Glen Finch of Winnipeg and Gilchrist.

On the women's front, 18-year-old Susan Smith scored two firsts, three seconds and four thirds and was top women's competitor. Susan, sister of George, set a record Thursday night in the women's 200-metre freestyle with a time of 2:31.7. Her mark was 1-10 of a second better than that of Elaine Tanner who held the old record.

Angela Coughlan of Toronto's University Settlement club etched her name into the record books with wins in the 800-metre freestyle and 400-metre freestyle events, breaking her own record both times.

If the national swimming finals are any indication, Western swimmers should dominate the Canada Games which begin Sunday in Halifax. Of the records that were broken, only three were by swimmers from the East.

BRITISH DEADLOCK NET SERIES

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain evened its Davis Cup interzone final with Romania at 2-2 today when Graham Stilwell defeated Ion Tiriac 6-3, 6-2, 6-4.

The outcome of the series, to decide who meets the United States in the challenge round, depended on the final singles match later today between Britain's Mark Cox and Ilie Nastase.

Floyd Takes Lead

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Ray Floyd, 26, Friday added a five-under-par 66 to an opening 69 for a 36-hole total of 135 for the lead in the U.S. Professional Golfers' Association tournament.

Floyd, who has two tour victories, was seven-under-par for two rounds and carried a one-stroke lead over South Africa's Gary Player into today's third round.

Two strokes behind Floyd was Bunky Henry, who scored 68 for a 137.

Jack Nicklaus posted a 68 and was in a three-way tie at 138 with U.S. Open champion Orville Moody, 68, and Don Bies, who electrified the gallery of 18,135 with a seven-under-par 64, a course record.

Battery Powers Molsons

A battery powered Molsons Friday and the final sparks of the Major Men's Softball League season are due to fly tonight.

Luckies and Langford meet at Central Park this evening in a game that rings down the regular-season curtain.

Friday, pitcher Glen Bullen and catcher Bill James powered Molsons to an 8-0 shutout over Red Lion Inn. Bullen did the blanking with a four-hitter, James powered the attack with two singles to drive in three runs.

Paul Pounds Payoff Shot For Denfords

Paul Morrison delivered the payoff blow Friday at Heywood Avenue Park as Denford Electric retained hopes for a victory in a zone elimination senior "B" softball tournament at Heywood Avenue Park.

Denfords twice came from behind to oust Langford Drywall from the double-loss-elimination tourney with a 6-5 triumph. Morrison saved the day for the Electricians when he hit a two-run single with two out in the last half of the seventh inning.

Once-beaten Denfords now meet undefeated Century Inn for the right to advance into the provincial playoff.

Needing two victories to reach the B.C. tourney, Denfords will meet Century Sunday at 2 p.m., and hope to force a deciding battle at 6 p.m.

Krause, tagged for four home runs — three of them in succession — five days ago at New York, rebounded Friday by hurling the Athletics to a 4-0 victory over Detroit Tigers and pounding a three-run homer for good measure.

The right-hander, who has won five of his last six decisions, tamed the Tigers on four hits as Oakland remained two games behind first place Minnesota in the American League Western Division race.

Four of Krausse's seven hits this season have been homers. He hit one against the Yankees last Sunday, but was beaten 5-1.

Friday night, he connected against Mickey Lolich in the seventh inning after the Detroit southpaw walked catcher Dave Duncan intentionally with two out.

Elsewhere in the AL, Minnesota Twins blanked Washington Senators 2-0; Baltimore Orioles edged Seattle Pilots 2-1; the Yankees nipped Chicago White Sox 2-1 and Cleveland Indians topped California Angels 2-1 in 12 innings. Boston was rained out at Kansas City.

DODGERS EXPLODE

Los Angeles, whose offence usually is limited to a walk, a stolen base and a sacrifice fly, trotted out the big guns in the National League and Montreal felt the impact.

The Dodgers trounced the Expos 9-2 as Andy Kosco, Bill Sudakis and Willie Davies clouted homers and Willie Crawford drove in three runs with a pair of singles.

But the Dodger thunder was nothing compared to what went on in Atlanta.

A heavy storm forced a three-hour delay of the St. Louis-Atlanta game in the first inning. When play resumed, Ron Reed, who had retired the Cardinals in order in the first, continued to sail through the St. Louis order. He set down 15 straight batters before allowing a hit and finished with an 8-2 victory.

Elsewhere in the National League Friday, Philadelphia Phillies shut out Houston Astros 1-0, Pittsburgh Pirates rapped Cincinnati Reds 5-1 and San Francisco Giants shut out Chicago Cubs 3-0. San Diego's game at New York was postponed by rain.

STOLE THREE BASES

Just to insure that their image stayed intact, the Dodgers got three stolen bases, two by Maury Wills. But there was the unmistakable power image in the late-inning homers. Kosco and Sudakis both connected in the seventh and Davis in the ninth.

The Dodgers broke the game open with a four-run fourth inning with Crawford driving in two of the runs on a single.

Wills singled, stole a base and scored in that inning after doing the same thing in the first. Both times, hits by Crawford brought him home.

Broker, Student Charge to Front

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — A smooth-swinging stockbroker and a bespectacled student tied at six-under-par 210 for the third-round lead in the Canadian amateur golf championship Friday.

Dick Siderowf, 32, of Westport, Conn., a cool and experienced United States Walker Cup golfer who has "never won anything big" fired a 70 to tie Wayne McDonald of Hornby, near Oakville, Ont.

McDonald, 21, a student at the University of Indiana, shot 69, the best round of the day and said he putted his "best in a long time."

Gary Cowan, 30, of Kitchener slipped to a 75 and Leonard Thompson of Laurinburg, N.C., took 76. Cowan and Thompson shared the second-round lead with Siderowf.

McDonald holed three good birdie putts—"all about 25 feet"—on the first, fifth and 16th. He had two more birdies on the par-five 11th and 13th.

TOURNEY ENDS TODAY

The 72-hole medal-play tournament ends today, with an 18-hole playoff Sunday if there is a tie.

Johnny Johnston led the Vancouver contingent with a 75 for 222, tied with Nick Weslock of Mississauga, Ont., who had a steady 73.

Mercedes-Benz announces the "over-engineered" car.

An automotive expert who previewed the new Mercedes-Benz models said they were "over-engineered."

Mercedes-Benz eliminated the squeaks and rattles of loose body bolts by eliminating body bolts. Instead, the "unitized" body chassis is welded together at 10,000 points.

These new cars bristle with "over-engineered" features like these; features that make every Mercedes-Benz a pleasure to drive and a sensible car to own. Wouldn't you rather spend your money on engineering than status?

You owe it to yourself to look into one of the new cars from Mercedes-Benz. They're on display in our showroom now. Come in for a demonstration drive today.

DOUG COCHRANE

Gritty Quebec Club Forces Extra Game

By STEVE HUME

An alert Valleyfield, Quebec, team parlayed a second-inning balk by Vancouver Collingwood pitcher Doug Cochrane into an extra game in the Canadian Little League baseball final Friday night.

Playing cool, precise ball before approximately 3,500 fans at Hampton Park, Quebec scored a 4-2 win after opening a three-run lead in the top of the second inning.

The Valleyfield win forced a sudden-death playoff this morning because Vancouver had not previously lost a game in the double-elimination series.

Key to the early Quebec rally was a balk called on Cochrane with one out and the bases loaded. The call forced in one run and obviously caught the 11-year-old Vancouver pitcher by surprise. Before he could recover his composure, two more Quebec runners scored, one on a wild pitch.

Cochrane made a nice covering move on the wild throw and cut off the in-coming runner at home, but dropped the ball on the tag just as the plate umpire was signalling an out.

The disastrous inning had a noticeable effect on the Vancouver team. Before the game ended, Collingwood players committed six errors.

The young pitcher for Collingwood regained his composure later, however, forcing out three straight Quebec batters in the third and allowed only one runner to reach base — on an infield error — in the fourth.

Vancouver's first run came in the bottom of the fourth, when Ken Osterreicher tagged pint-sized Quebec pitcher Guy Provost for a line drive to the left field fence with two out.

Robbie Hannah then smashed Provost's offering to the centre field fence to score Osterreicher, but was responsible for snuffing out the rally when he misjudged his speed and was caught out trying to take second.

Rochefort Big at Bat for Quebec

He added an insurance run for Quebec in the top of the fifth when he drove home Robert Gauthier with two out.

It was ironic, for Cochrane had just looked extremely poised in fanning one batter and catching a blistering line drive directly at the mound from the next without batting an eye.

Vancouver got a dangerous rally going in the bottom of the fifth. They loaded the bases and scored their second run on a single by Harold Nassey.

The Collingwood team seemed to settle down in the latter part of the game, and the infield snuffed out an abortive Quebec rally in the top of the sixth with grim efficiency.

Short stop Randy Ackerman made up for an earlier error when he retired the Quebec side with an outstanding double play at second and first.

But two runs short in the bottom of the sixth, Vancouver's heavy hitters couldn't solve the spin on Provost's deliveries. Hannah went out on an infield fly, while Osterreicher and Ricky Price both grounded out to second baseman Daniel Maheu.

Ironically, the losing pitcher came out on top in the statistics department. Cochrane, who gave up five hits, was credited with striking out eight batters and yielded no walks.

Angling Closures

Chinook salmon are heading for streams and rivers on spawning runs and federal fisheries officials have ordered closures to angling around some river mouths as a conservation measure.

Nimpkish River is closed from Flagstaff Island to the highway bridge until further notice.

Koksilah River has been closed from the CNR dock to Clem Clem bridge until further notice and the Salmon River will be closed between Alert Bay Air Services wharf and Sacht's Bridge at the highway from midnight Sunday until further notice.

Williams to Pilots

Givan on Way To Long Reign?

Pacific North West Seniors' Golf Association members today are hailing Harry Givan and, in the same breath, can't help but wonder if the Seattle golfer is embarking on a long-term reign.

The former U.S. Amateur king and Walker Cup player successfully defending the seniors' crown Friday by defeating Mel Aspray of Spokane, two up.

On the strength of past credentials and his consistent performance over the Oak Bay links this week, seniors expect Givan to take a good run at the domination record established by Ralph Whalley.

A former Seattle industrialist now living in North Saanich, Whalley won the senior crown seven times. Portland's Bill Blakely, beaten in Wednesday's quarter-finals, is a six-time winner.

Against Aspray, Givan came from behind three times before finally settling the match by winning the last two holes with pars. Givan shot an approximate 72, two over par, while Aspray was about five over par.

Rival Shows Weariness But Medallist 'Resting'

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — For Barbara Turnbull, the success she has against Marlene Stewart Streit in today's 36-hole Canadian women's match-play golf final depends on how well she is able to resist fatigue.

Although she insisted Friday that all she needed was a good night's sleep to be in shape, it was obvious that her two matches against Dulcie Lyle of Montreal and Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver had taken a lot out of her.

Both quarter-final and semi-final matches were played in the one day.

There is also the pressure and excitement of being in her first national competition for individual honors since she started playing competitively in 1957.

"I'm not that tired physically," said the Saskatoon girl after her upset 2-up win over the younger Miss Palmer. "It's more mental tiredness from having to concentrate so long."

Mrs. Turnbull's caddie said that as she came down the 18th fairway it appeared that she was just going through the motions of swinging at the ball. A lucky bounce on a 70-yard chip shot to the last hole assured her of the win over the tournament medallist.

Mrs. Turnbull's chip landed in front of a trap, but somehow bounced onto the green, landing about three feet from the pin.

Miss Palmer, whose approach was farther away from the cup, had no chance to catch up and conceded.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Streit was playing better than ever. However, both her matches—against Gail Harvey Moore of Vancouver and Sue Higgs of London, Ont.,—went all the way to the 18th hole, ending 1-up.

Both times, Mrs. Streit had to come from behind to win.

She was two-down after 12 against Mrs. Moore and four down after eight against Mrs. Higgs.

At one point in Friday's Streit-Moore match, Mrs. Streit's daughter, who has yet to reach her 10th birthday, approached her mother and asked:

"Mommy, how are we doing?"

"We're tied."

"Well then, why don't you untie it?" asked the daughter.

On the 18th, after Mrs. Streit had won, her daughter asked: "Mommy, what happened?"

Two Double Winners In Parks Net Tourney

Liz Ann Ogden and Craig Gerard won open singles titles Friday as finals of the annual public parks junior tennis tournament were played at Beacon Hill Park.

Miss Ogden, who defeated Lynn Davies in the singles final, became a double winner when she combined with Miss Davies for a doubles triumph over Elaine Archibald and Susan Richings.

Also winning two crowns was Greg Booth, who won the singles final for 11-year-olds against Keith Bridge and partnered Bridge to take the doubles championship in the 10-13 age division.

We suggest that before you spend any of your holiday money, you spend a little time with your travel agent.

It will rarely cost you a penny more and your travel agent could save your whole vacation.

And your travel agent can tell you what different hotels, resorts and restaurants have to offer. And what they charge for what they offer. Then you can choose what's right for you and your budget.

They can help you rent a car or find a guided tour that goes where you want to go. They can even advise you on which clothes to take along, where to write for a passport and a hundred other details.

We at CP Air can fly you almost anywhere in the world. And we want you to have a good time when you get where you're going.

If you're like most of us, you don't get more than one holiday a year. So before you go, talk to your CP Air travel agent. It costs nothing more to get more for your memories.

Red Airliner Flying Supersonic

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet supersonic airliner has been flying beyond the sound barrier "for extended periods of time" recently with no difficulty, a newspaper reports.

The plane, the TU-144, is ahead of the British-French Concorde in its testing schedule and is expected to be in service in less than two years. The Concorde has not yet broken the sound barrier.

Chief test pilot Eduard Elyan told the newspaper Sovietskaya Industria: "So far, everything is going normally—the plane is stable and it is obedient to the pilot's commands. All its systems are reliable."

Roman Temple Remains On Display for Tourists

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

LONDON — The remains of a Roman temple and Roman pavement are now on view to visitors below St. Bride's Church, off busy Fleet Street. And the underground display attracts thousands of tourists all year round.

It was produced by the blitz on London.

The German bomb that left the church a smouldering shell in 1940 also unearthed evidence that St. Bride's was built on the site of six earlier churches — one of them the Roman temple.

For the restoration of this historic building meant excavation, and this gave archaeologists the chance to explore. In so doing they added almost a thousand years to the known history of St. Bride's.

SYNONYMOUS

Standing adjacent to the massive Reuter building, St. Bride's is traditionally known as the newspaperman's church, and Fleet Street itself is synonymous with journalism.

Archaeologists discovered that the six earlier churches under 14th-century St. Bride's had formed extensive crypts.

These were subsequently used for burials, but in 1854, London was ravaged by a plague of cholera and 10,000 people died. Parliament therefore ordained there should be no more burials in the city of London and had the crypts sealed up.

The 14th-century building was improved by Christopher Wren, architect of St. Paul's Cathedral, and it lasted until the German blitz of Sunday, Dec. 29, 1940. By Monday morning, all that remained was the famous wedding-cake steeple and the charred outer walls.

For 18 years after, services were held in the vestry of the church every Sunday evening. Newspapermen wearing traditional russet gowns and carrying gold-tipped wands acted as sidesmen, escorting the rector to his pulpit and taking the collection.

MAKESHIFT SERVICES

Basically, it is still a Wren church, for Godfrey Allen, the architect in charge of restoration, had full access to Wren's own drawings and records.

"But it is no slavish copy of the old church," says Rev. Dewi Morgan, the present rector. "The church is now furnished in open, collegiate style and one of its most impressive characteristics is its sensitivity to light as it comes through the high oval windows."

When the time came to rebuild St. Bride's in 1951, the Bishop of London sagely appointed Rev. Cyril Armitage as its rector. Armitage, as precentor of Westminster Abbey, had organized the wedding of Queen Elizabeth (then Princess) to Prince Philip, Duke of Edinburgh, in 1947.

WORK IN ADVANCE

In so doing, he made friends with Fleet Street reporters, hungry for advance news of the wedding. The night before it took place, he held a conference of British and overseas correspondents and described the whole ceremony in such detail they were able to work on their description of the wedding in advance.

As rector of St. Bride's, Armitage determined that Fleet Street should have a 20th-century church worthy of its history. To this end he put "the bite" on some of The Street's wealthiest newspaper barons, including Lord Beaverbrook of Canada.

It used to be said that newspaper magnates ducked into shop doorways when they saw Armitage coming.

I found him a delightfully lighthearted cleric. He met his Fleet Street parishioners in pubs because that was the only place to meet them. The majority lived out of town and only came to London to work.

Saint Bride's Church was named after Saint Brigit of Ireland.

SUSPICIONS CONFIRMED

Booze Tests Out Well

WASHINGTON (WP) — A panel of booze experts has proclaimed what many of us have suspected right along: that booze, like sex, is apt to be good, and, at its worst, not bad.

We can thank Consumer Reports, a publication of the Consumers Union of the United States, Inc.; Mt. Vernon, N.Y., for this revelation.

Consumers Union and its unnumbered and anonymous panel of drinkers tested more than 40 bourbons and other whiskies and those people couldn't find a bad drink in the lot. The whole thing is exposed in the July issue of Consumer Reports.

The very worst drinks the expert drinkers drank were "fair," and they found only three of those drinks. Every other drink was "good" or "very good."

All of which speaks well for our bourbons, or, for the panel. The panel tested everything — taste, aroma, lightness and fullness of body, and the most interesting thing it decided was that you can't tell booze by its price.

For, said Consumer Reports, "In the light of these findings, bourbon pricing seems to reflect a good deal of whimsy."

And, it adds later, "If price is no quality guide, what about age? The panel results certainly don't seem to support the notion, implied on many of the lables, that old equals good. The bourbons claiming seniority in this project (seven or eight-year-olds) find themselves in the same overall 'good' category as relative youngsters of four years or so."

And how about that "bottled in bond" stuff?

"All that bonding guarantees, in fact, is a bourbon's minimum age and proof; it has no quality connotation at all."

Though neither price nor age seemed to make any impression on the panel of experts, Consumer Reports has this to say to the bourbon drinker:

"Clearly, then, reliable quality guides are not necessarily found on lables or on price tags. And perhaps not even in CU's ratings. Even experts with sensitive, trained palates must ultimately rely on subjective impressions. Your own preferences may not agree with theirs; indeed, the panelists themselves were sometimes at variance . . . It's your own taste you want to please."

Old Railway's Centenary Passing Without Notice

By MARGARET BARNARD

HALIFAX (CP) — The 100th anniversary of one of the oldest railways in Canada will pass almost unnoticed Aug. 19.

On that date in 1869, Charles Tupper, then member of Parliament for Cumberland and later a prime minister of Canada, opened the Windsor and Annapolis Railway: 80 miles of track connecting the two towns in the Annapolis Valley of Nova Scotia.

H. G. J. McGinn, manager of the Dominion Atlantic Railway, which took over the Windsor and Annapolis, said no celebrations are planned to mark the centenary of completion of the lie.

STILL OPERATING

However, he said the DAR, now a CPR subsidiary, will likely mark the 100th anniversary of its incorporation in 1895. The company took over both the Windsor and Annapolis Railway and the Western Counties Railway in 1894.

The steamboat Evangeline carried freight and passengers between the two towns on Annapolis Basin until the federal government, at a cost of $900,000, built a rail line to link Digby and Annapolis Royal in 1891.

Unlike some lines, the DAR still operates daily passenger service, as well as freight trains. It has 217 miles of main-line track between Halifax and Yarmouth through the Annapolis Valley and a 59-mile branch line between Windsor and Truro. It is linked to the main CPR system by a ferry across the Bay of Fundy between Digby, N.S. and Saint John, N.B.

Diesels replaced steam locomotives on the road soon after the Second World War. Passenger service nowadays is generally provided by self-propelled rail-diesel cars, known as "dayliners."

Though the anniversary of the Windsor and Annapolis Railway's completion will get no official recognition, the memory will be kept alive by members of the Scotian Railway Society.

The society, formed here last year, is dedicated to preserving the memory of steam railways in the Maritimes. Its members plan to set up a railway museum in Halifax.

Counter-Spy Legislation For Rhodesia

SALISBURY (Reuters) — The government Friday passed a law imposing heavy fines and jail terms on anyone convicted of revealing to foreign countries how industry in rebel Rhodesia is circumventing trade embargoes.

The new counter-espionage legislation adds to existing emergency powers the authority to fine offenders up to $2,500 and jail them for up to two years.

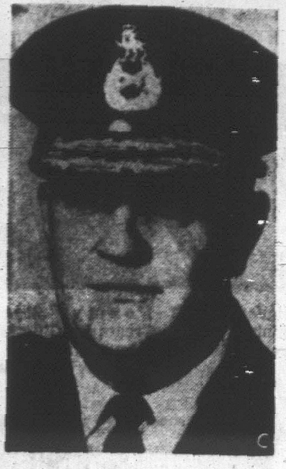
Lt.-Gen. Sharp Guides Defence Policy Change

OTTAWA (CP) — The cabinet has picked Lt.-Gen. Frederick R. Sharp from a handful of contenders to oversee Canada's changing defence policy following the retirement of Gen. Jesn V. Allard as chief of defence staff.

Defence Minister Cadieux ended months of rumours about Gen. Allard's impending departure with an announcement Friday that the 56-year-old French-Canadian will go on retirement leave Sept. 15.



ALLARD
. . . retiring

Gen. Sharp, his successor in the country's No. 1 serving military post, was one of about six career officers in line for the job. He was also the most likely choice.

Unlike Gen. Allard, who has an army background, Gen. Sharp, 53, came up through the air force in existence as a separate service prior to the mid-60s unification of Canadian armed forces.

Gen. Sharp, a graduate of the Royal Military College, commanded a bomber squadron in the Second World War and held a succession of top administrative posts thereafter.

Since January, he has been deputy commander-in-chief of the North American Air Defence Command, the Canada-U.S. military alliance for the defence of North America.

FACTOR IN SELECTION

Observers suggest the important NORAD job was a factor in his selection for the top job. The Trudeau government announced last spring it planned to emphasize North American defence at the expense of its overseas military commitments to NATO, the European defence alliance.

Gen. Sharp assumes administrative control of the military establishment at a time of rapid change.

He must preside over reductions in Canadian NATO forces, the personnel couplement as a whole and in the number and size of domestic military bases. All steps are facets of the new military look launched by the Trudeau government.

Gen. Allard, a husky six-footer, was the first French-Canadian to get the top job. When he stepped into it three years and one month ago, his principal task was to oversee the unification of the three services, formally accomplished Feb. 1, 1968.

His rise to eminence came amidst forced and voluntary resignations of several high-ranking officers opposed to the elimination of the divisions between the three separate services.

Gen. Allard's post-military future is still in doubt, although he has told one newspaper that he will probably take charge of Quebec House, the Quebec provincial government's office in New York. In this post he would promote U.S. investment in the province where he was born in Ste. Monique de Nicolet.

WENT ACTIVE IN 1939

He went active with the army in 1939 holding a regimental command in the Second World War in Italy and a brigade command later in Holland.

Gen. Allard was a field commander again in the Korean war. He holds the rare distinction of commanding a British division—the 4th of the Army of the Rhine in the early 60s. He is the first Canadian to do so.

Those who did not get Gen. Allard's job include Lt.-Gen. Edwin M. Reyno, 52, Gen. Allard's vice-chief, and Vice-Admiral Ralph L. Hennessy, 50, the chief of personnel. Others mentioned in the pre-selection guessing include Vice-Admiral John C. O'Brien, 50, commander of Maritime command and Lt.-Gen. Michael Pollard, 49, an air force type now comptroller-general.

These and other officers younger than Gen. Sharp could be in the running when the post becomes vacant again, possibly in a few years. The top man has no mandatory retirement date according to age as other officers do.

SHARP
. . . most likely choice

There's nothing firm to link the Allard departure with the new military approach of the Trudeau government. At the same time, it is widely believed that Gen. Allard does have reservations about the NATO pullback.

Philly Hoodlums Have Slain 29

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A judge has called for them to be publicly whipped. The district attorney labels them executioners. The police commissioner says he will flout the law to deal with them.

They are members of the city's juvenile gangs who have slain 29 persons in street warfare this year.

"We should bring back the old days of the whipping post," declared Judge Vincent A. Carroll of the common pleas court.

"That's what these gang members need. They should be humiliated right on the public streets with whippings in front of the eyes of the people they've been terrorizing."

The three latest murders were committed during a 24-hour period this week. Specter said the slayings were copies of the mobster murders of the roaring '20s in Chicago and New York.

Police Commissioner Frank L. Rizzo pledged: "We are going to violate their rights. We are going to sweep the streets and pick up entire groups."

North Coast Outport Eyed for Expansion

VANCOUVER (CP) — W. C. Mearns, chairman of the British Columbia Harbors Board, says that northern coastal Stewart is a likely site for a new port to handle mining and forestry trade in the north of the province.

Just back from Stewart, 100 miles north of Prince Rupert, Mr. Mearns said the site has several advantages.

It has deep water and a two-mile-wide foreshore fronted by mud flats which could form the base for port facilities, he said.

HEAVY FOG

From the south, the Portland Canal is often windy and foggy and is so deep that ships would find it difficult to anchor, he said.

From the north the Stewart-Cassiar road will come in through the Bear Pass and may need improving in several places, Mr. Mearns said, "but the difficulties are not insurmountable."

Timing is important in any development of a northern port but the province has traditionally opened up transport facilities before resource development, he said.

"A port is certainly going to be needed up there because there are some mineral projects under way by some major companies."

PULP NEEDS

"There is also a lot of wood up there and we know there will be a need for more pulp in the early 70s," Mr. Mearns said.

The harbors chief said he also flew over Alice Arm, also a suitable port site but one which has access problems.

Mr. Mearns said his report, along with previous studies, will be submitted to the provincial government.

Prisoners To Be Trained

SPRINGHILL, N.S. (CP) — A vocational training program, aimed at making the federal medium security prison here the prisoner training centre for the Atlantic region, is under way in this former coal-mining centre.

The new program, which will be housed in the soon-to-be-completed industries building, is expected to include courses in carpentry, plumbing, bricklaying and barbering.

Opened here in 1967, the prison has about 20-odd buildings on the 403-acre site with 32 acres inside a heavy wire fence.

Manpower and immigration department officials held an "opportunity day" for the inmates in June to acquaint them with the type of vocational training that would be available.

The introductory day is believed to be the first event of its kind ever conducted in a Canadian penal institution.

The opportunity day also provided inmates with a chance to find out what requirements are necessary for entering a particular trade, and the employment possibilities after completion of training.

The vocational program is a joint effort of the department of manpower and immigration, the provincial governments of the four Atlantic provinces and the John Howard Society of Prince Edward Island.

Officials felt the prisoners would get a more realistic impact from men "actually working in the various trades."

Church Becomes Old Museum

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — Old St. Patrick's Church here has been taken over by the Old Sydney Society as a museum for the city.

Keys and deed to the Gothic stone building were turned over to society president A. D. Muggah by the Roman Catholic diocese of Antigonish.

J. L. Martin of Halifax, director of the Nova Scotia Museum, presented a $1,000 cheque to the society to help in development of the Sydney museum. He also presented Sydney's whipping post of pioneer days, which has been in the Nova Scotia Museum for safe-keeping.

The old church, built in 1882, is situated on the Esplanade in the city's north end.

$1 Million For Schools Approved

School construction and improvement projects totalling almost $1 million for three Capital Region districts have been approved by the government.

The approvals authorize school boards to call for tenders on the projects.

About half of the $963,500 to be spent on the three local addition to Braefoot Elementary in the Greater Victoria district, to include 11 classrooms, a library, kindergarten amd administrative centre.

Additions to Margaret Jenkins Elementary and Bank St. Elementary will cost $27,000 and $190,000 respectively.

Saanich school projects to get approval include an $8,500 sewage job at Saanichton Elementary, a $130,000 addition to Cordova Bay Elementary and a $6,000 addition to North Saanich Junior Secondary.

Sooke school trustees were given the go ahead on calling of bids for a new four-classroom, $150,000 elementary school at Port Renfrew.

TUNING UP his 354-cubic-inch, fuel-injected Hemi for a blistering run down the Van Isle Dragways at Mill Bay is driver Don Christensen, centre, of the Roadsters Car Club of Victoria and his pit crew. He and a fast-growing, fast-moving crowd of dragsters will gather Sunday for a big meet at Mill Bay.

These Screeching Hotrodders Run the Straight and Narrow

By ED GOULD

"Stupid hotrodder. There oughta be a law against things like that," the old man mutters.

The guy in the jazzed-up jalopy next to you peals away in a cloud of burned rubber and exhaust and you do a slow burn in your family car.

They Frown On It

There is a law against "things like that" (five demerits against your licence for squealing your tires on Vancouver Island) and there's a place where dragsters and hotrodders can go "to do that."

"The trouble is that type of individual never comes to a drag strip, and even if he did his car probably wouldn't pass a safety test," says Rick Barry, an official at Van Isle Dragways at Mill Bay.

"We know we are in the back of peoples' minds whenever a driver squeals away from a light," Barry said. "But our club — and others like it across North America — frowns on that sort of thing.

"Those guys give the whole sport of drag racing a bad name."

Girls Help Out

The Van Isle club consists of about 20 young men in jobs ranging from policeman to plumber, ironworker to sales representative. Now in its third year, it's a private, nonprofit organization and sanctioned by the North American Hot Rod Association.

Its forerunner on the Island was the San Cobble strip on the old Bamberton Cement Co. road which was run by the Quarter-Milers Club of Victoria.

About 15 women, mainly wives and girl friends, also take part by running the clocks, keeping the records and making the scene a little less ruggedly male than it would otherwise be.

Anybody Can Join

Although there are no powder-puff races for the ladies, there is no discrimination against them competing in regular drags.

As a matter of fact, anybody, driving any kind of car, from Volkswagen to Mustang, can pay a $2 entrance fee (same price as a spectator) and get in the drag racing business. Prizes include a total of $280 cash plus individual trophies and contingent awards presented by sponsors and interested businessmen.

The only provision is that the car pass a rigid safety check. A 60-page rule book lays down regulations that would make more heads than wheels spin.

'Junk Piles'

"Most of the cars that race here are meticulously clean," Barry said. "The guys who drive them are proud of their vehicles and I'll bet the undersides of some of them are cleaner than the insides of most family cars."

Barry said it was the street racer who complains of a lack of time to race on a track when the real reason is their "junk piles" wouldn't pass safety inspection.

- Stock eliminator: this includes the majority of factory-produced, street-driven cars.
- Super stock eliminator: basically a factory-produced car but with engine modifications.
- Street eliminator: built for drag racing but licenceable for street driving. Highly modified engines.
- Competition eliminator: strictly a dragster with almost everything altered.

Lunatic Fringe

Barry, 24, is a salesman for CKAY Radio in Duncan. Three years with the club, he is a non-dragster who operates the starting lights.

To the average reader — that is, someone who has never been near a drag strip — it would appear to be a sort of Mr. Clean's version of where the action isn't. Don't bet on it.

To gain that distinction, drag racing features lots of near spills, smoke, noise and crowd excitement. Just what you'd expect where men in highly-tuned automobiles (and motorbikes) meet fender to fender over a chunk of fast asphalt.

"There's an element of danger that always draws some of the lunatic fringe," Barry admits, "but an ambulance crew is always standing by and drag racing is still not as dangerous as the roundy-rounds."

For men like Barry and Lanyon, who don't race and get paid nothing except a free entrance, what is the incentive to spend most of their weekends helping other guys drag?

"It's a hobby," Barry said. "And not much different from belonging to any service club in the respect that you are doing something for the community.

"Dragster clubs contribute something by helping young drivers take a positive attitude toward good driving and safety. And we like to think we are helping keep the dragsters off the street.

View Royal Vote Slated On Sewerage

Ratepayers in View Royal will be asked this December to vote on a $1,008,122 sewerage project which would have the unorganized area ready to connect with the Macaulay Point trunk and outfall when it is built.

Individual cost to homeowners for trunks and laterals would be $114 a year plus a levy of $35 towards the cost of regional benefits, ratepayers association president Len Stephenson said Friday.

"We are trying to work out a scheme of payments which would be less burdensome to the present taxpayers and would put some of the cost on future residents. That would lower the figures I have given," he said.

Present population of View Royal is 3,566 and the project is planned for an expected 10,000 residents by 1994.

First Condominium Opens Here Monday

The first condominium housing project in Greater Victoria will be officially opened Monday at 6 p.m.

Attending the opening ceremony will be Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis and Ald. Edith Gunning, chairman of the municipal housing committee.

The private project is at 1701 McKenzie Avenue. Condominium is the name applied to ownership of housing units, arranged vertically or horizontally, which are not on individual single-family house lots.

There will be 18 units in three groups of six. The first six are almost finished and all will be completed by Oct. 1, said a spokesman.

The units have three bedrooms and contain 1,200 square feet. They will sell for $21,950, or $3,300 down and monthly payments on two mortgages of $164.

Another condominium project is under construction on North Dairy Road in Victoria city.

Ald. Gunning said the project is the first one to use the provincial Strata Titles Act in Saanich. The price included appliances, drapes, fencing and landscaping.

There was a great need for family accommodation and developments such as these townhouses would enable more families to "own an attractive and quality home."

She hoped there will be more townhouses — provided they are on this scale and in various styles and thoughtfully designed.

Quebec Gagne Tout!

By STEVE HUME

Quebec's gallant Valleyfield team, playing with precision and a dugout-full of elan, captured its sixth Canadian Little League baseball championship this morning in a sudden-death playoff at Hampton Park.

Storming back from a first-game loss in the national tournament, Quebec forced an extra game with Vancouver Collingwood Friday night, then today dispatched the B.C. champions 4-1 before 2,000 fans.

Valleyfield scored all its runs during a five-hit burst in the top of the fourth inning, then killed Vancouver's attempted rallies with superb fielding.

When the first base umpire signalled the final out on a play by right fielder Pierre LaLonde, the Quebec team made a screaming victory circuit of the field, waving their red caps and carefully tagging home plate on the way back to their dugout.

BACKED BY FANS

They lined up on the first baseline to a roar of applause from the fans, who gradually swung behind the French-speaking youngsters during the seven game series.

The team had no eyes for Miss Teen-Age Canada, who presented individual pins to the winning players. They had eyes only for the blue and white pennant that symbolizes Canadian baseball supremacy for players 12 years old and under.

Next stop for Valleyfield is Williamsport, Pa., where they clash with Taiwan, champions of the Pacific and Orient region, in a sudden-death opener for the Little League World Series.

STAR PITCHER

Star pitcher Pierre Rochefort was not as spectacular as he had been in earlier games, striking out only three Vancouver batters and walking four, but back-up play by his infielders was outstanding.

Collingwood shortstop Randy Ackerman tagged him for a driving double to the centre field fence, and Rochefort walked the next batter.

When Vancouver pitcher Harold Nassey connected for a line drive to centre field it looked like a certain two runs. But Quebec's centre fielder Robert Gauthier made a brilliant shoe-string catch on the dead run and fired to first base for a double play.

Then in the top of the fourth a strategic use of the bunt brought home Quebec's winning runs.

After second baseman Daniel Maheu drove a single over second to start the Valleyfield rally, Pierre LaLonde beat out a bunt to the mound, and Daniel Santerre used another sacrifice bunt to advance the runners to second and third.

Gauthier was the next batter and he smacked a liner to centre field to score a third run, while the fourth came from a sacrifice bunt by Quebec's plucky catcher John Stewart.

ABORTIVE RALLY

In the bottom of the fifth, Quebec snuffed out the first of Vancouver's abortive rallies when Gauthier took Ackerman's fly ball to centre field and picked off Ricky Price trying to make it back to first.

Rochefort got into trouble again in the bottom of the sixth and once again his infielders bailed him out to end a dangerous Vancouver rally.

With two Vancouver runners on base and none out things looked serious, but Nassey fouled a high fly back into the screens and Stewart charged the wire for a spectacular catch.

BASES LOADED

The Quebec pitcher promptly got back into trouble when he walked in a run, left the bases loaded and still only had one out. Once again his infielders put the next two batters out, one on a pop fly, the other on a line drive to right field that was snagged by LaLonde and fired to first.

Quebec manager Michel Rochefort, who has seen Valleyfield teams take eight Quebec-Maritimes titles and six national crowns, said his team is one of the best ever.

"They eat baseball, they sleep baseball, they live baseball," he said.

"Since June 14 they have practised five hours a day, seven days a week. If anyone deserved to win this tournament, they did."

ADVANCE POLLS START THURSDAY

Advance polls for the Aug. 27 provincial election will be open next Thursday, Friday and Saturday for local constituencies.

The locations are:

First United Church Fellowship Hall, 930 North Park, Victoria;

Anglican Church Hall, 4th Street, Sidney;

Port Renfrew Community Hall.

The advance polls will be open between 1 p.m. and 9 p.m. on the three days. Voters who are unable to attend an advance poll in their own constituency may go to any other advance poll in British Columbia.

Applications Flood Uvic At Deadline

Applications to the University of Victoria came to a hectic close Friday, leaving admission staff between 400 and 500 applications still to be processed.

But high school students whose academic average was between 50 and 60 per cent won't know until registration week, which begins Sept. 8, whether they have been accepted.

"I'm going to sit down next week and analyse the over-all situation as regards first-year admission," Ronald Jeffels, dean of admissions, said today.

"We won't really know where we stand until the middle of next week."

COLLEGE PRIORITY

One factor affecting admission of low average students could be the number of grade 13 applicants who come here from Vancouver, Jeffels said.

He said some of the last-minute applications could come from some of 250 students enrolled in grade 13 summer courses at Vancouver City College.

Students who have taken up to three grade 13 courses may enter first-year university, and have priority over high school applicants whose average is below 60 per cent.

Results of exams written by the Vancouver City College students will not be known until the end of this month.

The squeeze on first-year applicants began at the end of June when Uvic announced that due to an inadequate provincial government operating grant enrolment restrictions would be imposed.

Total enrolment this fall will be limited to 5,000 students, including 2,000 freshmen.

A priority system was set up, giving precedence to freshmen with a high school graduation average of C-plus—67 per cent — or better.

The priorities gave rise to fears that students who had been recommended by high schools for university entrance on the basis of a C average — 60 per cent — would not be admitted.

But the university announced earlier this week that notices of admission have been sent to applicants in the first five priorities, including C average students.

In past years the university accepted anyone who graduated from high school with a 50 per cent average.

FIRE HAZARD COOLS OFF

Recent cool weather has dropped the fire hazard rating for southern Vancouver Island into the low-to-moderate range.

Only nine minor fires were burning at the latest report for the Vancouver Fire District, which includes Vancouver Island and the lower mainland.

Arthur Mayse . . .

NOBODY LIKES PAYING taxes, but at least we in Saanich have a lovely municipal hall in which to part from our pelf. The flowers that grace its well-kept approaches are bright as a taxpayer's blood. The little fish that swim in the artificial stream glimmer like pirate gold, and the fine modern hall is a monument to the soaring mill-rate.

If you detect a note of grimness here, it is because my love and I made the annual pilgrimage on Friday, and came away with a gaping hole in our bank account.

However, the pain was soothed by the very pleasant and sympathetic manner of the Saanich tax department people. They may not manage to send the occasional grumbler away smiling, but they are long on patience and diplomacy.

We found no great crush of taxpayers, a circumstance that deputy collector Kenneth Middleton views with mild concern. It could mean that Monday, the final day for payment, may bring a rush to the wickets.

★

Mr. Middleton has a message for Saanichites who pony up by mail. The payment mailed on Sunday, he warns, may not be delivered on the right side of the deadline.

Much better to get tax forms and cheque in the mail before 8 p.m. this evening, or failing that, deliver both on Monday.

Penalties for late payment are set by the province, not by the municipalities. They commence with a two per cent levy next Tuesday, and climb by stages to a grisly 10 per cent effective November 19.

If this year follows the usual pattern, 93 to 95 percent of Saanich property owners will have rendered unto Caeser when the hall closes at 5 p.m. Monday.

I asked Mr. Middleton if any taxpayer had ever made the symbolic gesture of writing his cheque on the shirt off his back.

This hasn't happened yet, but after enquiring of the department's older hands, the deputy collector learned that back in the days of the wooden hall on West Saanich Road, two improvised cheques were taken in.

One was written on the back of a laundry slip, and a gored citizen expressed his displeasure by making the other out on toilet tissue.

IF YOU HAPPEN TO BE A fishing visitor come from inland parts, make a point of checking up on B.C. salt water angling regulations. Failure to do so could prove costly.

Witness the case of a visitor from Calgary who took his son fishing in Saanich Inlet one day this week.

They caught a nice little fish, and chugged along in hopes of hooking a bigger one. Presently a federal fisheries patrol boat hailed and eased alongside. Turned out their catch was a grilse, or juvenile salmon, that measured a mere 11 inches. Minimum size limit is a foot.

The guy's fish and tackle were confiscated. What hurt worse was the brisk dressing-down which he asserts was administered in front of his kids.

My sympathies are divided here. It's rough to receive a verbal working-over, especially under those conditions, and I think a polite warning would have been enough.

However, the regulations are prominently posted at most boat liveries, and a checkup before the party shoved off would have saved the unpleasant encounter.

Doing The Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

School days looming ahead! . . .

If you're the mother of back-to-schoolers . . . now's the time to take your young firmly in tow and head for Wilson's Junior Shop . . . where you'll find simply everything needed to outfit them correctly . . . smartly . . . and, we might add, economically . . . because the quality built into Wilson's clothes makes them stand up to hard wear . . . and they are generously cut so they can be lengthened or let out as the need arises . . . Wilson's carry complete outfits for most of the private schools . . . Strathcona, Norfolk House, Westerham for girls . . . Cliffside, Glenlyon, Malvern, St. Michael's for boys . . . There's equally smart clothing for schools where a particular uniform is not required . . . Navy and brown tunics . . . blazers . . . nice wool kilts in tweeds and tartans . . . Cord slacks . . . dress pants in grey and colors . . . Arrow dress shirts for boys and girls . . . (those for girls made especially for Wilson's) . . . We noticed Burberry coats in either navy or brown, in a big range of sizes . . . and this is something every child should have, regardless of where he, or she, goes to school . . . Very nice sport jackets for boys, too . . . and English Gloverall duffle coats in five different colors and sizes from four to 20 . . . Shop for your child's school outfit now at . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Women are getting jumpy about skirt lengths. Not to worry, say we. This year anything goes!

Choice handcrafts at both Handlooms . . .

When we make our periodic visits to the Handloom now we feel we have to see BOTH shops so as not to miss anything . . . because these mostly one-of-a-kind handicrafts may be found not only in Centennial Square, but in the delightful new Empress shop too . . . In the latter, we were much intrigued with two Nore Bate handwoven wall hangings . . . one a mermaid, the other a clump of seaweed . . . done in a very interesting raised 3-dimensional effect . . . Some hand-spun copper plates, ash trays, etc. . . . all beautifully enamelled and in various sizes from 3" to 12" in size . . . Also some new Salish rugs suitable for floor mats or wall hangings . . . New in the Centennial Square shop is a delightful pottery planter for a cactus garden . . . seven little bowls, each slightly different in size, and attached together . . . There's a charming cornhusk doll . . . A lovely blue and green Elspeth Watson bowl . . . A large fruit bowl by Keinz Laffin . . . A big Kakinuma floor vase in black and russet . . . A laffin casserole, brown on the outside . . . surprisingly blue inside . . . Individual covered casseroles . . . very dark brown and beige . . . by Michael Henry . . . We've always loved Edith Lansdowne's figures . . . and the latest are valley quail . . . and a pair of marvellous hedgehogs . . . mother and baby . . . the latter curled up in a ball with its little paws underneath . . . Do go and see them at . . . The Handloom, 18 Centennial Square, 384-1011.

Best-looking, best-fitting, most utterly comfortable slims, tops and jackets we've ever had the pleasure of seeing . . . and wearing . . . are those made by Bleyle, of Stuttgart, West Germany . . . and Impacts 'n' Imports is the place to find a new collection which we consider little short of terrific! . . . The new wool knit slims really do look new . . . with a bit of a flare at the bottom for that touch of added smartness . . . They come in camel, brown, black, navy, crab and fern . . . and to top them off there are turtleneck long-sleeved pullovers . . . striped in various combinations to coordinate perfectly with the pants . . . Tops and pants are still priced at $32.50, and $25 respectively . . . and we noticed sleeveless tops in the attractive crab shade with a $19.95 price tag . . . To make a complete outfit of these Bleyles . . . there are smartly tailored jackets . . . also in various stripe combinations . . . Two styles . . . one with high round neck and horizontal stripes . . . the other, a collarless V-neck with vertical stripes . . . this latter particularly good on a shorter figure which needs the illusion of height . . . New this season too are the Bleyle polyester ribbed cord slacks . . . white, navy or sea foam (a pretty shade of blue) . . . and matching tailored jackets . . . These, of course, are completely washable . . . and worn together, make a smart pantsuit . . . Impacts 'N' Imports, 8 Centennial Square, 388-7023.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Soft Hearted

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: When I started to go with this married man I was old enough to know better, so I can't blame anyone but myself. We worked at the same place, which made it easy. He told me he loved me and his was a rotten marriage, so if I would be patient, one day he would divorce his wife and marry me. Abby, maybe I was a fool, but I believed him and loved him with all my heart. Meanwhile, in the three years we went together his wife had three babies.

I finally saw no future in it, so I called it quits. I haven't seen him alone for four months, but yesterday he sent me a telegram and called me up twice begging me to see him again as his wife is in the hospital having another baby. He says he still loves me, and to tell you the truth, I still have soft spot in my heart for him. How can I get him out of my heart before I weaken!—40-Year-Old-Fool

DEAR FOOL: There is nothing you can do about a soft spot in your heart. Just make sure it doesn't spread to your head. Look around for a single man. Nothing kills an old romance quicker than a new one.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 24-year-old college-educated bachelor who works for an investment banking firm.

I was born with a strawberry birthmark on nearly half my face. It is not exactly hideous, but it is conspicuous, and I was very self-conscious about it as a child.

About a year ago a skin specialist recommended that I cover the mark with a pancake make-up. It helped a lot, and gave my cheek such a smooth, velvety look that I started using the make-up on my entire face. Then I started using just a hint of rouge. Next I applied a very faint bit of orchid eye shadow, and now I use a touch of mascara to darken my brows and lashes.

Last week I was called into the boss' office and was given an ultimatum. Either I see the company psychiatrist or find another job.

Abby, there is nothing to see a psychiatrist about. I am perfectly all right. If women can improve their appearance with beauty aids, why can't men! What would you do! —All Man

DEAR MAN: If I were you, I wouldn't protest too much. I would see the company psychiatrist. If you are perfectly all right you have nothing to fear.

DEAR ABBY: My wife is a lovely 35-year-old woman whom I love dearly, but here's the problem: She thinks I should run around and open the car door for her any time we go anywhere, even to the neighborhood shopping centre.

I feel that any healthy lady should be able to open her own car door unless it's convenient for her husband to do so, except perhaps on more formal occasions.

It seems ridiculous to me for a woman to sit as if she were helpless waiting for car doors to be opened and closed for her.

Also is it not appropriate for a lady to lean over and unlock her escort's car door after he has been polite enough to open her door for her!—D. W. Irving, Tex.

DEAR D. W.: I should think that a gentleman should want to see that the lady gets into and out of an automobile safely, and the door opening and closing bit insures this. And yes, the considerate woman will lean over and unlock her escort's car door. (A man once confided that just that simple little gesture of thoughtfulness caused him to take a second look at a rather plain woman—whom he subsequently married.)

CONFIDENTIAL TO LEE: People who don't know where they're going usually wind up somewhere else.

Men Deserve To Be Pampered

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A biochemist here says Americans should launch a national campaign to ease the strain of day-to-day living on males to prolong their lives.

Henry Sobel, chief of aging research at the Veterans Administration Hospital, says the life expectancy of American men decreased last year for the first time since statistics have been kept.

Unless something is done, women, who now have a life expectancy 6½ years longer than men, may outlive their husbands by an average of 10 years.

Sobel says that among animals as well as among humans, females are biologically superior.

"But besides that biologic reason, men bear the brunt of stresses and strains of crowded civilization," Sobel said.

He said an over-all program "to spare the men" should be centred on relieving males of some of the physical and psychological burdens of living in a crowded urban society.

TODAY'S RECIPE

MARINATED PORK KABOBS

One and one-half to 2 pounds boneless pork loin, ¾ cup cooking oil, ¼ cup soy sauce, ½ cup vinegar, 2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce, 1 teaspoon dry mustard, 1 teaspoon sage, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon black pepper, 1 clove garlic, crushed.

Cut pork into 1-inch cubes and place in shallow dish. Combine remaining ingredients in screw-top jar and shake until well blended. Pour marinade over pork, cover and refrigerate several hours, turning occasionally.

Drain meat, pat dry on absorbent towels and thread on skewers. Heat remaining marinade to brush on kabobs during cooking. Broil slowly, 5 inches from coals, 25 to 30 minutes. Turn skewers frequently and brush with marinade during cooking. 6 servings.

Vegetable kabobs may be served with the pork if desired. Thread additional skewers with mushrooms, green pepper squares, apple and onion wedges. Brush with marinade and broil 5 inches from coals, 15 to 20 minutes.

Summers Are So Much Longer for Mothers

By MAUREEN DUFFUS

Several mothers have expressed the opinion recently that they should be nominated as mother of the year, mostly for negative reasons.

They haven't, as yet, inflicted serious bodily harm on their offspring, nor have they, as yet, run screaming to their friendly neighborhood psychiatrist.

They're not, on the other hand, in the best of mental health, as the summer holidays drag on into their sixth month.

(Opinions differ as to just which month it is but there is general agreement that any calendar which says it is still only mid-August is clearly lying.)

One piteous example is the mother whose sons have reached the you-won't-let-us-do-anything stage.

Fellow sufferers will understand the depression which results from being nominated the meanest person in the whole world, when you've tried hard to camouflage it.

This mother capitulated to the extent of allowing the two boys and numerous friends to build a fort in the basement.

Before she found strength to supervise the construction site, the boys had built a stockade completely enclosing the furnace, thus cutting off all access to the device which switches the furnace back on when it shuts itself off, which it has a nasty habit of doing.

With any luck, however, the temperature will stay above freezing until father returns from his business jaunt across the country.

But the thing that sent our fellow martyr up the wall, after she'd survived the noise of arguing and hammering by philosophically contemplating which was worst, was the unaccustomed emphasis on cleanliness exhibited by the builders.

"They hosed the place thoroughly," she explained. "The basement is cleaner than it's ever been in its life.

"But there's no drain in the basement.

"Have you ever figured out what to do with a six-month supply of old newspapers used to map up enough water to keep the garden watered all year?"

While she burned them all day long in the incinerator (this was before the ban on burning) the happy children made smoke bombs with plastic bags and told her she was a nicer Mom than they'd thought.

"But the ashes in my hair look like the worst case of dandruff ever seen on TV," she said, "and I smell awful."

Mothers all over town have probably had similar experiences.

It's a wonder really that there have been no reports of an increase in admissions to the loony bin.

One therapeutic suggestion:

The back to school sales are on.

Mothers who go to shops and spend a great deal of money on a large supply of school clothes sometimes achieve that if-summer-comes-can-school-be-far-behind feeling.

Other sanity-saving suggestions are always welcome.

Ottawa Sets Standards for Children's Clothes Sizes

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — The government went to bat for the confused clothes-buying parent Friday by announcing a nationwide program to standardize the size of children's apparel.

Children's clothing now is sold according to age-size, and it seems that different manufacturers have different ideas about the size of children at a specific age.

So the department of consumer and corporate affairs has stepped into the picture with a voluntary plan designed to ensure that every clothing item carrying, say, a size six label, will have exactly the same dimensions as another item of that size.

Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford estimated that 70 per cent of children's clothing available in Canada this fall will carry the CSS—Canada Standard Size—label.

The major mail-order firms in Canada will include instructions for measuring children for CCS sizes. The minister said 134 Canadian manufacturers have been given licences to use CSS labels.

Using one of the most powerful weapons available to further the program, Mr. Basford told a news conference that "we are urging mothers to buy only those items carrying the CSS label."

The minister said participation by manufacturers is voluntary because compulsory federal action could raise constitutional problems.

To emphasize the need for standardization, Mr. Basford had three eight-year-old girls parade into the news conference, all wearing clothes of the existing age-eight variety. Two of the girls were badly fitted.

Then he had them returning wearing CSS clothing, based on their measurements. The three eight-year-olds required CSS sizes of six, eight and 10.

Folders are already being sent to retail stores and distributed through catalogues to show parents how to measure a child's chest, hips, waist and height to arrive at the appropriate CSS size. The measuring standards were developed by the Canadian government specifications board.

Mr. Basford said manufacturers and retailers welcome the move because it will ensure better fits and fewer returns of merchandise. If a manufacturer fails to comply with a licence, he could lose the right to use the label, along with being fined up to $5,000.

Mr. Basford said studies are going on to see whether standard sizes can be introduced in other fields "and women's wear is first on the list."

Welfare Theory Queried

NEW YORK (CP-AP) — A welfare study of a Manhattan neighborhood shows that only about 10 per cent of adults now on welfare belonged as children to families receiving welfare, a report released by the United States Human Resources Administration shows.

Mitchell Ginsberg, the agency's New York administrator, released the pilot study and said "the findings challenge the popular assumption that the fact of being on welfare in itself creates dependency."

The study examined 673 persons on Manhattan's upper west side and found that only 9.7 per cent of those on welfare as adults came from homes that received assistance when they were children.

Another sample of 307 persons on welfare showed only 11.1 per cent came from families that had been on welfare at any time during the person's childhood.

Black Mink Rarest of Them All

By MICHAEL KERNAN

WASHINGTON — On a chill November day in 1957 they were grading mink for breeding at John Adkins' ranch near Coalville, Utah, and one of the men came out of the pens carrying a male mink. When Adkins saw it he stopped in his tracks.

It was darker than any mink he had ever seen. The under-fur and guard-hair were blue-black. In the fur business, a dark mink means money in the bank. A mink as nearly black as this one — the first true genetic black variant — was unheard of.

Building up the new strain secretly, Adkins waited until late 1965 before he put 500 pelts on the market in New York. This time it was the fur trade that stopped in its tracks.

But anyone who thinks there might be some fast money in owning a few of these cute little furry animals and breeding them in the basement should think some more. For one thing, their diet consists of a fishy mush which can be smelled for blocks. For another, mink are susceptible to weather and are mean, so mean they must be kept in separate cages, and so high-strung that a loud noise can kill them.

Mink born in the spring, begin their winter coats early in the fall and are ready for skinning by December. In their brief life, the males reach a weight of four pounds, twice that of the females, which explains why male pelts cost twice those of females. Some coat designs call specifically for the narrower female pelt, and they are useful in making smaller fur items. Only the centre of the back is used for fine coats.

The best of the Black Willow skins sold for $1,100 apiece. Nieman-Marcus of Dallas bought a bundle (about 40 skins, enough to make a coat) which became a $75,000 coat.

Other breeders have produced many mutations in the pastel and light gray ranges to meet the variety of tastes, but the dark mink is still the favorite. Adkins' Black Willow is rarest of all.

Rarity does not necessarily mean popularity in a fur, he said. For example, sable may be rare and much sought after, but with its longer, brushier hairs it often proves too bulky looking for a small, slim woman. Ermine is a great prestige item, but its natural color is white, which limits its use, and it is too lightweight to be really warm.

"Women don't buy furs as a status symbol any more," said the furrier. "They don't want to keep them in a glass case; they wear them. And not just for special occasions. A woman wants to feel she looks great even when she's not going to a ball."

TRAFFIC AT A STANDSTILL is encountered by pop music enthusiasts trying to reach Catskill Mountains resort area for three-day rock festival. Viet Ground Fighting Drops Off But Heavy Shelling Continues

SAIGON (AP) — Ground fighting across South Vietnam appeared to have tapered off sharply overnight, but Viet Cong troops kept up their rocket and mortar attacks, hitting 38 bases and towns, military spokesmen reported.

Initial reports indicated the ground action during the last 24 hours was the lightest since Tuesday when the Viet Cong launched its fall campaign with rocket, mortar and infantry assaults on 150 military bases and towns.

There is no official count on total casualties. But United States sources with access to field reports said at least 200 Americans have been killed in the last four days of fighting, and probably anouther 800 to 1,000 wounded. South Vietnamese losses are roughly the same.

These sources said that since Tuesday, combined forces have killed about 3,000 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops.

It is estimated that American casualties this week, by the time the seven-day tally is in from midnight last Saturday until midnight this Saturday, will hit at least 300 killed. If official casualty figures for this week to be released next Thursday bear this out, it would be the heaviest American toll in more than two months.

The heaviest action since Tuesday has flared in three provinces, Tay Ninh, Binh Long and Phuoc Long, located along an arc 55 miles northwest to 80 miles northeast of Saigon.

BOMB BASE CAMPS

In a round-the-clock effort to keep the Viet Cong divisions off balance, 50 B-52 bombers dropped 750 tons of bombs on suspected camps overnight.

Targets of the overnight rocket and mortar attacks included Saigon, where two shells hit on the southeastern edge of the city. U.S. headquarters said one of the two rounds fell harmlessly in the Saigon River. The other shell injured one South Vietnamese guard slightly but caused no damage.

Elsewhere, U.S. military spokesmen reported the loss of six American aircraft in the last 48 hours with 24 persons killed and 12 wounded.

The crashs raised to 5,725 the number of American helicopters and fixed-wing aircraft reported lost in North and South Vietnam since Jan. 1, 1961.

These figures do not include scores of other aircraft lost in unannounced daily bombing raids and other operations in neighboring Laos aimed at slowing the infiltration of North Vietnamese troops and movement of war stockpiles.

Mediation Bids Continue In 3-Month-Old Oil Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bargaining has resumed in the three-month British Columbia oil industry strike.

Reresentatives of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union and the six oil companies involved met Friday with B.C. Mediation Commissioners Pen Basking and J. A. Pollock, on the direction of Labor Minister Leslie Peterson.

After a two-hour session, the two sides agreed to resume bargaining and mediation officer Gus Leonidas was assigned to act as an intermediary. Talks are expected to continue through the weekend.

The strike by 550 oil workers, over wages, started in late May and continued almost unnoticed until this week. Then flying squads of pickets stopped Vancouver and Victoria bus service and other industrial operations before court-issued injunctions ended the picketing.

WANTS $1 AN HOUR

The union wants a $1 hourly pay increase over two years but says this is negotiable. It rejected a 53-cent offer over the same period. Wages before the strike ranged between $2.95 and $4.05 hourly.

Companies affected are Shell, Gulf, Imperial, Standard, Texaco and Home Oil.

Meanwhile, there were no developments Friday in a dispute between Vancouver-area supermarkets and locked-out meatcutters, which also began in May. Meat sections of several supermarkets have re-opened, with supervisors in charge. Grocery clerks have crossed meatcutter picket lines at a number of stores.

DOCTORS AIRLIFTED

Rock Fans Inundate Town

By JOSH MILLS

WHITE LAKE, N.Y. (AP) — A planeload of doctors was ordered to this tiny country town today to provide medical aid to the injured and ill attending a rock music festival.

Promoters of the festival said they had arranged for 30 doctors to be flown from New York to the festival site, rolling Sullivan County countryside now occupied by more than 200,000 pop music fans.

Most of the visitors have been sleeping out. The weather has been wet.

Eight first-aid sites were set up and special quarters were created for the seriously ill, a festival spokesman said. The Sullivan County Red Cross and civil defence organizations sent drugs and other medical supplies to the area. Several hundred persons were to have reported treated since the festival crowd began to gather Thursday. The three days of performances began Friday.

State police said the situation was "chaotic" but fairly peaceful.

Local farmers complained to policethat corn and vegetable fields have been stripped of their produce.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's office in Albany said it had received a few complaints from citizens but no formal requests for aid.

With increasing numbers of cars being abandoned on the highways leading to this resort area, the festival promoters called upon "all vehicles heading to the festival to turn back home."

City Man Plans New Hovercraft

He says it will carry six persons at a top speed of 70 knots or 75 miles an hour and has a cruising speed of about 50 knots.

It hovers 34 inches above water.

I'll begin manufacture soon," said Reg Ward, a former aeronautics engineer with the RCAF, who lives at 887 Bank Street.

He will be assisted, he said, by his father, Arthur Ward, and his brother, Kenneth, also retired RCAF aeronautics engineers.

Fourth member of the production crew will be Reg Ward's son, Douglas.

"It took me 18 months to produce a prototype of my first hovercraft," Ward said. "I can produce a finished aluminum working model, in four months.

"My father assisted me in developing the prototype. It is entirely our own design and not a copy."

Ward said both the federal and B.C. governments are interested in his plan to manufacture the hovercraft in Victoria.

"The B.C. government is considering the use of a hovercraft for survey work in the north. I believe my model would be ideal for this purpose, as it would carry a small crew and lots of equipment. I plan to manufacture the craft at a hangar formerly used by Fairey Aviation at Sidney."

The prototype, has been tested at Elk Lake, Ward said.

"We generally try it out Sunday mornings when there aren't too many people about."

"Between us — Dad, my brother and myself — we have given 80 years to the RCAF."

Aussies May Go

NUI DAT (Reuters) — Australian forces could be pulled out of South Vietnam by early next year, sources at the Australian task force base said Friday.

Rebel Catholics Reject Conciliation

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — The rebel Roman Catholics of a Florence parish have voted against allowing their three priests to accept an offer by Ermengildo Cardinal Florit to live with him.

The cardinal made the offer Tuesday in an effort to patch up a dispute that he and the parishioners have waged since last November when the cardinal condemned a catechism published by Rev. Enzo Mazzi, one of their priests.

The disputed catechism portrays Jesus Christ as a social insurgent leading the poor against the rich.

The parishioners met Friday night and voted approval of a communique rejecting the cardinal's offer. Two of the three priests, Father Mazzi and Rev. Sergio Gomiti, were present.

The parishioners said the cardinal's invitation left out the rest of their community.

Douglas Hits Loss of Resources

National New Democratic Party leader T. C. Douglas expressed concern about the loss of B.C. resources to foreign manufacturers on a visit to Duncan Friday to support NDP Cowichan-Malahat candidate Robert Strachan.

"What is bothering most B.C. people so much is that so much of our resources are being alienated by the United States and Japan."

The provincial government has done nothing to encourage the processing of raw materials, he said. It would mean a squeezed-out province if no change is made in export policy.

Douglas said he would remain in his federal riding of Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands until Parliament opens in October in Ottawa.

CLOSE RANGE

There is every likelihood the NDP can form a government in this election, he said.

Next week, provincial NDP leader Tom Berger and Premier Bennett may have the chance to drop their long-distance criticism of each other and meet at close range. Both are expected in Nanaimo Friday.

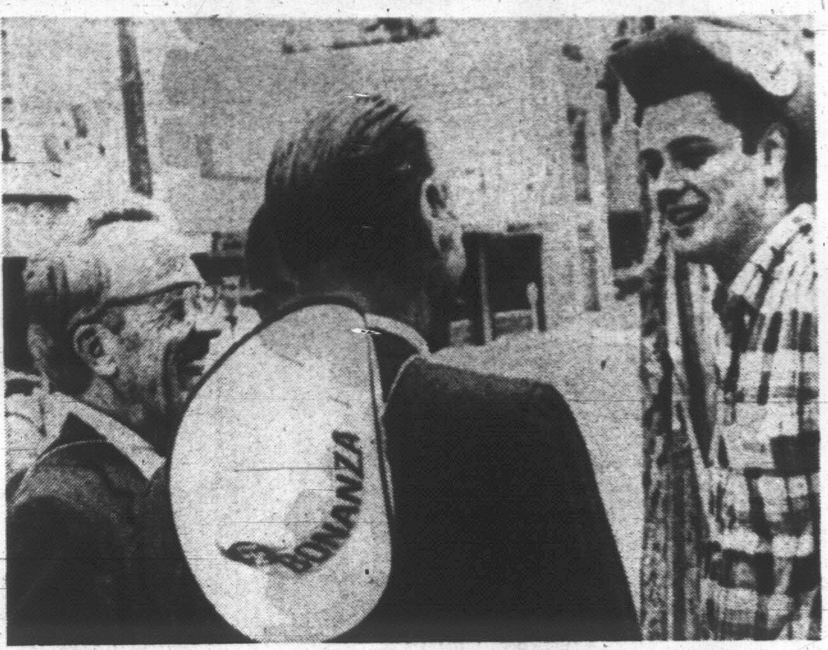
Louis Lindholm, Liberal candidate for Saanich and the Islands, started an Island-hopping campaign trip today, travelling in the tracks of his opponents, former MLA John Tisdalle, the Socred candidate, and New Democrat Don Johannessen.

An all-candidates meeting for Saanich and the Islands will be held Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. on Mayne Island.



POLITICAL OPPONENTS meet at Liberal candidate Jim Bigsby's Bonanza Daze booth in Duncan. T. C. Douglas, federal NDP leader, and Robert Strachan, Cowichan-and-the-Islands NDP candidate, discuss the issues with Bigsby, right, who is opposing Strachan in the Aug. 27 provincial election. Canadian Union Loses Again At Elk Falls

By MORGAN MacGREGOR

CAMPBELL RIVER — Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada has been turned down again in its bid for a government-supervised vote to determine certification of Elk Falls pulp mill workers here.

Labor Relations Board ruled Thursday the union did not have the majority of the workers signed.

Canadian Union vice-president Gordon Wickham said his union will appeal and try to subpoena the Elk Falls company records.

18 YEARS

The International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, local 742, has held certification at the mill for 18 years.

The challenging union claims it has signed up 440 men from the International ranks. They say there were less than 800 paid-up members at the time applications were made to the LRB.

"As the board requires we show a 50 per cent plus one figure it is obvious we have the controlling number," stated the Canadian union's organizer Vic Aquino.

"The company will not devulge to us how many members are on the payroll nor will the LRB.

Police Guard Tate Informant

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police are keeping close guard on a man who says he believes he knows the killer or killers of actress Sharon Tate and four others, it was reported today.

The man told police the main target of the killers was Polish writer Voityck Frokowsky, the Los Angeles Times says.

Police would neither confirm nor deny the report.

The reported informant was described as a Polish emigre and a friend of Frokowsky. He is reported to have told police he was invited to Miss Tate's expensive Brentwood home the evening of the slayings, but was unable to go because of other business.

Found dead last Saturday at the home were Sharon Tate, 26, wife of film director Roman Polanski; Frokowsky, 37; coffee heiress Abigail Folger, 26; international hair stylist Jay Sebring, 35, and a youth, Steven Parent, 18, a friend of estate caretaker William Garretson.

The informant is reported to have given officers names of at least three persons thought to be either the killers or to have first-hand information of the killings. At least one of those named is reported to have taken part in the slayings, the newspaper says.

Grain Terms Changed

REGINA (CP) — Premier Ross Thatcher Friday changed the terms in Saskatchewan's program of taking feed grain as a form of university tuition fee payment. Instead of allowing 200 students to pay as much as $450 each in grain, a maximum of 300 students will be able to pay up to $300 in grains.

Churches Won't Pay

WINNIPEG (CP) — About 45 churches have refused to make voluntary grants to the city rather than pay taxes, a suggestion made last spring by Mayor Stephen Juba. Only five churches have made donations, totalling $450, and the highest grant was $200 from Christ Lutheran Church.

PILOT UNDER GUN FOR FORGED LOG

VANCOUVER (CP)—An Air Canada spokesman Friday said the company is reviewing the case of Charles Stephen Rogers, a company pilot fined $250 in provincial court Thursday when he pleaded guilty to falsifying his night flying log.

Rogers, of Langley, told the court he falsified his log in order to obtain certification to fly night commercial flights.

The company spokesman said Rogers presented such a licence, stamped as valid by the Department of Transport, when he joined Air Canada a year ago.

The spokesman said Rogers has been employed as a second engineer on a DC-8, a position which does not involve flying the aircraft.

Rogers was charged under the aeronautical act by the Department of Transport.

A department spokesman said Friday Rogers' flying licence has not been suspended as a result of the case.

Late-Night Debut For Merv Griffin

Late-night network television gets a new member Monday night when Merv Griffin debuts on the CBS network to provide competition for Johnny Carson and Joey Bishop.

For the first time the three major U.S. networks will be programming simultaneous late-night talk shows and will be locked in combat for the biggest share of that particular audience.

The show will be seen on Channels 7 and 12, starting at 11:30.

War Veteran Still Flogging Flag Furore

Wearing his veteran's tam and carrying a shopping bag full of letters George Burnham's smile was Sphinx-like Friday as he hinted of legal evidence he has that will cause every Canadian Maple Leaf flag to fall.

"I can't tell you the evidence but it will be placed before the Supreme Court," said the 79-year-old Victorian.

"Johnny Diefenbaker's seen my brief and he's impressed."

Burnham's four-year crusade to replace the Canadian flag with the Red Ensign has been a lonely one.

Now he's escalating.

With $200 in the kitty and promises of $300 more he says, he's hired a lawyer who will request an injunction against the use of the present flag.

ASKING FOR MONEY

The letters he carried will be sent across the country asking for contributions to the legal fight.

Burnham maintains that the Canadian government stole the design of the Maple Leaf flag from Peru. "Just try and buy a flag of Peru," he said. "They've banned them here since 1965."

"That's an indictable offence according to Section 269 of the Canadian Criminal Code."

Burnham feels so strongly about the flag issue that he has run twice as an independent political candidate on the issue, the last time in Victoria federally in 1968.

He has toured the country on the issue and reports that the people he talked to are not satisfied with the new flag.

"If there had been a plebiscite I would have accepted the decision," he said.

"But this time we've got them on legal grounds."

In Ottawa in April Burnham was brought in for questioning by the RCMP, he says, after he pointed to the flag on Parliament Hill and said, "I'll take that flag down, legally".

"Once I showed them my documents they agreed I had a good case."

SHOOK HANDS

"He shook hands with me and admitted that the government made some mistakes in the Proclamation," said Burnham.

"He said the mistakes would have to be rectified but he didn't agree that the Red Ensign should be flown."

Burnham has sent an open letter to Trudeau, thanking him for the conversation and advising him that Trudeau's representatives would be meeting him again before a justice of the Supreme Court.

VIMY VETERAN

"We'll start proceedings in a week or two," said the veteran of Vimy Ridge and the Second World War.

Burnham points out that the Ensign was dedicated on the battlefield at Vimy in 1917.

BURNHAM . . . lonely crusade

This and the fact that he feels the flag Proclamation is legally null and void has made the flag issue an obsession with him.

He is the president and founder of the Flags Association with its motto "V for Victory for the Red Ensign for Canada 1969".

U.S. Ship Blamed in Disaster

MANILA (AP) — The United States destroyer Frank E. Evans was primarily responsible for the collision June 3 in which 74 Americans were lost, a joint U.S.-Australian board of inquiry concluded Friday.

But it said part of the blame rests with the other ship involved, the Australian aircraft carrier Melbourne. The Australians announced the Melbourne's skipper, Capt. John P. Stevenson, will face a court martial Wednesday.

The board that met here under the chairmanship of U.S. Rear Admiral Jerome H. King Jr. had no punitive powers but the U.S. Navy is investigating to determine whether charges will be filed against three officers of the Evans—Cmdr. Albert S. McLemore of Vallejo, Calif.; Lieut. Ronald C. Ramsey of Long Beach, Calif., and Lieut. James A. Hopson of Kansas City, Kan. McLemore was the skipper and the others were deck officers.

The Melbourne sliced the destroyer in two during pre-dawn manoeuvres in the South China Seas

The Australian announcement said Stevenson is accused of failing to transmit to the destroyer a positive direction after he determined the U.S. vessel was on a collision course. He also is charged with failure to reverse the Melbourne's engines when he determined the collision could not be averted by action of the destroyer alone.

But the two-country board held "that the primary responsibility rested with the destroyer."

It said a number of errors contributed to the tragedy, among them "the incorrect decoding of the task unit commander's signal . . . which announced that the Melbourne's course was 260 degrees."

"Evans decoded this signal to mean that the carrier was turning left to 160 degrees," the board said. "This was called a major source of confusion on the destroyer's bridge."

STATUS SYMBOL

Vancouver Punch-Up Injures Policeman

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police arrested 16 persons, including a 17-year-old juvenile girl, following a demonstration early today in which three policemen were reported asaulted.

The melee began on downtown Granville Street outside a dancehall and moved 10 blocks to police headquarters when two constables tried to arrest a 16-year-old girl seen drinking liquor.

The 16 arrested were charged with offences ranging from wilful damage and obstructing police to creating a disturbance.

All were released after a brief court appearance on bail set at varying amounts.

Police said the demonstration began shortly after 2 a.m.

They arrested a man who prevented them from catching the girl and when the man tried to escape, one constable was punched and had his eyeglasses broken.

The man was recaptured but a crowd of about 150 persons gathered around the two policemen. A passing British Columbia Hydro bus driver radiod for help from the police car.

Disturbance Results In Charges

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ronald William Duyker, 20, arrested after a demonstration last Friday during an appearance by Prime Minister Trudeau, was remanded Thursday to Aug. 21 on two charges.

Duyker is charged with causing a disturbance and using obscene language. He is free on $75 bail. Lyle Robert Osmundson, 27, charged with causing a disturbance, is to appear in court today.

Ex-McGill Man Blasts English

MONTREAL (CP) — Controversial lecturer Stanley Gray, dismissed from his political science post at McGill University Friday, said he plans to turn his back on the English community.

Mr. Gray was dismissed following submission on an arbitration board report which said "gross misconduct"—disruptive activity on campus-warranted the dismissal.

The report's conclusion is "clearly a political decision despite pretentious claims to the contrary," Mr. Gray said in an interview.

"Had I promised to be a good boy, as both McGill and the commission wanted, the outcome would have been different.

"I intend to resign from McGill and leave the English community anyway, because there's no hope or political future for progressive change there."

The arbitration board, appointed by the Canadian Association of University Teachers, also recommended that McGill pay Mr. Gray the $8,500 salary he would have received for the 1969-70 academic year, or the difference between it and a $5,500 Canada Council grant awarded to him earlier this year.

Gas Trains Draw Protests

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two trains carrying phosgene, a poison gas used in the First World War, today neared their destinations—industrial plants where they will be converted to peaceful uses.

One of the two trains was delayed hours Friday when Canada prevented it from using a southern Ontario route as a shortcut.

The two trains contain 300 tons of gas from the Rocky Mountain Arsenal in Colorado. The shipments have also raised protests in the United States.

A train with liquified gas bound from Lockport, N.Y., was stalled for hours at a siding near Chicago when Canada refused to let the train make a shortcut along the north shore of Lake Erie. The new route is through the U.S. only.

The shipment is bound for Vandemark Industries of Lockport where it will be converted to either a weed killer or synthetic foam. It was purchased from the U.S. Army by Jones Chemical Co. of Batavia, N.Y.

STOPPED AT WINDSOR

Plans to take the gas train across Canada from Detroit to Niagara Falls were blocked by Hartley Purvis, district collector of customs at Windsor, Ont., which would have been the Canadian port of entry. He said it was banned under the Canadian Customs Tariff Act and Ottawa backed him up.

It was re-routed through Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

The second train is heading across Mississippi countryside on its way to Geismer, La., where it is to be used in making plastics.

Illinois Central Railroad officials said they would take the train through the outskirts of New Orleans rather than through Baton Rouge on the way to its destination near Baton Rouge.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, which took over the handling, said Louisiana-bound train would have to stop at the Ravenna, Ohio, ordnance plant for clearance before final delivery. The B and O later said the army and U.S. department of transportation asked that the train not stop at Ravenna, and it continued across Ohio.

The first announcement said: "The cars pose no threat in their present condition while standing at the Ravenna ordnance plant and will be moved under all possible safeguards when the B and O is given further instructions for the handling of this train."

GOVERNOR NOT HAPPY

Two gas experts accompanied each train.

Gov. Robert D. Ray of Iowa said neither he nor any state agency was notified of the movement of the New York-bound train across his state and that he would complain to the White House.

"An accident by this train would have been disastrous," he said. "I think I know why they tried to keep it a secret.

"They didn't want any objections."

Allen Vandemark, president of the Lockport firm, disputed contentions that the gas is dangerous, saying the phosgene is being confused with diphosgene, an enriched form of phosgene with carbon monoxide and chlorine.

Webster's Third New International Dictionary says both phosgene and diphosgene were used as poison gases in the First World War.

LOGGING INSTRUCTOR REQUIRED

Virgin of Guadalupe's Monument Built on Unsound Foundations

MEXICO CITY (AP) — In 1531, the Virgin of Guadalupe was reported to have appeared on a hilltop before an Indian peasant, telling him to pass on to the bishop of Mexico her request that a sanctuary be built upon the site.

Now, centuries later, it is apparent that, for construction purposes, she could have chosen a better location.

The sanctuary, which originally was a small chapel at the foot of Tepeyac Hill, since has grown to huge proportions and still is growing.

Its problem is that it rests on a slippery clay subsoil, and buildings are sinking at disproportionate rates. The Roman Catholic Church and government now are engaged in a massive program to restore the complex, raise sinking buildings and make the site more beautiful.

Jose Cano, engineer in charge of the project which began six years ago, said he doesn't know when it will be finished. Original estimates set the cost at $1,600,000, but it is certain to be much more, Cano said.

BUILT ON HILL

The complex, located only about four miles from downtown Mexico City, ranges over the foot of Tepeyac Hill and up onto the hill itself.

While work continues, an estimated 15,000 daily visit the shrine, many traversing its huge courtyard on their knees.

On Dec. 12, Day of the Virgin, more than 1,000,000 devout visit the shrine.

The first restoration to be all but completed is that of the chapel pool, built over a sulphurous spring near which the Virgin is reported to have appeared to the Indian Juan Diego for the fourth time.

The original chapel of Tepeyac is being restored now, but will require much work. Part of its walls and foundations still stand and will be reinforced after excavation beneath it, where Juan Diego and others were said to have been buried, is completed by archeologists.

CONVENT SINKING

Next to the basilica, begun in 1691 and finished in 1709, stands the Convent of the Capuchin Order, erected between 1780 and 1789. Its rear to the north rests on bedrock of the hill of Tepeyac, while its southerly front is sinking.

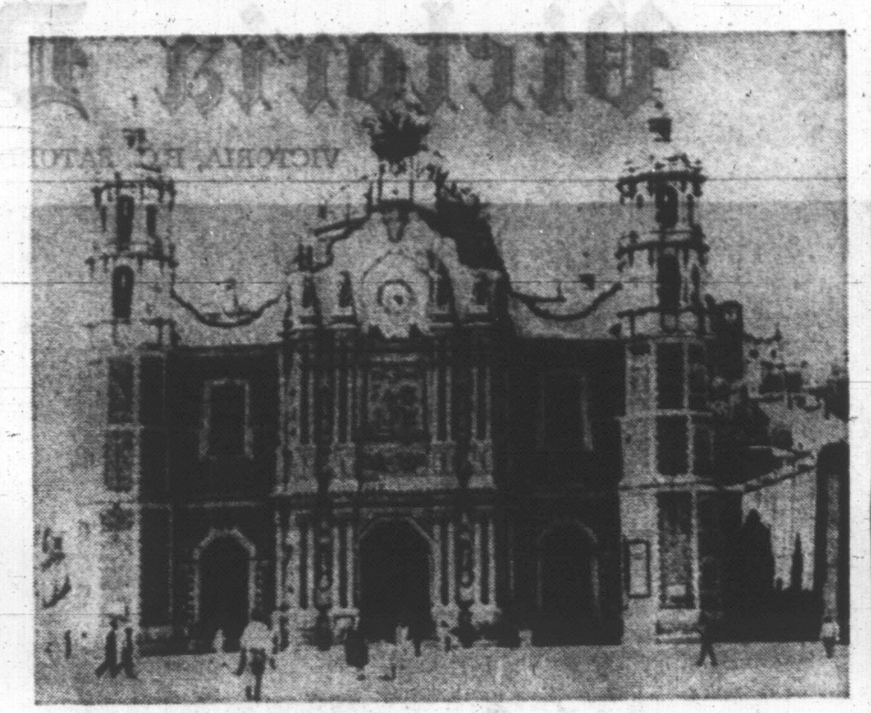
There, above the altar, is a robe in which the Virgin put roses for Juan Diego to carry to the bishop as proof she had appeared. When Juan Diego opened his bundled robe before the bishop of Mexico, Fray Juan de Zumarrag, the roses fell out and on the surface of the robe remained a brilliantly colored image of the Virgin.. The pigments to this day have not faded — nor been identified.



SLOWLY SINKING CHURCH on site where Virgin of Guadalupe was said to have been seen rests on clay subsoil and is gradually disappearing into ground. Mexican government and church heads are seeking solution to the problem. (AP Wirephoto)

Ex-Priests on Increase

TORONTO (CP) — Roman Catholic theologian Rev. Gregory Baum estimates the number of former Roman Catholic priests living in Toronto has increased by more than 100 in the last two years.

A teacher at St. Michael's College, University of Toronto, Father Baum, said in an interview that many of these former priests come from outside the city. Their total numbers in Toronto are estimated at anywhere betweeen 200 and 700.

He said the increasing number of dropouts results from disappointment that ecclesiastical reforms promised by the Second Vatican Council have not been implemented. Many priests, he said, also regard the church as their "boss" and feel it should not regulate their private lives, particularly in the matter of marriage.

Another reason was a discovery by many priests that religion was not as important as they had thought when they entered the priesthood, and that they could help people as much by becoming laymen.

The chancery office in Toronto keeps no record of former priests in Toronto, but a spokesman said Toronto is probably a centre because "it's kind of a liberal place, easy to hide in."

There are 313 diocesan priests in the city and 401 belonging to religious orders.

Tanzanian Cleric Weekend Visitor

Bishop Joseph Blomjous of Mwanza, Tanzania, East Africa, will visit Victoria this weekend.

He will call on Bishop Remi De Roo, head of the Roman Catholic Church on Vancouver Island, at St. Andrew's Cathedral, Victoria, Sunday and remain until Monday.

Born in the Netherlands, he was bishop of Mwanza from 1948 to 1963, then retired in favor of African bishop Renartus Bubitibage.

Subsequently he was active with the Second Vatican Council in Rome and acted as spokesman for African bishops attending the council.

"He was on the commission of the laity in Rome and on the commission for communication," says Rev. Kevin Wiseman of Victoria, who worked with him at Mwanza, Tanzania.

"He now makes his home with the White Fathers in Jerusalem, but spends much time travelling around the world."

Bishop Blomjous will visit Victoria from Ottawa, where he has been lecturing to Roman Catholic priests and students.

Blood Donor Clinics Set

Red Cross blood donor clinics will be open three days next week in two locations.

On Monday, a clinic will be held at Red Cross House, 1046 Fort, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. and from 6:30 to 9 p.m.

A clinic will also be held Tuesday at Red Cross House, at the same hours.

Wednesday, it will be held at the Canadian Forces Officers Candidate School Gymnasium, HMC Dockyard, from 1:30 to 4 p.m.

Slim Volumes or Weighty Tomes, Uvic Book Chief Sold 'Em All

For 23 years, Joyce McKay has sold textbooks to Victoria College and University of Victoria students.

Thousands of books — from little poetry anthologies weighing a few ounces to 10 and 15-pound science volumes — have passed through her hands.

Mrs. McKay will retire as head of the Uvic bookstore at the end of this month. Appropriately enough, the announcement of her retirement was made by vice-president, Dean Robert Wallace, one of the few people who has been associated with the college and university longer than Mrs. McKay.

She has seen the college grow from a 300-student, two-year program affiliate of the University of B.C. into an autonomous university with over 5,000 students and a post-graduate program.

The bookstore has grown with the university. It started out as an insignificant little room in the college's first home, Craigdarroch Castle, and has been developed under Mrs. McKay's guidance into a vital campus service with annual sales near $500,000.

A graduate of the University of Manitoba, Mrs. McKay taught high school in that province for seven years.

FOR CHANGE

In 1946, "for the sake of a change," she became head of the bookstore at the fledgling Victoria College, which that year moved from Craigdarroch Castle to the Young Building on the Lansdowne campus.

The return of servicemen from overseas caused college enrolment to jump from 300 to 600. The bookstore was located on the main floor of the Young Building until 1962 when it moved into the new Paul Building, now home of the Greater Victoria school board.

The college became a university in 1963, and as enrolment inched past 2,000 students the bookstore, operating on an over-the-counter basis, was no longer able to effectively meet the demands of students and faculty members for more books and better service.

In 1967, it moved into its current location, the campcs services building at Gordon Head, and Mrs. McKay moved with it.

But the bookstore, like the university, is perennially short of space. This month an adjacent cafeteria operated by the Canadian National Institute for the Blind was closed down to make room for storage of packing cases filled with incoming books.

FALL SWAMPING

The big difference between a university bookstore and one that caters to the public, said Mrs. McKay, is that you are swamped with book-purchasing students during the fall.

That means preparing estimates beforehand of how many books should be bought for the projected number of students in each course.

"If you run out it's more serious than in an ordinary bookstore because universities all over the continent may be after the same books you are."

The university runs the bookstore on a non-profit basis. That is, after overhead is taken care of, profits are plughed back into the operation in the form of a discount on textbooks.

This year the discount is 10 per cent off the regular retail price.

Royal Mint Investigation Probes Coin Operations

OTTAWA (CP) — An official of the Royal Canadian Mint testified Friday he once had a conversation about uncashed cheques with a coin dealer later charged in the case of irregular shipments of 1967 centennial coin sets.

The testimony of William Robertson, second-in-command of the numismatic section of the mint, came on the second day of a preliminary hearing into charges against the coin dealer, Rudolph Hoffman, and a mint employee, Weldon Davidson.

Both men are charged with unlawfully giving benefits to a public servant, Darlene Ruddick, a mint shipper earlier fined $5,000 for receiving benefits for supplying customers with centennial coin sets.

At Mrs. Ruddick's trial in May, police testified the coin sets were going on the open market at up to double the mint price because of heavy demand. Normal waiting period for orders to be filled was eight months.

Judge Jean-Pierre Beaulne presided over the Friday preliminary hearing which was adjourned to Sept. 4 after the testimony of Mr. Robertson and another mint official.

CAUGHT BY SURPRISE

The hearing was told that the mint was caught by surprise by the popularity of its centennial sets. Customers from 30 countries snapped up 377,000 of the sets. Those including gold coins were valued at $40 apiece. sets without gold coins sold for $4 each.

Mr. Robertson said Mrs. Ruddick came to him in early January, 1968, to reveal that she had shipped 62,000 of the mint's $4 coin sets without receiving payment for them. They had been sent to Mr. Hoffman.

Mr. Robertson said that in a subsequent conversation with Mr. Hoffman, the coin dealer told him a number of cheques he had written in favor of the mint for sets received had not been cashed.

Mr. Robertson testified that Mrs. Ruddick later turned over to him 81 cheques for $8,000 apiece and one for $4,000. All were made out to the receiver-general and all were signed by Mr. Hoffman.

All of the cheques were honored.

Both Geoffrey Ferguson, in charge of the mint's numismatic section, and Mr. Robertson said they had not instructed their staff to cut the walting period for Mr. Hoffman.

Landbound Liner Struck By Fires

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The 130 employees of the landbound ocean liner Queen Elizabeth began taking lie-detector tests Friday in an effort to find who has been setting fires aboard the ship.

The tests began after a fire Thursday in a stateroom of the 1,031-foot Queen, now retired here as a tourist attraction and convention centre. It was the fourth blaze in a week and was preceded by a bomb scare.

Edward Moldt, vice-president and treasurer of Queens, Ltd., was first in line to take the polygraph test aboard the liner.

The fires began a week ago Friday with an electrical blaze listed as suspicious. Other fires followed last Saturday, Tuesday and Thursday. A false bomb threat was telephoned Wednesday night.

Clark — Gould

Centennial United Church was the setting for the lovely wedding of Patricia Eileen, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Gould, White Horse, Yukon Terr., to Mr. Donald Stuart Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Clark, Saseenos. Reverend John Travis officiated at the double ring ceremony July 11, 1969, at 7 p.m.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in an elegant gown of Chantilly lace with a jewelled, portrait neckline, lily-point sleeves and fitted waist. The full hooped skirt entrain, featured a front panel of three deep tiers of lace. A crystal tiara held her full length veil of silk illusion net starred with pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses on green foliage. Maid of honor, Miss Frances Maddocks and attendants Miss Lynn Gould, bride's sister, and Mrs. Doreen Gould, bride's sister-in-law, wore matching sleeveless Empire styled formals of rose pink chiffon, with lace bodices, formal white gloves, and pearl comb headpieces. They carried bouquets of pink and white carnations. Flower girl, Miss Lynn Bullen, groom's niece, wore floor length white taffeta gown with a pink ribbon, and a pearl comb headpiece. She carried a small basket of pink and white carnations. Master Leslie Bullen, groom's nephew was ring-bearer. Mr. Terry Barwis acted as best man, and ushers were Messrs. Wayne Gould, brother of the bride and Bob Bullen, groom's nephew.

At the reception held at the Club Tango, Mr. Len Cork proposed the toast to the bride, his niece. Music for dancing was provided by the Midnight Ramblers. For their honeymoon trip to the States, the new Mrs. Clark donned a Hyacinth blue ensemble with matching petal hat, white accessories and white orchid corsage. The happy couple will reside in Victoria.

Britton — Emery

St. Chistopher's Anglican Church was the scene of a double ring ceremony uniting Joan Marsha Emery and Mr. John Gordon Britton. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Emery of West Vancouver and the groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Britton of Victoria. Reverend J. A. G. Wilson officiated. The bride wore an empire line gown of white ligoda. The scooped neckline and elbow length sleeves were lace-trimmed, accented by clusters of pearls and crystal beading as was the lace on the bodice. A cathedral length train was attached a the back of the waist. Her veil was three tiered and gathered in front with hand made white rosebuds. She carried a bouquet of tangerine roses. Attendants were Miss Mary Carling, Terrace, B.C., maid of honor; Mrs. David Bosworth and Miss Maureen Emery, cousins of the bride from Calgary and Vancouver. They wore floor length gowns of peau d'elegance made in sleeveless empire lines in shades of peach mint green and pale yellow. They carried bouquets of white and yellow chrysanthemums.

Mr. Larry Elford was best man. Ushers were Mr. Ron Britton, of Vancouver, brother of the groom, Mr. Richard Emery, West Vancouver, brother of the bride and Mr. Brian McMorran, Kamloops.

Reichert — Frampton

St. Aidan's United Church was the setting of a double ring ceremony uniting in marriage Dianne Mary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Frampton, to Mr. Terrence Dwight Reichert, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Reichert, on June 14, 1969, at 7 p.m.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a floor length dress of white organza with long lily point sleeves, a train flowing from the empire waist and a four-tiered scalloped veil held in place by a pearl headpiece. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses and white stephanotis. Her only jewelry was a single strand of pearls, a gift from the groom. Maid of honor, Miss Sandra Fracy and attendants Mrs. Pat Frampton, Mrs. Phyllis Taylor and Miss Wendy Reichert wore identical floor-length dresses of yellow peau d'elegance made by the bride. They carried bouquets of yellow daisies.

Best man was Mr. Allan Irving. Ushers were Messrs. Jim Shepherd, Gordon Frampton and Don Reichert.

The wedding took place in the Chapel by the Sea, HMS Dockyard on July 12, 1969.

Worthington — Vantreight

On July 26, 1969, at 7:30 p.m. a double ring ceremony took place at Saint Dunstan's Anglican Church, Gordon Head, when Wendy Maureen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Vantreight, Tyndall Avenue, became the bride of Mr. Frederick Worthington, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Worthington, Derby Road. The Venerable A. E. Hendy officiated. Soloist, Miss Willo Trousdell of Vancouver, set a special tone of reverence at the beginning of the ceremony when she sang "The Lord's Prayer" and later "I'll Walk Beside You."

The beaming bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely floor-length gown of white peau d'elegance with lily point sleeves and full train which flowed from the shoulder. Her bouquet was of gardenias, 'Jack-o-lantern roses, and stephanotis. The matron of honor was Mrs. Ronald Hancock, the bride's sister. The Misses Willo Trousdell, Heather and Gail Vantreight were bridesmaids and young Stephanie Vantreight was junior bridesmaid. They wore short, sleeveless, empire-line dresses of coral georgette over primrose yellow rayon with stephanotis in their Grecian looped hair, and carried coral gladiolus and stephanotis.

Best man was Mr. Craig Wilson, of Vancouver, and Messrs. Dale Miller, Wayne Speidel and Ron McRae ushered the guests.

The bride's mother chose a smart white suit and gloves and black patent accessories. She wore a gardenia. The groom's mother wore a delicate turquoise dress and coat ensemble with white accessories and a white rose corsage.

The reception was held in the Empress Hotel Ballroom where Mr. Ben Domoney proposed the toast to the bride, his niece. Mr. Walter MacNaughtan, from Vancouver, was master of ceremonies and Len Acre's Band provided music for the evening.

The bride's going-away outfit was a turquoise linen walking suit with matching hat and white accessories. Her corsage was pink carnations and stephanotis. On their return from an Up-Island honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Worthington will reside in Victoria.

Ireland — Turnbull

St. Aidan's United Church was the scene of a lovely wedding on August 2, 1969, at 2 p.m., when Reverend Alex Calder officiated at the double ring ceremony which united Wendy Lynn, daughter of Colonel and Mrs. R. S. Turnbull, 2891 Murray Drive, Victoria, to Mr. Brian Ross Ireland, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Ireland, Kamloops, B.C. Mrs. Vera Barclay was organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in an empire style sheath gown of peau de soie, with long sleeves and bodice of Austrian lace. Aqua satin ribbon lined the lace of the high neck and the edge of the lace train. Her short bouffant veil of alternate tiers of white and aqua illusion net was held in place by a crystal tiara. She carried a white Bible, centred with a large orchid and stephanotis.

Attendants wore A-line floor length gowns of green and blue flowered chiffon over taffeta, Miss Susan Turnbull, maid of honor for her sister, over blue taffeta; Miss Lynda Allan and Miss Ruth Glenwright over green taffeta. They wore matching short veil headpieces that fell from velvet ribbon bows and carried a single orchid and stephanotis arrangement.

Flower girl Lesley Brown wore a long white eyelet gown over aqua taffeta with aqua velvet bows, and aqua headpiece. She carried a basket of baby mums.

Hawkes — van Schaik

At St. Patrick's Church on August 1st, 1969, at 3 p.m. Maria Clementina van Schaik, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adolf van Schaik, 2014 Foul Bay Road, became the bride of Mr. Robert Bruce Hawkes, son of Mrs. R. P. Hawkes, and the late Mr. Hawkes. Reverend J. Jackson officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length silk gown offset by tear drop pearls and lace plaits. Baskets of gladiolus and peonies decorated Hythe United Church, Hythe, Alberta, for the wedding July 26, 1969, at 4:30 p.m. that united Patricia Rose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Fair, Hythe, Alberta, and Mr. Ronald Frederick Stewart, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Stewart, 570 Kay Street, Victoria. Reverend David Pype officiated at the double ring ceremony. Soloist Elaine Stubbs was accompanied on the piano by Mr. Brian Dyrkach.

The lovely bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a floor length empire style gown of peau d'elegance, with stand-up neckline and long sleeves. The A-line skirt, featured a long train from mid-back. She carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations. Matron of honour Mrs. Connie Dick and bridesmatron Mrs. Audrey Jewitt, sisters of the bride, wore identical floor length gowns of pink and white Swiss polka dot, with empire waists of daisy trimmed lace. Pink lace bands adorned their hair and they carried bouquets of pink and white carnations.

Best man to the groom were his brothers—first, Mr. William Stewart, Jr., and second — Mr. Ian Stewart. Ushers were Mr. Brian Fair, brother of the bride, and Mr. Raymond Stewart, brother of the groom.

Mother of the bride was attired in a coral fortrel ensemble. She wore white accessories and an orchid corsage. The mother of the groom chose a blue fortrel ensemble with biege accessories and orchid corsage. Following a reception in Hythe Legion Hall, the newly weds left for a honeymoon to Kelowna, B.C. They will reside in Moose Jaw, Sask.

Out of town guests came from Alberta—Grande Prairie, Wanham, Penhold, Edmonton, Calgary; B.C.—Victoria, Smithers, Ft. St. John, Dawson Creek; Sask—Regina; Ontario—Odessa.

Lowe — Dunn

Reverend Ernest W. S. Gilbert officiated at a double ring ceremony in St. Peter's Anglican Church, August 2, 1969, when Margaret Helen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Dunn, exchanged vows with Mr. David Eugene Lowe, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. Lowe.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a floor length gown of Sonesta with a front panel of Chantilly lace accented with a row of re-embroidered daisies. The same lace trimmed the full length sleeve and also the detachable watteau train which fell from the back waist. A silk veil trimmed with tiny daisies fell from a capelet of daisies studded with seed pearls. A peach gladiola resting on a white Bible was carried by the bride.

Matron of Honor Mrs. Michael Felton and bridesmaid Miss Janice Adams wore identical floor length turquoise gowns trimmed with white daisies. Both carried colonial bouquets of white daisies.

Mr. David Drewry attended as best man and ushers were Messrs. Douglas Bratt and Tom Dunn, brother of the bride. Mr. R. C. Ashey, uncle of the bride; proposed the toast at the reception held in the Queen Victoria Inn. For the honeymoon, the bride chose a three piece tan and white Italian knit suit, a wide brimmed white summer felt hat and white accessories.

Out of town guests attending were Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Askey, Mr. and Mrs. K. A. Stokes, and Mr. and Mrs. T. Dickinson of Vancouver, Mr. and Mrs. G. Hudson of Campbell River; Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Wilson, Mr. B. Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Lytton, Ladysmith, B.C.

Stauffer — Huson

Christ Church, Alert Bay was the scene of a lovely wedding June 27, 1969, when Grace Elizabeth, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Charles Huson, 1007 Redfern Avenue, became the bride of Mr. Julian Alexandria Stauffer, son of Mr. H. Stauffer, Alert Bay, and the late Mrs. Stauffer. Reverend Standner officiated; Mrs. Kenmuir was organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a gown of peau de soie empire style, entrain, edged in daisied lace. Her tiered veil was chapel length and she carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses. Attendants wore lace dress and coat ensembles, Miss Susan Stocks in pink, Miss Mary Stauffer, and Mrs. Flora Palm in blue. They wore velvet bow and small veil headpieces and carried bouquets of white daisies. Flower girl Miss Vicki McNeil wore a short lace dress and carried a basket of white daisies. Master Brian Palm as ring-bearer, carried a heart shaped white pillow. Best man was Mr. John Stauffer, brother of the groom and ushers were Messrs. David Cramer, and Norman Scowl.

Toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. A. Wasden at the gathering held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arnie Wasden. A reception followed at the Community Hall. The young couple now reside in Alert Bay.

Won — Oakley

Canon George Biddle officiated at a double ring ceremony on July 19th, 1969, at 2 p.m. in St. George's Anglican Church, when Janice Evelyn, only daughter of Mrs. Wm F. Oakley and the late Mr. William F. Oakley exchanged wedding vows with Mr. Thorne K. Won, only son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Won of Victoria.

Given in marriage by her uncle Mr. Elmer Curtis, the bride was attended by Miss Denise Won, sister of the groom. Best man was Mr. William Malcolm of Victoria and ushers were Mr. Dennis Lim and Mr. Dave Oakley. Mrs. H. H. Youson was soloist.

At a reception at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel, Mr. Hugh Lockhart proposed the toast to the bride. After a honeymoon trip in B.C. the young couple returned via Prince Rupert-Kelsey Bay route to Vancouver where they now reside.

NEW LISTING
COUNTRY LIVING
ONLY $29,500

If you are tired of living in the city here is a wonderful opportunity to make a change. A 1½-storey, well-cared for older home located on 1.81 acres of land. The home has 4 bedrooms, large, bright living room with a stone fireplace, large panelled dining room and modern cabinet kitchen, plus a utility room, the new oil furnace located in the part basement keeps the home dry and warm. At the side of the house is a very large combination workshop and garage which if you are a horse lover could be easily converted to a stable as there is lots of grazing for horses. The front of the house is landscaped with lawn shrubs and many types of fruit trees, also a small greenhouse at the back of the main house. Located on the bus lines and only 1 mile from the elementary school this home has been in the same family for two generations.
This is a truly wonderful buy at only $29,500.

Vancouver Archer Tied For Second

Compiling a 1,756 total after three days of the four-day target event, she leads Dorothy Lidstone of Vancouver, and Hanna Brezezinka of Poland who are tied at 1,755. In fourth place is a Russian Nonna Kozina, 1,741.

Still leading for the men is the 19-year-old champion from Mt. Pleasant, Tex., Hardy Ward, who amazed the 155 competitors from 27 nations by scoring a perfect end at 90 metres—meaning that he placed six consecutive arrows in the nine inch bullseye at 98.5 yards. Close behind Ward, whose total is 1,794, is 15-year-old John Williams of Cranesville, Pa., with 1,788.

In men's competition, the United States holds a commanding lead with 5,308 points. Denmark is second with 5,129 and Britain third with 5,038.

In the women's team competition the U.S.S.R. leads with 5,129, followed by Canada and Poland tied at 5,067. U.S. women are in fourth place with 5,026.

Space Conquest Church Challenge

Man's conquest of space is a major challenge to religion, says Most Rev. Remi De Roo, Roman Catholic Bishop of Victoria.

"But it is only a challenge because so many people have a hazy idea of what religion means. They think that, by landing on the moon, man has taken over what used to be called God's domain.

"This is quite absurd. God is a spirit and His domain is everywhere. He is as much alive here on earth as He is beyond the skies.

"Furthermore even if man were to travel at the speed of light, he could never reach some of the outer galaxies. Landing on the moon or even Mars is only touching the fringe of outer space."

Bishop De Roo said most scientists today are "more and more humbled" by the wonders of the universe. The majority are convinced there is a power infinitely greater than themselves.

Bishop De Roo is flying to Sudbury, Ont., Tuesday to address the general synod of the Anglican Church of Canada. His subject will be The Changing Church.

He will urge that Anglicans and Roman Catholics work more closely together at both spiritual and social levels.

"The ecumenical movement is progressing slowly," he said, "but it is going through a period of re-examination. Many people today are challenging the need for organic union. They feel the important thing is that we should work together on social issues.

"I don't agree. I believe we should have organic unity while retaining our own individual forms of worship."

One important change in the church, the Bishop said, is that many priests and clergymen are now working at secular occupations during the week.

PNE '69 Salutes Japan's Expo '70

VANCOUVER (CP) — The 1969 edition of the 17-day Pacific National Exhibition looks westward to the far east for its theme, a salute to the 1970 World's Fair at Osaka, Japan.

Topping the Japanese-oriented activities, which start today will be a visit to the fair by 28 dignitaries from Yokohama, Vancouver's sister city in Japan. The group, which will take part in the opening festivities, will be led by Ichio Asukata, mayor of Yokohama.

Gifts will be exchanged by representatives of Vancouver and Japan.

The PNE will also have its traditional activities back again. The agricultural portaion of the show will again play host to thousands of city folk.

GRANDSTAND SHOW

Horse jumping goes every day as well as dairy, beef, swine, sheep, goats, and poultry competitions, and a nightly grandstand show at Empire Stadium.

The popular festival of forestry will feature a free loggers' sports show thrice daily and a forestry film festival twice each day.

Playland, the PNE's midway, sports 22 rides and 15 games in its nine acre area.

Playland general manager Gerry Crawshaw said this year at Playland could be the biggest ever as revenue so far in 1969 is up 45 per cent from 1968.

The annual PNE parade was to start through the downtown area at 10 a.m. today.

OPEN 17 DAYS

"A lot depends on the weather," he said. "Last year only four of the 14 days were sunny but this year we're open 17 days."

The Miss PNE pageant with entries from throughout B.C. is scheduled for Aug. 25 to 27 in the Pacific Coliseum, with PNE director Alan Emmott as chairman of judges.

A film of the Apollo 11 crew on the moon is also expected to be crowd pleaser according to show officials. The film, to be shown in the Pacific Coliseum's Japanese theatre, is still in production, but should arrive some time during the show's first week.

Also on display will be a $200,000 space suit used in the astronaut training program and a U.S. air force Titan missile converted into a walk-through exhibit.

NEW GROUP TO DIRECT CANUCK WATER SPORTS

MONTREAL (CP) — A new body has been chosen to govern water sports in Canada, it was announced following a meeting here during the Canadian swimming championships.

The Canadian Amateur Swimming Association, founded in 1919, has been replaced by the Canadian Federation of Amateur Aquatics. The four major aqua sports — swimming, water polo, diving and synchronized swimming — will come directly under the CFAA. Each sport will conduct its own affairs.

Dick Gaul of Montreal, first president and chairman of the board, said the move was not a snap decision but rather something which has been studied and planned for several months.

FAVORED to win annual distance swim at Thetis Lake Sunday is Jim Gollmer, who is scheduled to try for second straight victory. Several shorter races in program sponsored by Vic-Van-Isle Kinsmen are slated to start at 1:30 p.m.

SKI GROUP LAUNCHES DEVELOPMENT PROJECT

Sno-Bird Lifts, a society affiliated with the Sno-Birds Ski Club, is going full speed ahead with the development of Green Mountain into a family ski area.

An order has been placed with Alpine Lifts Ltd. of Kelowna for the $50,000 T-Bar which will provide a nucleus for development of the area near Nanaimo.

When installed, the new lift will carry 800 skiers per hour approximately 2,400 feet up the mountain through a vertical rise of 808 feet.

Base of the T-Bar will be located at a new lodge and parking lot at the 3,500-foot elevation.

Preliminary work on laying out the lift route for tree removal started this week.

Pollution May Force Birds Off Preserves

By JERRY FRANK
Guelph Mercury

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — The concrete and asphalt of creeping urban development may force about 5,000 birds of 60 species out of their wilderness home inside this southern Ontario city's corporate limits.

The birds, residents of the Niska Waterfowl Research Station and Kortright Waterfowl Park, may have to be relocated unless some way is found to protect the purity of the water in their home.

Relatively unpolluted water is essential for waterfowl breeding and nesting at the 110-acre park and research station, operated by the Ontario Waterfowl Research Foundation.

But urban development on surrounding land could pollute spring-fed Hanlon Creek which runs through the area and feeds man-made ponds in the preserve.

William Carrick, Niska manager, says he is worried that dirty or slow-flowing water would mean the preserve's bird population would have to be reduced. And if the water became too dirty, the preserve would have to be moved.

Mr. Carrick believes that by prohibiting development on about 2,000 key acres of nearby land, the creek and the preserve could be protected.

MONEY IS LACKING

But Mr. Carrick admits he has no documentation for his argument about prohibiting urban development. And the foundation, which operates the preserve, has no money to pay for a scientific study to see if he is right.

The hope, Mr. Carrick says, is that public opinion will force the city into protecting the area.

Guelph is the only city in Canada with a wildlife bird sanctuary within its corporate limits. Guelph industrialist Horace Mack started the preserve 19 years ago as a private duck sanctuary.

After Mr. Mack's death in 1961, a group of Ontario sportsmen and business executives purchased the property and set up the Ontario Waterfowl Research Foundation.

The property since has been divided into two sections. One is the park area named after Frank H. Kortright, one of Ontario's leading wildlife authorities. The research portion is named Niska after the Cree word for Canada goose.

The site serves as a stop-over point for thousands of migrating waterfowl and a breeding and nesting ground for rare species. About 14,000 tourists visited the property last year.

STUDY PESTICIDES

Biologists, naturalists and wildlife students have worked at the research station, and studies are under way on pesticides, parasites and in the field of genetics.

An engineering study of the area in 1966 suggests two alternatives for the creek. One plan would turn the waterway into a concrete-lined storm sewer. The other suggests that 845 acres of green land could be saved by a series of creek dams at a cost of $220,000.

But the report, requested by the Grand River Conservation Authority, says that in any case urban development of nearby land will eventually reduce the natural bogs and marshes where the birds abound.

"Specialized research on waterfowl will not be feasible or compatible when full development takes place because of the deterioration in water quality," the report says.

The report suggests the preserve should be replaced by something of a more general zoological nature.

Robert P. Hall, city planning and development director, says he is skeptical about the future of the preserve.

WOULD DRY UP

He says urbanization in the surrounding area will dry up the wetlands because water will run off quickly in storm sewers from asphalted areas instead of seeping into the ground to feed marshes and bogs.

He adds that saving the preserve by prohibiting development in the area is not economically feasible, and if the city tries to protect large tracts of land from development by restrictive zoning, it could face legal challenges from property owners.

But Mr. Carrick thinks there is little chance of trouble.

"A developer, if faced with the fact that 90 per cent of the citizens of Guelph want this (preserve) kept is not going to turn around and sue the city," he says.

The local chamber of commerce and the New Democratic Party have joined a campaign to keep the park and research station.

The group will meet this summer with the Ontario Waterfowl Research Foundation's trustees, who have considered offers to sell the memoirs.

Carol Mann Leads by Two

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Carol Mann sloshed over a rain-drenched course in what she called her "best round ever under the conditions" and grabbed a two-stroke lead Friday in the first round of the $20,000 Southgate Open women's golf tournament.

Miss Mann finished with a two-under-par 70, two strokes better than Kathy Whitworth and Judy Kimball.

Tied for fourth at 73 were Sharon Miller, Sandra Spuzich and Sue Maxwell Berning while Canada's Sandra Post was well back with a 29-38—77.

Ailing Tremblay Enters Hospital

MONTREAL (CP) — Left winger Gilles Tremblay of Montreal Canadiens is in hospital to undergo examinations for a respiratory problem.

Tremblay, 30, a veteran of eight National Hockey League seasons with the Canadiens, missed most of the 1968-69 season with the ailment.

Leroy Face Released

MONTREAL (UPI)—Montreal Expos gave veteran pitcher Elroy Face his unconditional release after the team's game here Friday night against the Los Angeles Dodgers in which Face pitched two innings in relief, yielding two home runs. Johnston of Vancouver had 75 for the same total.

DOUBLE PRICE ON DARK SIDE OF MOON

BELO HORIZONTE, Brazil (UPI) — Jose Cassiano de Jesus had taken in $125 on down payments for land on the moon when police arrived Friday.

De Jesus was selling land on the near side of the moon for $25 down and $5 in 24 monthly installments. Land on the far side the price was double because as De Jesus put it, "It is richer there."

None of the bilked customers wanted to press charges, police said.

"They all expressed some embarrassment," officers said. He was released.

Jailed Youth 'Lesser Fry'

NANAIMO (CP) — A Nanaimo youth described by provincial court judge Eric Winch as "one of the lesser fry" in the drug world was sentenced Friday to six months definite and 18 months indeterminate.

Ronald Hinksman, 20, was charged with trafficking in marijuana after he sold a $5 bag to an undercover RCMP agent.

TOWN GETS OKAY FOR SUBDIVISION

LADYSMITH — Ottawa has given approval for the town to go ahead with its 100-lot subdivision west of Holland Creek Park.

Mayor Kay Grouhel said Thursday the 32-acre land assembly scheme had been approved by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation which will finance home construction in the area.

Mayor Grouhel said lots will probably sell from $2,600 to $2,700 each. Work is due to start within the month for installation or roads and services.

Cong Trickery Suspected In Murder of Top Agent

By ANTON WILLS-EVE

SAIGON (Reuters) — Informed South Vietnamese sources believed the Viet Cong may have tricked the United States Central Intelligence Agency into ordering the alleged murder of a top South Vietnamese government agent.

Eight U.S. Special Forces officers and men in Vietnam, including the former commander of the Green Berets, Col. Robert Rheault, have been arrested and charged with the June 20 murder of a South Vietnamese civilian.

American authorities have refused to comment on the case.

The sources maintain that the killing was ordered by the CIA on the basis of information fed to it by the Viet Cong, calculated to suggest that the man was a Communist double agent.

The sources said the dead man was in fact a double agent working against, not for, the Communists, and that was why the guerrillas wanted him out of the way.

The sources said that the CIA countermanded its order to kill the man when South Vietnamese intelligence tipped it off about the error. The order was either received too late or not obeyed, the sources said.

CHECKING ON RING

The sources identified the dead man as Vu Ngoc Nha and said South Vietnamese intelligence assigned him to crack an espionage ring thought to be operating in the presidential palace and the open arms ministry handling Viet Cong defectors.

A former special adviser to President Nguyen Van Thieu, Huynh Van Trong, was recently arrested on spying charges, and the sources maintained that it was Trong who was head of the network Nha was investigating.

The sources said that before his arrest, Trong realized he was in danger and managed to plant a photograph with a high CIA agent in Saigon which made it seem as if Nha was a Communist double agent.

Since the CIA agent knew Nha only in another guise, as an undercover man working with the Green Berets in the Cambodian border region under the alias of Capt. Chu Ven Thai Khac, he immediately ordered Nha's execution, the sources said.

Only when the file had reached Washington was it realized that Nha was a double agent with known contacts in Phnom Penh, Cambodia, and Vientiane, Laos. The countermanding order was then issued, the sources said.

No date has yet been set for the hearing of the murder charges against the Green Berets.

City Manager Young On Urban Info Study

Victoria city manager Dennis Young is a member of a three-man team appointed to study the feasibility of setting up a national information service on urban affairs.

The Canada Council has given a $10,000 grant toward the study.

The information system would make the findings of research on Canadian urban problems and data on management practices available to university researchers, government administrators, and professionals engaged in the design and management of urban regions.

Working with Young will be Prof. Michel Barcelo of the University of Montreal and Harry Campbell, chief librarian of the Toronto Public Library.

The team will obtain most of its information through consultants and interviews with persons concerned with urban affairs.

The study has also received support from the Ford Foundation, Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation and other federal agemcies.

Young, who was born in Duncan, served as finance commissioner for Hamilton, Ont. before coming to Victoria in 1963 as city manager.

Doctor Injured In Accident

Dr. Robert Torrie, 2793 Somass Ave., was admitted to Royal Jubilee Hospital this morning suffering from head injuries received when his car collided with an overhead loader on the 2100 block on Oak Bay Avenue. His condition is satisfactory.

Driver of the loader, Arnold Weldam, of Moat Street, was not injured. The accident occurred at 8:05 a.m.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Fidler Will Due to be Revealed

By BOB BOWMAN

It should become known today or Monday whether a descendant of Canadian explorer Peter Fidler can share a large sum of money from his will. When Fidler died on August 17, 1822, he directed that his money should be invested at compound interest until 200 years after the date of his birth (August 17, 1769) and then given to the eldest living heir of his own youngest son. Like many Hudson's Bay Company factors of those days Fidler had married an Indian.

Since telling the story at this time last year, the writer has been in touch with a member of the Fidler family living in Vancouver, and he says that there are 251 claimants to the estate, many of them represented by lawyers. The mystery is whether anyone complied with the terms of the will. It may be that there is a great deal of money available, but, if so, the amount, location, and name of beneficiary have been kept secret.

It seems unlikely that Fidler's instruction would have been disregarded. He was the chief surveyor of the Hudson's Bay Company from 1796 to 1821, laid out the district of Assiniboia, and also Lord Selkirk's Red River settlement. He was paid 100 pounds a year and probably saved a good portion of it.

He was also a respected member of the community, although he was not popular. He might be called the founder of Manitoba's cattle industry because he bought five cows and a bull to develop a herd. The only other bull was called "Adam" and was brought to the area by the Selkirk settlers. Unfortunately Adam went skating on the Red River ice and was drowned.

Some thanks is due Peter Fidler because Manitoba now has more than 1,000,000 cattle worth perhaps $200,000,000. If he had invested his money in beef cattle it could certainly be worth a fortune at today's prices!

Other events on August 16:

1857—Imprisonment for debt was abolished in Canada.

1897—Yukon Judicial District was formed.

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: My two goldfish arein a small window tank which gets pretty warm these days. They seem all right but I was wondering just how warm a tank they can stand without it being unhealthy for them — G. R.

DEAR G. R.: Undoubtedly they've "stood" too warm a tank many times so far. Each time they are semi-boiled their resistance and life expectancy drop. Goldfish do best at a 60 to 65 degree temperature though 70 is certainly suitable. When the temperature climbs to the upper 70's they become increasingly uncomfortable, especially in cramped quarters. Window aquariums can be especially dangerous, for most kinds of fish, this time of year. If the fish aren't actually boiled, the wide temperature fluctuations weaken them, permitting various diseases to take over.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: Wee Willie, my cat, loves peas. Always has. This summer, for the first time, he has broken out in what has been called an allergic dermatitis. There has been improvement, with treatment, but it's slow. Is it possible that after all these years, green peas don't agree with my Willie? — T. Q.

DEAR T. Q.: His own veterinarian could best determine if the peas were responsible for Wee Willie's dermatological dilemma. Though other foods and-or contact contaminants are more likely to trigger an allergic response, it's possible peas are the culprits.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: I know my parakeet isn't an exception because he likes to share my martini. Friends of mine have birds who also enjoy the cocktail hour. But I'm afraid my bird, Gasket, is close to being an alcoholic.

He demands his drinks, and he really drinks a lot for so little a bird. Since he started this, he doesn't touch his water.

I feel he has to drink something so his fluid intake is mostly martinis. But I wonder if this is really so bad when he does eat as well as he does. He gets a variety of the best seeds available, plus a vitamin supplement — H. Y.

DEAR H. Y.: Unfortunately your boozing budgie is drinking his way into an early grave regardless of the state of his nutrition. Contrary to earlier research, the latest indicates cirrhosis of the liver is a direct result of the amount of alcohol consumed over a period of time.

Good nutrition during this period does not modify liver damage from alcohol. (It merely prevents additional damage from malnutrition.)

So even though Gasket hates the stuff — water, that is — you'd better get him back on it, and soon. Hopefully, he still has enough liver left to share many martiniless moments with you.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: What can I give my salamander, Sally, besides worms which I can't find and am running out of? — E. O.

DEAR E. O.: Sally should like various soft-bodied insects and small spiders. Even slim strips of raw liver, if it's fresh, may tempt her.

Pink Coffins And Kooks On Weird Tour

By REG SILVESTER

"It was a tale of pink coffins and rattlesnakes, 2,000 hitchikers and assorted kooks.

For Danny Gravella, a 17-year-old from Whitby, Ont., arriving in Victoria at the end of a 3,200-mile bicycle ride was a relief.

But the trail of people along his route made the trip interesting.

It was "sort of weird" when the teen-ager and his companion Doug Turner, 15, who stayed in Vancouver, met an Englishman taking a pink coffin to Expo '70.

"It had Union Jacks all over it, and he slept in it at night."

Farther down the Trans-Canada Highway, there was another development in the battle of the flags. A man was walking along the road, pulling a wagon with a small house atop, carrying a large maple leaf banner over his shoulder.

But mostly, there were hitch-hikers.

"They were interesting to talk to, and they were all good people."

They came from Toronto, Montreal and even Texas. Usually, the destination was Vancouver.

The rattlesnake came early in the trip, near a swamp at the bottom of a hill on the third day. His friend had ridden ahead, and stopped to look at the snake.

Danny came coasting down, and missed it by inches.

"If I'd been pedalling when I went buy, it would have struck. It left me feeling a bit wierd."

It was near Cavers, Ont., where a hill drops 700 feet in 1½ miles.

He was scared.

"I didn't have any brakes. I had it in high gear, and if I had gone any faster, my feet would have flown off the pedals."

The trip was not without physical injury. Near Calgary, he gouged his ankle on the sprocket. It was just about healed when he rapped it on his pedal getting onto the ferry in Vancouver.

Now it's infected, and he couldn't ride his cicycle if he had to.

"It was sort of a long grind," he said. He doesn't know if he'll try another long-distance ride next summer.

He's staying in Victoria with Whitby native G. G. Arnold of 3520 Upper Terrace. Danny knew Arnold's 16-year-old daughter, Mary, at school.

Abernathy Makes Militant Pledge

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — The Southern Christian Leadership Conference has re-elected Rev. Ralph David Abernathy as president and pledged a militant new attack on poverty, racism and war.

The unopposed re-election came Friday, a day ahead of schedule, as the civil rights group hurried to finish pressing business before recessing a four-day national convention in Charleston today.

The convention will reconvene in Chicago to decide whether the SCLC will become more involved in an assault on what it calls "racism" in the building trade unions there.

Abernathy said the SCLC will spend the next year involving itself more heavily in labor affairs, including the organization of non-professional hospital workers in several southern cities.

He said there will be a nation-wide effort to organize the working poor into labor and political groups.

Admit 20 Deserters

STOCKHOLM (Reuters) — The Swedish government has granted residence permits to 20 more United States military deserters in recent weeks, bringing the official total to 267, it was announced Friday. The immigration board said another 10 applications are under consideration.

Thailand to Command U.S. Troops Under Secret Deal

WASHINGTON (WP) — The secret 1965 American-Thai "military contingency plan" would send U.S. troops into action under Thailand's command if it ever came into force, Nixon administration sources conceded Friday.

If Thailand was threatened by the advance of North Vietnamese and Pathet Lao forces across Laos, U.S. troops could be committed to Thailand under the plan — provided that both nations ordered it into effect.

In that event, informed sources said, Thailand's prime minister, Field Marshal Thanom Kittikachorn, would be the top allied commander under the contingency program.

The plan provided for the ground commander to be the U.S. military assistance commander who in 1965 was Lt.-Gen. Richard Stilwell. He signed the plan on behalf of the United States.

A state department spokesman while again refusing to discuss the contents of the plan on grounds that that is up to the defence department, doubly emphasized Friday that it was and is in no way self-executing.

The plan is the centre of a running dispute with the Senate foreign relations committee.

Press officer Robert J. McCloskey said: "We made clear at the time we acknowledged its existence that the plan specifically states it cannot be carried into effect without the specific agreement of both the Thai and the U.S. governments.

"This contingency military planning has not expanded our defence commitment to Thailand beyond that already contained in the SEATO treaty," McCloskey continued.

Futhermore, he said, the plan "involves no commitment by the United States to any specific military action and that is made clear in the planning document itself."

McCloskey described the plan as "a bilateral U.S.-Thai military contingency plan which involved the defence of Thailand against an external threat."

Sen. Frank Church (D—Idaho) said Thursday that the question is whether such a contingency plan "could lead to another Vietnam."

A subcommittee headed by Sen. Stuart Symington (D—Mo.) plans extensive hearings, starting in September, on whether just such activities extended U.S. commitments in Asia without congressional knowledge or participation.

The Associated Press first disclosed portions of its contents Friday.

One portion of the plan, AP's Spencer Davis reported, provided that in event of a general offensive in Southeast Asia launched by Communist China, Gen. William Westmoreland, then the U.S. commander in South Vietnam, was to become allied field force commander for Southeast Asia.

Other administration sources, however, disagreed that the plan extends that far beyond challenge to Thailand itself.

The 1965 contingency concept of putting U.S. troops brought into Thailand under overall Thai command would conform with existing U.S. practice there.

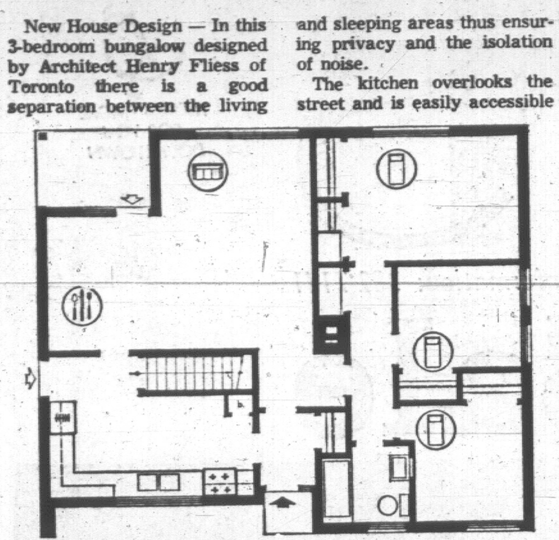
THREE BEDROOMS

Good Separation for Privacy

New House Design — In this 3-bedroom bungalow designed by Architect Henry Fliess of Toronto there is a good separation between the living and sleeping areas thus ensuring privacy and the isolation of noise.



The kitchen overlooks the street and is easily accessible from both front and side doors. The living-dining room has a sloped ceiling and large windows opening onto the garden. The front door is inset thereby giving protection from the weather. The side door leads directly down to an ample basement which, in addition to providing the normal utility and heating facilities, has room for the development of a recreation room or workshop. The front door of the house should face north.

The floor area is 1,160 square feet; the exterior dimensions are 39 feet six inches by 32 feet. Working drawings of this house, known as Design 218, are available from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation at minimum cost.

BULB FLOWERS

Fall Planting Ensures Bright Spring

By JACK BEASTALL

Every spring there are gardeners looking for daffodil, tulip, and hyacinth plants to put into beds or borders for color.

Jack

They are disappointed to learn these are bulbous subjects which must be planted during the previous fall.

In fact, despite the wealth of bloom and foliage in the garden right now, this weekend is not too soon to make plans for the display we would like to have next spring.

The seasoned West Coast gardener makes it a rule to visit the local bulb growers' fields in April or May when the flowers are at their peak.

At that time orders are placed for delivery in fall, and the gardener is assured the varieties he prefers and the quantities needed.

Fortunately for the gardener, bulb growers are well supplied with good color photographs of their stock, therefore it is still possible to select and place orders, but quantities may be more limited.

Spring flowering bulbs, together with wallflowers, forget-me-nots, and primulas, are features of spring in this area, and all have to be planted during September and October.

While daffodils are plentiful in local gardens, most are the older varieties. These can hardly be compared with present day hybrids which have greatly improved substance and form, and an extended color range.

So striking are the newer varieties, a dozen bulbs set in two groups of six can be a focal point in a small bed.

This grouping of bulbs, whether they be daffodils, tulips, hyacinths, spring crocuses, or the species crocuses which bloom from September on, is quite important.

A group has far more impact than six plants set a foot apart in a row. This, in turn, means greater value for every dollar spent.

Spring flowering bulbs are not limited to beds and borders.

They adapt well to naturalizing, that is, planting in grass or rough turf under trees or in open areas, and there is no finer subject for planters, tubs, and hanging baskets on high-rise balconies.

Also, there are the so-called forcing varieties especially suited to growing in pots for indoor decoration in late winter. These differ from the "Paperwhites" which bloom at Christmas in stones and water.

Right now the important thing to realize is that time is running short for making plans and decisions, and for placing orders for stock that will be needed.

During August, the vacation month, we have the urge to travel and to picnic. Why not combine a picnic with a visit to a bulb farm this weekend?

Then call on your nurseryman and order the primulas, wallflowers and other biennials, and your spring display will be well started.

Tips for the Home Gardener

* * *

WEEK'S WORK

Trim evergreen hedges for last time. Later pruning is likely to result in frost damage to new tips.

Take cuttings of berberis, cistus, cotoneaster, deutzia, weiglela, kolkwitzia, beddleia, genista, iberis and ericas.

To have annuals and late summer perennials for shows in September, remove all faded and fading blossoms now, cutting down to side shoots which give signs of growing.

By mid August, disbudding and thinning of fall perennials for shows will be completed. Give one last small feeding of complete fertilizer well watered in to improve color of flowers.

To keep annuals blooming into fall — African marigolds, zinnias, scabious, salpiglossis — remove blossoms with as long stems as possible without taking too many buds. This allows side branches to develop to full size.

Botany Meet to Be Marked by Issue

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

In Seattle on Aug. 23, the United States will release four 6-cent multicolors. They honor the 11th International Botanical Congress which will convene in Seattle. (Around 6,000 botanists will attend.)

Featured are flora from the four corners of the continental United States. Behind them are their geographical identities, and each is identified by its Latin names.

The respective areas, prominent flora and backgrounds are: northwest, Douglas fir and green mountains; south-west, ocotillo and pink and yellow shaded mountains; north-east, ladyslipper and islands; and southeast, the flower of the Franklinia tree and a southern mansion.

Each stamp is inscribed, on white backgrounds, and in capitals, with "XIth International Botanical Congress," and "6c United States."

They were printed in se-tenant blocks of four, and will be issued in sheets of 50. Blue, green, yellow, orange, pink, black and red are the colors. The formats are horizontal, and the designer is Stanley Galli of Kentfield, California.

On Aug. 13 Israel issued five pictorials for their annual festival. The subject of this set is the Deluge. Each stamps tab is inscribed with a quotation from Genesis which goes with the respective stamps design.

The denominations and passages are: 12a, "Make yourself an ark of gopher wood . . ."; 15a, "They went into the ark with Noah, two by two . . ."; 35a, ". . . and the ark floated on the face of the waters"; 40a, "Then he sent forth a dove . . ."; and 60a, ". . . and the bow is seen in the clouds."

Portugal July 16 issued three stamps marking the 200th anniversary of the settlement of California. They each bear a full length portrait of the Portuguese explorer and soldier Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo (d. 1543).

He discovered San Diego Bay on Sept. 28, 1542.

California's bicentennial is also observed by an 80-centavo air-mail of Mexixco. It features a likeness of Fater Junipero Serra (1713-84), who on July 16, 1769, founded the Mission San Diego de Alcala.

The Apollo 11 moon landing is honored by two Czechoslovakian pictorials released July 21. The 60-heller value depicts an aerial view of Manhattan Island, and an astronaut on the moon.

Shown on the 3-kronen denomination is a jet airport, and Neil A. Armstrong and Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. standing on the moon next to the LEM.

The British Christmas stamps will be released Nov. 26. The values will be 4d, 5d and 1s 6d.

The Republic of China (Taiwan) Aug. 14 released three air-mails. They portray: NT $2.50, two wild geese flying over cloud-draped mountains; NT $5, four wild geese flying over a coastline; and NT $8, six wild geese flying over land.

On Aug. 27, Papua and New Guinea will place on sale four colorful stamps depicting locally-found orchids of the genus Dendrobium.

IRISH DEMONSTRATORS rip apart Union Jack torn from the British Embassy in Dublin. Crowds gathered in the Northern Ireland capital as British soldiers continued to move in to quell rioting between Catholics and Protestants. (AP Wirephoto)

Roving Mobs Hit Belfast

BELFAST (CP)—Protestant mobs armed with fire bombs burned and looted Roman Catholic bars today in scattered areas of Belfast unprotected by British troops. But soldiers separated the warring factions in the riot-torn capital's major trouble spots.

Occasional sniper fire was heard this morning in the predominantly Roman Catholic Falls Road area, but by noon public transportation was reported operating normally and housewives were going to market.

Spurts of sniper and machine-gun fire had rattled through the capital after dawn and gangs roamed glass-strewn streets looting whatever remained in the gutted stores after the second night of vicious street fighting.

Additional British troops were being flown in to strengthen an estimated 1,600 already here as the violence continued. Police said three persons were killed and 42 wounded in the fourth straight night of sectarian battles in Northern Irish cities.

Since Tuesday, eight persons have been killed and more than 700 injured in the state's worst civil disorders since the Irish Civil War of 1920-1922.

RAID R.C. BARS

Police said Protestant gangs attacked Roman Catholic-owned bars in three sections of Belfast. They gave the owners 15 minutes to get out, then threw milk bottles filled with gasoline, detergent and sugar inside the buildings. The mixture burns like napalm.

Off to Ulster Is Cry of IRA

By DEREK MARLOWE
Special to the Washington Post

DUBLIN — Eire's 2,000-strong outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA) openly called Friday night for volunteers, arms, transport and money in Dublin to cross the border into Northern Ireland and fight at the side of Catholics behind the barricades.

The call followed a two-hour meeting of the 12 commandants of the organization's executive committee in Dublin.

●

Later Friday night in the heart of Dublin, outside the historic post office in O'Connell Street where 50 years ago men of the 1916 uprising fought British troops, IRA men reaffirmed their appeal to a mass meeting called by Sinn Fein, the organization's political arm.

The IRA move followed an earlier decision by Prime Minister Jack Lynch, to mobolize 2,000 first line reserves of the Eire army.

There is some anxiety about the government's deployment of troops to the border and the setting up of field hospitals for Catholics injured in the rioting in Ulster who may now want to get hospital treatment there for fear of alleged retaliation by the Protestant-dominated police, the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

●

Some observers here believe the troops facing the border—especially at Londonderry—have done nothing except inflame Protestant feeling and encourage further violence from Catholics on the other side, who were still hurling gasoline bombs in Belfast Friday night.

Informed sources here say Prime Minister Lynch, although as anxious as most Irishmen in the republic to see their country reunited, has been pressured into making his demands by the hard line hawks in his cabinet.

These ministers, enough to cause a serious split, see the present situation as the beginning of Eire's real chance to end the "unfinished business" of 1916.

QUEBEC WINS CHAMPIONSHIP

Valleyfield's Little Leaguers took the Canadian championship for Quebec today with a 4-1 victory over British Columbia's Vancouver Collingwood team.

The team came on strong in the top of the fourth in Saanich's Hampton Park (see story Page 21) to earn a ticket to Williamsport, Pa., and the Little League World Series Aug. 23.

Firebombs Found In Montreal Store

MONTREAL (CP) — Police early today reported the discovery of four incendiary devices in Eaton's downtown department store and the explosion of a bomb at the headquarters of the Confederation of National Trade Unions.

The incendiary devices, made of cloth soaked in a chemical, were found hidden in merchandise on two floors of the store during a Friday-night search.

Police said a store security guard suffered minor facial burns and smoke inhalation when one of the objects ignited.

A police spokesman said the bombs were designed to burst into flame when the chemical treatment evaporated or when water was poured onto them.

The security guard was injured when he immersed one of the objects in water after finding it hidden between the cushions of a sofa.

The spokesman said other such devices were found hidden in the pocket of coats on display racks.

Meanwhile, an explosive device went off at St. Denis St. headquarters of the CNTU, the Quebec-based labor federation.

There were no injuries.

NEWS BRIEFS

Wilson Hurries Home

LONDON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Wilson will cut short his vacation and fly to London Monday for crisis talks with Northern Ireland's Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark.

Edmonton Strike

EDMONTON (CP) — Buses were idle and drivers manned picket lines for the second day today of the Alberta capital's first transportation strike in 50 years. Union and city officials met briefly late Friday but there were no discussions on a contract dispute which has left about 100,000 daily bus passengers to find alternate means of transportation in the metropolitan centre of 440,000 persons, seventh largest in Canada.

Pesticide Use Cut By Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reacting to public pressure, the United States agriculture department announced Friday a substantial curtailment in government use of such long-lived pesticides as DDT, dieldrin and heptachlor.

The department announced that from now on it will use less-persistent chemicals such as chlordane wherever possible in federal-state insect-control programs.

A department spokesman said widespread public concern over pesticide use prompted the department to suspend control program operations so they could be studied more fully.

Hurricane Flags Fly in Florida

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane warning flags flew in north western Florida today as Camille, the worst storm to threaten that Gulf of Mexico coastal area in more than half a century roared in with winds of 115 miles an hour.

Pushing ahead tides of five to 10 feet, Camille was described by forecasters as the most dangerous storm to head for that white sandy coast since a devastating blow in 1915, in an era when hurricanes had no names.

Hurricane force winds howled over an 80-mile-wide area around the hurricane's eye, gales lashed a 300-mile-wide expanse, and conditions favored further increase in intensity, forecasters said.

Gale warnings were raised at noon EDT from Pensacola, Fla., to Cedar Key, well down on the Florida peninsula.

As Camille spun toward a landfall, tropical storm Debbie grew to hurricane force in the Atlantic 1,200 miles east-southeast of San Juan, Puerto Rico. Debbie's winds were up to 80 miles an hour and increasing.

The north-northwest track Camille had followed since she hit western Cuba with a fierce one-two punch of wind and rain earlier had aimed her toward a point where the coasts of Florida, Alabama and Mississippi converge on the Gulf of Mexico shore.

Slowly rebuilding fury lost in the overnight crossing of Cuba, Camille chased small craft into port the length of the Florida west coast and all the way around the Gulf to Grand Isle, La.

Camille's top winds were knocked down from 115 to 100 miles an hour as she lashed across the rich tobacco croplands of western Cuba, sending hundreds of persons fleeing to high ground in that flood-vulnerable area.

Biafrans Hit Depot

LAGOS (AP) — Federal authorities said today a Biafran plane slipped through Nigerian defences in the mid-western province and shot up a Gulf oil terminal, killing one person and wounding four.

Ruling Party Rift Splits India Vote

NEW DELHI (AP) — Attempts to heal the rift in India's governing Congress party failed early today, hours before presidential electors were to choose a new chief of state.

In a letter to Mrs. Gandhi, Siddhavanahalli Nijalingappa, Congress party president, rejected her demand that party members be allowed to vote for whomever they please.

"Your demand for a free vote is in fact a demand for the right to vote for Mr. V. V. Giri, a candidate nominated by the Communists and Communalists," he said.

"History does not record of an instance where a prime minister after proposing a party's candidate, not only works against him but proclaims her support for the candidate of the opposition."

ENTERED RACE LATER

Mrs. Gandhi has made no official endorsement of a candidate but many of her supporters are working for the election of Giri, who resigned as vice-president last month and announced his candidacy after a party committee selected Reddy as its nominee for president.

Reddy, a former Speaker of the lower house of Parliament, is a long-time political foe of Mrs. Gandhi with strong support from right-wing elements in the party.

The outcome of the election will not be known until Wednesday when the 4,137 votes from members of 17 state legislatures and Parliament are delivered to New Delhi for counting.

A victory for Reddy would give right-wing Congress party leaders the leverage they need to oust Mrs. Gandhi, although they have denied that this is their intention.

Whoever wins the five-year term will become India's fourth president. He will succeed Dr. Zakir Husain who died in May after serving less than two years of his term.

Bennett, Berger Cross In Crucial Kootenay

By JOHN MIKA
Times Reporter

CRANBROOK — The paths of Premier Bennett and NDP leader Tom Berger criss-crossed today here in the heart of the Kootenay riding, emphasizing its pivotal position in the election campaign.

This may be a riding which decides whether British Columbia has a minority government when voters go to the polls in another 10 days.

Premier Bennett led a Sam Steele Days parade climaxing annual week-long celebrations before noon and Berger whistled in on his heels for an afternoon visit to this valley city.

Both party leaders obviously consider their visits crucial to their campaigns.

It was Bennett's third appearance in two days in a riding most feel the Socreds must take away from the incumbent NDP in order to hang on as government after Aug. 27.

Bennett spoke at Fernie in the southern end of the riding Friday night after campaigning at Kimberley in the north for Socred candidate Harry Broadhurst.

NDP HOPES

Berger also is hitting the riding three times this weekend to help 17-year veteran MLA Leo Nimsick hold the seat.

NDP hopes of forming at least a minority government could be shattered if the premier's strategy of taking this and three other NDP seats succeeds.

The other three are Nanaimo, New Westminster and Revelstoke-Slocan.

Berger will make a major speech in Fernie tonight after a whirlwind tour of Cranbrook and will be the main feature of a mass NDP picnic Sunday.

Nimsick won the riding by only 535 votes in 1966 when Cranbrook and Fernie were amalgamated by redistribution.

Pollution is the chief issue throughout the riding but the Kaiser coal strip-mining operation is the key to political arguments in Fernie.

The Socreds hope to take the Fernie polls with the contention that Berger's own words indicate he would shut down the development.

EYE NEW VOTE

The Liberals, traditionally a poor third outside the Fernie area, claim their well-known candidate, successful logger Henry Nelson, will expand the party's trdtitional base in Fernie by cutting deep into Socred votes and taking the cream of the 4,600 names added by enumeration to the voters list which now stands at about 17,000.

Campbell Safe in Comox . . . But Barely

COOKIE CHOWN

By JIM HUME
Times Reporter

COURTENAY — Comox looks like a safe seat for Minister of Municipal Affairs Dan Campbell.

But only just.

It's true that he's held the Courtenay-Campbell River riding since 1956 — but never by a large enough margin to permit him to relax in election campaigns.

And it's also true that he would never have made it that first time, 13 years ago, had not Bill Moore, then a stalwart in the CCF and MLA for the area, resigned his seat to clear the way for change.

Courtenay and Campbell River were always socialist strongholds.

They still are. But the people are also realists and they say Dan Campbell has done a good job for his constituents.

Since 1956 they've voted for the man, and the probability is that they'll vote for the man again Aug. 27.

Perky "Instant Dan" has three things going for him this time around. His record, a weak NDP candidate providing his main opposition, and a delightfully refreshing, 33-year-old but relatively unknown brunette providing a shaky outlet for the Liberal vote.

If the opposition was all he had to face, Campbell would make it in a breeze. But it isn't.

Since 1966, when Campbell slid home 1,147 votes ahead of the NDP, close to 8,000 names have been added to the riding voter's list.

Who those people are and what their politics are none of the three parties seeking the seat know. They admit that. And they all know that 8,000 uncommitted votes is more than enough to swing a Comox election.

In 1966 there were 16,950 voters on the list. This year there are 24,578 with the bulk of the new voters living either in the Courtenay-Comox area or near Campbell River.

In 1966 with around 10,111 votes cast Campbell's majority was comfortable but not unassailable. The Liberals, running an unknown late starter in that one, pulled 1,200 votes.

This year with Shanghai-born Henrietta "Cookie" Chown flashing her sparkling smile and displaying her sharp mind they expect to do better.

But at whose expense?

Social Credit supporters say Cookie — she prefers her nickname to Henrietta— will reduce the NDP vote. The NDP say she'll trim the Campbell vote.

And Cookie's campaign manager, husband Bob, says he doesn't care where the votes come from "as long as we do better than ever before."

He won't admit that Campbell will make it back to Victoria later this month. Neither will he admit that for all her charm and intelligence his wife doesn't stand a chance against an established cabinet minister and the NDP juggernaut.

The socialist machine, as in several centres on the Island, is being masterminded by an out-of-town expert. The lone committee worker in standard bearer Harry Harris' headquarters

Major Indexes In Erratic Trend

By STEPHEN ZARNETT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The Canadian stock markets held firm ground despite a barrage of world financail news this week. But the major indexes moved erratically.

The markets began the week with a fractional loss, then inched their way up while awaiting world reaction to the devaluation of the franc by the French and news that the British pound was under pressure.

In late-week trading, they posted sizeable gains following an announcement by Prime Minister Trudeau that the federal government was curbing its spending to fight inflation.

Some analysts say his announcement had only a mild effect on the markets since the planned reductions were no more than had been anticipated.

But the rally following his speech, combined with the remarkably-stable reaction to the franc devaluation, may have shown investors the internal strength of the market and lured some back into a buy-and-selling mood.

Many investors are reported staying on the sidelines observing—unsure of their course of action. The are hoping the markets have found their lower-ceiling point and are beginning a general uptrend.

Observers say that despite the light volume throughout the week, there are indications the market may move sideways or up on a short-term basis. But the long-range forecast is for a general downtrend.

After the French announcement last Friday, the gold index soared more than 29 points in active trading, but sagged more than nine Monday as investors liquidated most of their gold issues following favorable reaction to devaluation by world markets.

However, by mid-week the British pound came under heavy pressure and the gold rush resumed, with the gold index rising more than nine points following an announcement from Britain that the balance-of-payments trade figures for July showed a deficit, and talk of a pound devaluation was at its height.

Meanwhile, western oils gained strength by mid-week and caught fire in late-week trading.

NEW $2 MILLION PLANT PLANNED BY RAYONIER

VANCOUVER (CP)—Rayonier Canada B.C. Ltd. today announced it will build a new $2,000,000 woodroom at its Woodfibre Pulp Division plant, 30 miles north of here.

G. S. J. Bowell, company president, said the new plant will incorporate new concepts of design and equipment to use smallwood, or small salvage logs, which were formerly left in the woods.

The company said the new plant will add 21 employees, and is designed to produce 50,000,000 board feet of lumber and 100,000 units of chips per year.

Declines Ahead On Wall Street

NEW YORK (AP) — A late-blooming rally helped the stock market reverse an early decline and cut its losses this week, but it did not provide enough of a boost to prevent declines from finishing ahead of advances and the popular averages closing mixed.

Of 1,705 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange, 851 declined and 719 advanced, compared with 698 declines and 866 advances the previous week. There were 25 new highs for the year and 234 new lows, compared whith 20 new highs an 190 new lows the week before.

The Dow Jones industrial average lost 3.58 on the week to close at 820.88. The week before it was off 2.13. The Associated Press 60-stock average, which dipped 1.8 the week before, closed this week off 2.8 at 289.4.

However, Standard and Poor's 500-stock index gained .06 to 94.00, and the New York Stock Exchange index of some 1,200 common stocks was up .08 at 51.98. They had risen .47 and .28 respectively the previous week.

The market's weakness in its early sessions was partially attributed by analysts to some concern over what effect, if any, the devaluation of the French franc might have on other currencies, such as the British pound. But they said they felt the market took the news with "relative calm."

Argus Research Corp. notes that the devaluation — which was announced after the market closed Aug. 8 — "appears to have been brilliantly timed and carefully-gauged to minimize disruption of the world monetary system."

Turnover for the week on the Big Board came to 44,384,690 shares, compared with 48,971,330 shares the previous week and was the lowest since 41,036,990 shares changed hands in the week ended July 25.

The five most-active stocks on the Big Board during the week were Roan Selection Trust, off 2⅝ at 4; Natomas, up 15 at 96; Benguet, up ⅛ at 22¼; Texaco new, up ⅝ at 33⅝; and Reading and Bates, up 3⅛.

Signs of Cool-Off in U.S. Economy

By HOBART ROWEN

WASHINGTON (WP)—Two of the government's chief inflation fighters reported signs this week that the overheated U.S. economy is beginning to cool off, and a series of new federal statistims tended to confirm their reports.

Treasury secretary David M. Kennedy, in a dedication speech at the Philadelphia mint, said "there are indications that these policies (of fiscal and monetary restraint) are beginning to pay dividends."

But Kennedy warned that the anti-inflation program could be vitiated by the tax-reducing features of the House tax reform bill which "as it now stands may go too far in reducing needed revenues."

Coincidentally, Federal Reserve chairman William McC. Martin was telling a group of securities analysts in Atlanta, Ga., that there is not "less inflation momentum in the economy than there was three months ago."

Martin was reported to have said "there has recently been steady progress" in the fight against inflation. Martin had no prepared text, while Kennedy's speech was released here.

SLOWDOWN IN LOANS

Federal reserve officials here could not add to Martin's summary assessment. But in a quarterly report this week to the Joint Economic Committee, Martin cited a reduction in the growth rate of business loans in the second quarter, especially in the real estate area.

Secretary Kennedy took pains not to suggest that the battle against inflation was yet won. He cited, in fact, the 6½ per cent annual rate in the consumer price index in the first half of the year, and warned that this "intolerable inflation" could not be allowed to go on.

He promised that the government would continue to hold "a tight rein on federal spending in the immediate future, and a suitable degree of monetary restraint."

The tax bill, Kennedy said, does not go far enough in limiting tax preference for some millionaires. But on balance, he said, he was worried about the proposal's tax-reducing features.

Treasury officials are at work at calculating exactly the net revenue loss of the bill as it goes to the Senate. A staff analysis is expected to show that after the first full year, individual taxes would be reduced by $7.3 billion, while corporate taxes would be increased by $5 billion, unless the House bill is changed.

Kennedy's speech was the strongest indication so far that the administration would make an effort to get modifications in the Senate which would both extend the tax "take" of reform measures, to assure that no one would escape taxation, as well as to reduce tax concession, presumably in the middle-income levels.

- Corporate profits after taxes slipped in the second quarter to an annual rate of $51.6 billion from $52.2 billion in the first quarter. It wasn't a big drop — but the first quarterly slippage in a year.
- Revised gross national product figures showed that there was almost no real growth in the economy. A $16.1 billion increase to an annual rate of $924.8 billion (an all-time record) represented a boost of 1¾ per cent over the first quarter, of which inflation accounted for 1¼ per cent, leaving the physical, or real growth in output at only ½ of 1 per cent.
- Personal incomer rose by another $6 billion in July to an annual rate of $752.3 billion, matching the revised June advance. But $2.5 billion was due to the third and final stage of the federal pay raise enacted in December, 1967. In the private sector, wages and salaries rose by a rate of $2 billion, only about half of the June advance.

Bank Assets Disclosed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Royal Bank of Canada had total assets of $9,699,823,000 June 30, compared with the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce's $9,239,005,000, the official Canada Gazette has reported.

Total assets of the other seven chartered banks were: Bank of Montreal $7,776,455,000; Bank of Nova Scotia $5,761,471,000; Toronto Dominion Bank $4,906,927,000; Banque Canadienne Nationale $1,604,293,000; Banque Provinciale du Canada $800,284,000; Mercantile Bank of Canada $197,296,000; and Bank of British Columbia $54,729,000.

Merger Details

VANCOUVER (CP) — A $1,680,000 merger transaction between Alcove Holdings Ltd. and Great Pacific Industries has been completed, the companies announced Friday.

Marcel Prefontaine, president of Alcove Holdings, and James D. Kadlec, chief executive officer of Great Pacific, said in a joint statement the transaction involved sale of all Alcove shares for 140,000 common shares of Great Pacific.

TUNING UP his 354-cubic-inch, fuel-injected Hemi for a blistering run down the Van Isle Dragways at Mill Bay is driver Don Christensen, centre, of the Roadsters Car Club of Victoria and his pit crew. He and a fast-growing, fast-moving crowd of dragsters will gather Sunday for a big meet at Mill Bay.

These Screeching Hotrodders Run the Straight and Narrow

By ED GOULD

"Stupid hotrodder. There oughta be a law against things like that," the old man mutters.

The guy in the jazzed-up jalopy next to you peals away in a cloud of burned rubber and exhaust and you do a slow burn in your family car.

They Frown On It

There is a law against "things like that" (five demerits against your licence for squealing your tires on Vancouver Island) and there's a place where dragsters and hotrodders can go "to do that."

"The trouble is that type of individual never comes to a drag strip, and even if he did his car probably wouldn't pass a safety test," says Rick Barry, an official at Van Isle Dragways at Mill Bay.

"We know we are in the back of peoples' minds whenever a driver squeals away from a light," Barry said. "But our club — and others like it across North America — frowns on that sort of thing.

"Those guys give the whole sport of drag racing a bad name."

Girls Help Out

The Van Isle club consists of about 20 young men in jobs ranging from policeman to plumber, ironworker to sales representative. Now in its third year, it's a private, non-profit organization and sanctioned by the North American Hot Rod Association.

Its forerunner on the Island was the San Cobble strip on the old Bamberton Cement Co. road which was run by the Quarter-Milers Club of Victoria.

About 15 women, mainly wives and girl friends, also take part by running the clocks, keeping the records and making the scene a little less ruggedly male than it would otherwise be.

Anybody Can Join

Although there are no powder-puff races for the ladies, there is no discrimination against them competing in regular drags.

As a matter of fact, anybody, driving any kind of car, from Volkswagen to Mustang, can pay a $2 entrance fee (same price as a spectator) and get in the drag racing business. Prizes include a total of $280 cash plus individual trophies and contingent awards presented by sponsors and interested businessmen.

The only provision is that the car pass a rigid safety check. A 60-page rule book lays down regulations that would make more heads than wheels spin.

'Junk Piles'

"Most of the cars that race here are meticulously clean," Barry said. "The guys who drive them are proud of their vehicles and I'll bet the undersides of some of them are cleaner than the insides of most family cars."

Barry said it was the street racer who complains of a lack of time to race on a track when the real reason is their "junk piles" wouldn't pass safety inspection.

● Stock eliminator: this includes the majority of factory-produced, street-driven cars.

● Competition eliminator: strictly a dragster with almost everything altered.

Lunatic Fringe

Barry, 24, is a salesman for CKAY Radio in Duncan. Three years with the club, he is a non-dragster who operates the starting lights.

To the average reader — that is, someone who has never been near a drag strip — it would appear to be a sort of Mr. Clean's version of where the action isn't. Don't bet on it.

To gain that distinction, drag racing features lots of near spills, smoke, noise and crowd excitement. Just what you'd expect where men in highly-tuned automobiles (and motorbikes) meet fender to fender over a chunk of fast-asphalt.

"There's an element of danger that always draws some of the lunatic fringe," Barry admits, "but an ambulance crew is always standing by and drag racing is still not as dangerous as the roundy-rounds."

For men like Barry and Lanyon, who don't race and get paid nothing except a free entrance, what is the incentive to spend most of their weekends helping other guys drag?

"It's a hobby," Barry said. "And not much different from belonging to any service club in the respect that you are doing something for the community.

"Dragster clubs contribute something by helping young drivers take a positive attitude toward good driving and safety. And we like to think we are helping keep the dragsters off the street.

Quebec Gagne Tout!

By STEVE HUME

Quebec's gallant Valleyfied team, playing with precision and a dugout-full of elan, captured its sixth Canadian Little League baseball championship this morning in a sudden-death playoff at Hampton Park.

Winning Pitcher Pierre Rochefort

Storming back from a first-game loss in the national tournament, Quebec forced an extra game with Vancouver Collingwood Friday night, then today dispatched the B.C. champions 4-1 before 2,000 fans.

Valleyfield scored all its runs during a five-hit burst in the top of the fourth inning, then killed Vancouver's attempted rallies with superb fielding.

When the first base upmire signalled the final out on a play by right fielder Pierre LaLonde, the Quebec team made a screaming victory circuit of the field, waving their red caps and carefully tagging home plate on the way back to their dugout.

BACKED BY FANS

They lined up on the first baseline to a roar of applause from the fans, who gradually swung behind the French-speaking youngsters during the seven game series.

The team had no eyes for Miss Teen-age Canada, who presented individual pins to the winning players. They had eyes only for the blue and white pennant that symbolizes Canadian baseball supremacy for players 12 years old and under.

Next stop for Valleyfield is Williamsport, Pa., where they clash with Taiwan, champions of the Pacific and Orient region, in a sudden-death opener for the Little League World Series.

STAR PITCHER

Star pitcher Pierre Rochefort was not as spectacular as he had been in earlier games, striking out only three Vancouver batters and walking four, but back-up play by his infielders was outstanding.

Collingwood shortstop Randy Ackerman tagged him for a driving double to the centre field fence, and Rochefort walked the next batter.

When Vancouver pitcher Harold Nassey connected for a line drive to centre field it looked like a certain two runs. But Quebec's centre fielder Robert Gauthier made a brilliant shoe-string catch on the dead run and fired to first base for a double play.

Then in the top of the fourth a strategic use of the bunt brought home Quebec's winning runs.

After second baseman Daniel Maheu drove a single over second to start the Valleyfield rally, Pierre LaLonde beat out a bunt to the mound, and Daniel Santerre used another sacrifice bunt to advance the runners to second and third.

Gauthier was the next batter and he smacked a liner to centre field to score a third run, while the fourth came from a sacrifice bunt by Quebec's plucky catcher John Stewart.

ABORTIVE RALLY

In the bottom of the fifth, Quebec snuffed out the first of Vancouver's abortive rallies when Gauthier took Ackerman's fly ball to centre field and picked off Ricky Price trying to make it back to first.

Rochefort got into trouble again in the bottom of the sixth and once again his infielders bailed him out to end a dangerous Vancouver rally.

With two Vancouver runners on base and none out things looked serious, but Nassey fouled a high fly back into the screens and Stewart charged the wire for a spectacular catch.

BASES LOADED

The Quebec pitcher promptly got back into trouble when he walked in a run, left the bases loaded and still only had one out. Once again his infielders put the next two batters out, one on a pop fly, the other on a line drive to right field that was snagged by LaLonde and fired to first.

Quebec manager Michel Rochefort, who has seen Valleyfield teams take eight Quebec-Maritimes titles and six national crowns, said his team is one of the best ever.

"They eat baseball, they sleep baseball, they live baseball," he said.

"Since June 14 they have pratised five hours a day, seven days a week. If anyone deserved to win this tournament, they did."

Valleyfield .... 000 400—4 7 0
Vancouver .... 000 001—1 5 1

Applications Flood Uvic At Deadline

Applications to the University of Victoria came to a hectic close Friday, leaving admission staff between 400 and 500 applications still to be processed.

But high school students whose academic average was between 50 and 60 per cent won't know until registration week, which begins Sept. 8, whether they have been accepted.

"I'm going to sit down next week and analyse the over-all situation as regards first-year admission," Ronald Jeffels, dean of admissions, said today.

"We won't really know where we stand until the middle of next week."

COLLEGE PRIORITY

One factor affecting admission of low average students could be the number of grade 13 applicants who come here from Vancouver, Jeffels said.

He said some of the last-minute applications could come from some of 250 students enrolled in grade 13 summer courses at Vancouver City College.

Students who have taken up to three grade 13 courses may enter first-year university, and have priority over high school applicants whose average is below 60 per cent.

Results of exams written by the Vancouver City College students will not be known until the end of this month.

The squeeze on first-year applicants began at the end of June when Uvic announced that due to an inadequate provincial government operating grant enrolment restrictions would be imposed.

Total enrolment this fall will be limited to 5,000 students, including 2,000 freshmen.

A priority system was set up, giving precedence to freshmen with a high school graduation average of C-plus—67 per cent — or better.

The priorities gave rise to fears that students who had been recommended by high schools for university entrance on the basis of a C average — 60 per cent — would not be admitted.

But the university announced earlier this week that notices of admission have been sent to applicants in the first five priorities, including C average students.

In past years the university accepted anyone who graduated from high school with a 50 per cent average.

View Royal Vote Slated On Sewerage

Ratepayers in View Royal will be asked this December to vote on a $1,008,122 sewerage project which would have the unorganized area ready to connect with the Macaulay Point trunk and outfall when it is built.

Individual cost to home-owners for trunks and laterals would be $114 a year plus a levy of $35 towards the cost of regional benefits, ratepayers association president Len Stephenson said Friday.

"We are trying to work out a scheme of payments which would be less burdensome to the present taxpayers and would put some of the cost on future residents. That would lower the figures I have given," he said.

Present population of View Royal is 3,566 and the project is planned for an expected 10,000 residents by 1994.

ADVANCE POLLS START THURSDAY

Advance polls for the Aug. 27 provincial election will be open next Thursday, Friday and Saturday for local constituencies.

The locations are:

First United Church Fellowship Hall, 930 North Park, Victoria;

Anglican Church Hall, 4th Street, Sidney;

Port Renfrew Community Hall.

The advance polls will be open between 1 p.m. and 9 p.m. on the three days. Voters who are unable to attend an advance poll in their own constituency may go to any other advance poll in British Columbia.

FIRE HAZARD COOLS OFF

Recent cool weather has dropped the fire hazard rating for lower Vancouver Island into the low-to-moderate range.

Only nine minor fires were burning at the latest report for the Vancouver Fire District, which includes Vancouver Island and the lower mainland.

Condominium First Opens Here Monday

The first condominium housing project in Greater Victoria will be officially opened Monday at 6 p.m.

Attending the opening ceremony will be Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis and Ald. Edith Gunning, chairman of the municipal housing committee.

The private project is at 1701 McKenzie Avenue. Condominium is the name applied to ownership of housing units, arranged vertically or horizontally, which are not on individual single-family house lots.

There will be 18 units in three groups of six. The first six are almost finished and all will be completed by Oct. 1, said a spokesman.

The units have three bedrooms and contain 1,200 square feet. They will sell for $21,950, or $3,300 down and monthly payments on two mortgages of $164.

Another condominium project is under construction on North Dairy Road in Victoria city.

Ald. Gunning said the project is the first one to use the provincial Strata Titles Act in Saanich. The price included appliances, drapes, fencing and landscaping.

There was a great need for family accommodation and developments such as these townhouses would enable more families to "own an attractive and quality home."

She hoped there will be more townhouses — provided they are on this scale and in various styles and thoughtfully designed.

Ask the Times

Q. Would you advise how many common shares have been issued by the B.C. Telephone Company? H. H. S.

A. According to the 1969 Financial Post Survey of Industrials, 2,589,300 ordinary shares have been issued.

Arthur Mayse . . .

NOBODY LIKES PAYING taxes, but at least we in Saanich have a lovely municipall hall in which to part from our pelf. The flowers that grace its well-kept approaches are bright as a taxpayer's blood. The little fish that swim in the artificial stream glimmer like pirate gold, and the fine modern hall is a monument to the soaring mill-rate.

If you detect a note of grimness here, it is because my love and I made the annual pilgrimage on Friday, and came away with a gaping hole in our bank account.

However, the pain was soothed by the very pleasant and sympathetic manner of the Saanich tax department people. They may not manage to send the occasional grumbler away smiling, but they are long on patience and diplomacy.

We found no great crush of taxpayers, a circumstance that Deputy Collector Kenneth Middleton views with mild concern. It could mean that Monday, the final day for payment, may bring a rush to the wickets.

★

Mr. Middleton has a message for Saanichites who pony up by mail. The payment mailed on Sunday, he warns, may not be delivered on the right side of the deadline.

Much better to get tax forms and cheque in the mail before 8 p.m. this evening, or failing that, deliver both on Monday.

Penalties for late payment are set by the province, not by the municipalities. They commence with a two per cent levy next Tuesday, and climb by stages to a grisly 10 per cent effective November 19.

If this year follows the usual pattern, 93 to 95 percent of Saanich property owners will have rendered unto Caeser when the hall closes at 5 p.m. Monday.

I asked Mr. Middleton if any taxpayer had ever made the symbolic gesture of writing his cheque on the shirt off his back.

This hasn't happened yet, but after enquiring of the department's older hands, the deputy collector learned that back in the days of the wooden hall on West Saanich Road, two improvised cheques were taken in.

One was written on the back of a laundry slip, and a gored citizen expressed his displeasure by making the other out on toilet tissue.

IF YOU HAPPEN TO BE A fishing visitor come from inland parts, make a point of checking up on B.C. salt water angling regulations. Failure to do so could prove costly.

Witness the case of a visitor from Calgary who took his son fishing in Saanich Inlet one day this week.

They caught a nice little fish, and chugged along in hopes of hooking a bigger one. Presently a federal fisheries patrol boat hailed and eased alongside. Turned out their catch was a grilse, or juvenile salmon, that measured a mere 11 inches. Minimum size limit is a foot.

The guy's fish and tackle were confiscated. What hurt worse was the brisk dressing-down which he asserts was administered in front of his kids.

My sympathies are divided here. It's rough to receive a verbal working-over, especially under those conditions, and I think a polite warning would have been enough.

However, the regulations are prominently posted at most boat liveries, and a checkup before the party shoved off would have saved the unpleasant encounter.

IRISH DEMONSTRATORS rip apart Union Jack torn from the British Embassy in Dublin. Crowd gathered in the Irish Republic Belfast capital as British soldiers moved in to quell rioting between Catholics and Protestants. (AP Wirephoto)

Roving Mobs Hit Belfast

BELFAST (CP)—Protestant mobs armed with fire bombs burned and looted Roman Catholic bars today in scattered areas of Belfast unprotected by British troops. But soldiers separated the warring factions in the riot-torn capital's major trouble spots.

Occasional sniper fire was heard this morning in the predominantly Roman Catholic Falls Road area, but by noon public transportation was reported operating normally and housewives were going to market.

Spurts of sniper and machine-gun fire had rattled through the capital after dawn and gangs roamed glass-strewn streets looting whatever remained in the gutted stores after the second night of vicious street fighting.

Additional British troops were being flown in to strengthen an estimated 1,600 already here as the violence continued. Police said three persons were killed and 42 wounded in the fourth straight night of sectarian battles in Northern Irish cities.

Since Tuesday, eight persons have been killed and more than 700 injured in the state's worst civil disorders since the Irish Civil War of 1920-1922.

RAID R.C. BARS

Police said Protestant gangs attacked Roman Catholic-owned bars in three sections of Belfast. They gave the owners 15 minutes to get out, then threw milk bottles filled with gasoline, detergent and sugar inside the buildings. The mixture burns like napalm.

Off to Ulster Is Cry of IRA

By DEREK MARLOWE
The Washington Post

DUBLIN — Eire's 2,000-strong outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA) openly called Friday night for volunteers, arms, transport and money in Dublin to cross the border into Northern Ireland and fight at the side of Catholics behind the barricades.

The call followed a two-hour meeting of the 12 commandants of the organization's executive committee in Dublin.

●

Later Friday night in the heart of Dublin, outside the historic post office in O'Connell Street where 50 years ago men of the 1916 uprising fought British troops, IRA men reaffirmed their appeal to a mass meeting called by Sinn Fein, the organization's political arm.

The IRA move followed an earlier decision by Prime Minister Jack Lynch, to mobolize 2,000 first line reserves of the Eire army.

There is some anxiety about the government's deployment of troops to the border and the setting up of field hospitals for Catholics injured in the rioting in Ulster who may now want to get hospital treatment there for fear of alleged retaliation by the Protestant-dominated police, the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

●

Some observers here believe the troops facing the border—especially at Londonderry—have done nothing except inflame Protestant feeling and encourage further violence from Catholics on the other side, who were still hurling gasoline bombs in Belfast Friday night.

Informed sources here say Prime Minister Lynch, although as anxious as most Irishmen in the republic to see their country reunited, has been pressured into making his demands by the hard line hawks in his cabinet.

These ministers, enough to cause a serious split, see the present situation as the beginning of Eire's real chance to end the "unfinished business" of 1916.

QUEBEC WINS CHAMPIONSHIP

Valleyfield's Little Leaguers took the Canadian championship for Quebec today with a 4-1 victory over British Columbia's Vancouver Collingwood team.

The team came on strong in the top of the fourth in Saanich's Hampton Park (see story Page 21) to earn a ticket to Williamsport, Pa., and the Little League World Series Aug. 23.

Pesticide Use Cut By Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reacting to public pressure, the United States agriculture department announced Friday a substantial curtailment in government use of such long-lived pesticides as DDT, dieldrin and heptachlor.

The department announced that from now on it will use less-persistent chemicals such as chlordane wherever possible in federal-state insect-control programs.

A department spokesman said widespread public concern over pesticide use prompted the department to suspend control program operations so they could be studied more fully.

Hurricane Flags Fly in Florida

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane warning flags flew in north western Florida today as Camille, the worst storm to threaten that Gulf of Mexico coastal area in more than half a century roared in with winds of 115 miles an hour.

Pushing ahead tides of five to 10 feet, Camille was described by forecasters as the most dangerous storm to head for that white sandy coast since a devastating blow in 1915, in an era when hurricanes had no names.

Hurricane force winds howled over an 80-mile-wide area around the hurricane's eye, gales lashed a 300-mile-wide expanse, and conditions favored further increase in intensity, forecasters said.

Gale warnings were raised at noon EDT from Pensacola, Fla., to Cedar Key, well down on the Florida peninsula.

As Camille spun toward a landfall, tropical storm Debbie grew to hurricane force in the Atlantic 1,200 miles east-southeast of San Juan, Puerto Rico. Debbie's winds were up to 80 miles an hour and increasing.

The north-northwest track Camille had followed since she hit western Cuba with a fierce one-two punch of wind and rain earlier had aimed her toward a point where the coasts of Florida, Alabama and Mississippi converge on the Gulf of Mexico shore.

Slowly rebuilding fury lost in the overnight crossing of Cuba, Camille chased small craft into port the length of the Florida west coast and all the way around the Gulf to Grand Isle, La.

Camille's top winds were knocked down from 115 to 100 miles an hour as she lashed across the rich tobacco croplands of western Cuba, sending hundreds of persons fleeing to high ground in that flood-vulnerable area.

Havana radio was silent today on the damage wrought by the storm as rains up to 10 inches sent floodwaters pouring down the mountainsides.

Biafrans Hit Depot

LAGOS (AP) — Federal authorities said today a Biafran plane slipped through Nigerian defences in the mid-western province and shot up a Gulf oil terminal, killing one person and wounding four.

Firebombs Found In Montreal Store

MONTREAL (CP) — Police early today reported the discovery of four incendiary devices in Eaton's downtown department store and the explosion of a bomb at the headquarters of the Confederation of National Trade Unions.

The incendiary devices, made of cloth soaked in a chemical, were found hidden in merchandise on two floors of the store during a Friday-night search.

Police said a store security guard suffered minor facial burns and smoke inhalation when one of the objects ignited.

A police spokesman said the bombs were designed to burst into flame when the chemical treatment evaporated or when water was poured onto them.

The security guard was injured when he immersed one of the objects in water after finding it hidden between the cushions of a sofa.

The spokesman said other such devices were found hidden in the pocket of coats on display racks.

Meanwhile, an explosive device went off at St. Denis St. headquarters of the CNTU, the Quebec-based labor federation.

There were no injuries.

Ruling Party Rift Splits India Vote

NEW DELHI (AP) — Attempts to heal the rift in India's governing Congress party failed early today, hours before presidential electors were to choose a new chief of state.

The president of the party accused Prime Minister Indira Gandhi of siding with the Communists to support independent candidate V. V. Giri against the official party nominee, Sanjiva Reddy.

In a letter to Mrs. Gandhi, Siddhavanahalli Nijalingappa, Congress party president, rejected her demand that party members be allowed to vote for whomever they please.

"Your demand for a free vote is in fact a demand for the right to vote for Mr. V. V. Giri, a candidate nominated by the Communists and Communalists," he said.

"History does not record of an instance where a prime minister after proposing a party's candidate, not only works against him but proclaims her support for the candidate of the opposition."

ENTERED RACE LATER

Mrs. Gandhi has made no official endorsement of a candidate but many of her supporters are working for the election of Giri, who resigned as vice-president last month and announced his candidacy after a party committee selected Reddy as its nominee for president.

Reddy, a former Speaker of the lower house of Parliament, is a long-time political foe of Mrs. Gandhi with strong support from right-wing elements in the party.

The outcome of the election will not be known until Wednesday when the 4,137 votes from members of 17 state legislatures and Parliament are delivered to New Delhi for counting.

A victory for Reddy would give right-wing Congress party leaders the leverage they need to oust Mrs. Gandhi, although they have denied that this is their intention.

Whoever wins the five-year term will become India's fourth president. He will succeed Dr. Zakir Husain who died in May after serving less than two years of his term.

Wilson Hurries Home

LONDON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Wilson will cut short his vacation and fly to London Monday for crisis talks with Northern Ireland's Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark.

Edmonton Strike

EDMONTON (CP) — Buses were idle and drivers manned picket lines for the second day today of the Alberta capital's first transportation strike in 50 years. Union and city officials met briefly late Friday but there were no discussions on a contract dispute which has left about 100,000 daily bus passengers to find alternate means of transportation in the metropolitan centre of 440,000 persons, seventh largest in Canada.

Bennett, Berger Cross In Crucial Kootenay

By JOHN MIKA
Times Reporter

CRANBROOK — The paths of Premier Bennett and NDP leader Tom Berger crisscrossed today here in the heart of the Kootenay riding, emphasizing its pivotal position in the election campaign.

This may be a riding which decides whether British Columbia has a minority government when voters go to the polls in another 10 days.

Premier Bennett led a Sam Steele Days parade climaxing annual week-long celebrations before noon and Berger whistled in on his heels for an afternoon visit to this valley city.

Both party leaders obviously consider their visits crucial to their campaigns.

It was Bennett's third appearance in two days in a riding most feel the Socreds must take away from the incumbent NDP in order to hang on as government after Aug. 27.

Bennett spoke at Fernie in the southern end of the riding Friday night after campaigning at Kimberley in the north for Socred candidate Harry Broadhurst.

NDP HOPES

Berger also is hitting the riding three times this weekend to help 17-year veteran MLA Leo Nimsick hold the seat.

NDP hopes of forming at least a minority government could be shattered if the premier's strategy of taking this and three other NDP seats succeeds.

The other three are Nanaimo, New Westminster and Revelstoke-Slocan.

Berger will make a major speech in Fernie tonight after a whirlwind tour of Cranbrook and will be the main feature of a mass NDP picnic Sunday.

Nimsick won the riding by only 535 votes in 1966 when Cranbrook and Fernie were amalgamated by redistribution.

Pollution is the chief issue throughout the riding but the Kaiser coal strip-mining operation is the key to political arguments in Fernie.

The Socreds hope to take the Fernie polls with the contention that Berger's own words indicate he would shut down the development.

EYE NEW VOTE

The Liberals, traditionally a poor third outside the Fernie area, claim their well-known candidate, successful logger Henry Nelson, will expand the party's trdtitional base in Fernie by cutting deep into Socred votes and taking the cream of the 4,600 names added by enumeration to the voters list which now stands at about 17,000.

Campbell Safe in Comox...But Barely

COOKIE CHOWN

By JIM HUME
Times Reporter

COURTENAY — Comox looks like a safe seat for Minister of Municipal Affairs Dan Campbell.

But only just.

It's true that he's held the Courtenay-Campbell River riding since 1956 — but never by a large enough margin to permit him to relax in election campaigns.

And it's also true that he would never have made it that first time, 13 years ago, had not Bill Moore, then a stalwart in the CCF and MLA for the area, resigned his seat to clear the way for change.

Courtenay and Campbell River were always socialist strongholds.

They still are. But the people are also realists and they say Dan Campbell has done a good job for his constituents.

Since 1956 they've voted for the man, and the probability is that they'll vote for the man again Aug. 27.

Perky "Instant Dan" has three things going for him this time around. His record, a weak NDP candidate providing his main opposition, and a delightfully refreshing, 33-year-old but relatively unknown brunette providing a shaky outlet for the Liberal vote.

If the opposition was all he had to face, Campbell would make it in a breeze. But it isn't.

Since 1966, when Campbell slid home 1,147 votes ahead of the NDP, close to 8,000 names have been added to the riding voter's list.

Who those people are and what their politics are none of the three parties seeking the seat know. They admit that. And they all know that 8,000 uncommitted votes is more than enough to swing a Comox election.

In 1966 there were 16,950 voters on the list. This year there are 24,578 with the bulk of the new voters living either in the Courtenay-Comox area or near Campbell River.

In 1966 with around 10,111 votes cast Campbell's majority was comfortable but not unassailable. The Liberals, running an unknown late starter in that one, pulled 1,200 votes.

This year with Shanghai-born Henrietta "Cookie" Chown flashing her sparkling smile and displaying her sharp mind they expect to do better.

But at whose expense?

Social Credit supporters say Cookie — she prefers her nickname to Henrietta— will reduce the NDP vote. The NDP say she'll trim the Campbell vote.

And Cookie's campaign manager, husband Bob, says he doesn't care where the votes come from "as long as we do better than ever before."

He won't admit that Campbell will make it back to Victoria later this month. Neither will he admit that for all her charm and intelligence his wife doesn't stand a chance against an established cabinet minister and the NDP juggernaut.

The socialist machine, as in several centres on the Island, is being masterminded by an out-of-town expert. The lone committee worker in standard bearer Harry Harris' headquarters

PRESCRIPTION FOR PEACE OF MIND

A well-treed waterfront property with beautiful view, on the sunny side of COWICHAN LAKE with easy access from black-top road with power at the backdoor. This is the first offering of this beautiful property so come up this week-end for the first selection. These are large lots (some have more than 100 ft. lake frontage), are heavily treed with towering fir, balsam, hemlock and arbutus, priced from $5,500 to $8,000 with terms of 1/3 down and the balance over 5 years. Our recreation minister referred to COWICHAN LAKE as the "Okanagan of the Island." Lakefront is becoming hard to find so phone BOB TURNER now at 749-3404 for the best selection. Perhaps you wish property with a cabin. I have a good selection — don't delay, Bob Turner, 749-3404.

Vancouver Archer Tied For Second

Compiling a 1,756 total after three days of the four-day target event, she leads Dorothy Lidstone of Vancouver, and Hanna Brezezinka of Poland who are tied at 1,755. In fourth place is a Russian Nonna Kozina, 1,741.

Still leading for the men is the 19-year-old champion from Mt. Pleasant, Tex., Hardy Ward, who amazed the 155 competitors from 27 nations by scoring a perfect end at 90 metres—meaning that he placed six consecutive arrows in the nine inch bullseye at 98.5 yards. Close behind Ward, whose total is 1,794, is 15-year-old John Williams of Cranesville, Pa., with 1,788.

In men's competition, the United States holds a commanding lead with 5,308 points. Denmark is second with 5,129 and Britain third with 5,038.

In the women's team competition the U.S.S.R. leads with 5,129, followed by Canada and Poland tied at 5,067. U.S. women are in fourth place with 5,026.

Prince George Grabs Opener

VERNON, (CP) — Prince George edged Vernon 20-19 in overtime Friday in the first game of a best-of-three series for the B.C. interior senior "B" lacrosse championship.

Second game will be played here tonight.
